NEW YEAR MESSAGE.

By The Editor.

IN the unfolding of God's great plan of human redemption, the coming of the Holy Ghost upon, and into, the disciples at Pentecost was a great climax of divine grace.

Preparation for this crowning event had been going on through the centuries. From the time of Adam's fall to that auspicious day in Jerusalem when the one hundred and twenty received the baptism with the Holy Ghost, with patient love, God had been working toward this grand event.

Man was created for God. It seems that in the divine nature there was, and is, something that calls for a creature like man. It may be that man is a greater creature than we have yet dreamed. "Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of thy hands. Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet."

Man is a great being with marvelous capacity for growth and development. For some reason, God wanted such a creature. He might have gotten on without him, but he chose to create him. He wanted a creature that could reciprocate his love, could appreciate his blessings, and with whom he could fellowship through the personality of his Holy Spirit.

One thing is certain! Man cannot get along without God. There is something in the nature of man that cries out for God. Go where you may, seek where you will, in vast continent or islands of the sea, wherever you find man you find him seeking after God. There are temples, altars, or some evidence of the longings of his heart to find and worship his Maker.

Pentecost was, and is, God's answer to this universal cry of the heart. The coming of the Holy Ghost with fiery baptism to cleanse out all sin, to make of our very bodies temples for his abiding place, was one of the most tremendous events in all the history of God's compassionate dealing with humanity.

The pentecostal outpouring was the restoration of God and man to abiding fellowship and union, with an endowment of power for man's co-operation with God in the redemption of sinful men. Without the baptism with the Holy Ghost the church becomes a ponderous, powerless, ecclesiasticism for the elevation of carnal, ambitious men, ruling and ruining the church in so far as the saving of the lost is concerned. With the baptism with the Holy Ghost the work of God will go forward and the lost will be saved.

Shall we who write for and read this paper strive to make the coming year a special time of gracious revival, recognizing, honoring and yielding ourselves fully to the Holy

A SONG IN THE NIGHT.
(Given to H. C. Morrison during his long, serious illness).

I cannot sing as I long to sing,
As I will sing bye and bye,
When my captive spirit breaks its bars
And ascends beyond the sky.

I cannot speak one-tenth I feel,
While trammelled with this clod,
But I will speak my heart's full praise
When I ascend to God.

I cannot rest as I long to rest,
My body, racked with pain,
But oh, I'll rest, the sweetest rest,
When Paradise I gain.

Ghost, that he may cleanse, fill, endue and use us so as to magnify the Lord Jesus Christ among men. May we become agencies used by him in the salvation of the lost. The Holy Ghost is ready. Are we willing? He is almighty. Are we wholly committed to him, ready to receive him in all of his fullness?

All Hail 1931!

We enter upon the New Year with abounding faith in the Word of God, in Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of God, mighty to save to the uttermost all who come to him trusting for redemption from sin.

We wish every reader of this paper a year of great grace and usefulness in the service of God. To serve humanity is to serve God.

Let us enter the year of 1931 with a high resolve to give ourselves entirely to Christ that he may use us in any place, and for any purpose he may choose.

This is the beginning of the FORTY-THIRD year of the history of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. How well I remember the night in Maysville, Ky., when I was assisting a brother pastor in a revival meeting, I felt the call of God to begin the publication of a religious paper. I got out of bed, lit a lamp, and sometime, I think, near two o'clock in the morning, I wrote the first editorial for this paper.

I doubt if there is any man living who founded a paper and has edited it so long as I have THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. God and his people have dealt with me graciously, for which I praise him, and thank them. We want and, believe, we can make this coming year the greatest in the history of this paper. In order to this, we shall greatly need the illumination, quickening and guidance of the Holy Ghost, and your prayers, sympathy and assistance.

We are living in perilous times, when the vast majority of people are "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Many of them have a "form of godliness, but deny the power thereof." If there ever was a time when we needed to watch and pray, that time is now.

Those of us who believe and experience the sanctifying power of the precious blood of Christ need to bestir ourselves as never before to witness, to pray, to seek after the lost, to hold meetings for the promotion of holiness and the salvation of sinners. Let us enter into the New Year determined to press the battle for the saving of the lost.

The Holiness Movement is in great need of a reviving. There are many hungry, starving souls about us everywhere, and we are under obligation to our Lord and to them to do all within our power to bring them into the fountain of cleansing. We ought to form holiness bands, wherever possible, for weekly meetings of prayer, testimony and praise, that we may be able to help others into the fulness of sanctifying grace.

Let no one who believes in and loves Jesus be idle. In his name, for his sake, and by the power of the Holy Ghost, let us all determine to make the coming year one of earnest effort to win the lost to Christ, and to lead the children of God into the fulness of sanctification of soul, and a life of holiness.

What is the Matter with the World?

No. I.

HE above is a big question. That the world is sick, there is no doubt. Who will disagnose the situation and write a healing prescription? Let us indulge in a bit of diagnosis.

FIRST—The nations of the earth are at war against God; that makes peace among the nations impossible. "Glory to God in the highest" comes before "Peace on earth, and good will among men."

We shall never have peace on earth while the peoples of the earth are in rebellion against God. The only way to have peace with God is to surrender and come into obedience to his commandments. Sad to say, we do not see any hopeful indications of such surrender and obedience.

SECOND—Have you noticed what occurred at the recent election in Germany? Some thirteen millions of votes were cast which were of a character to repudiate various treaties at the close of the World War, and since, laying heavy indemnities upon Germany. Four millions of these votes were Communistic. Nine millions of them were Facistic. Pause a moment and think of that!

There is one thing certain: The people of Germany will not pay the war debt assessed against them. You say "Germany ought to be made to pay." Very well. Who is going to make her pay? That is a job no nation or combination of nations will wish to undertake. The psychological condition of younger Germany is such today that they will go bolshevik rather than be drained with taxes for more than a half century to pay a debt made by half-crazed tyrants. They will pay for a while, but not for half a century, not the half of half a century.

"SIGNS AND SEASONS, DAYS AND YEARS."

Gen. 1:14.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

A NEW YEAR MEDITATION.

In the days of old when watchnight services could be held without coffee and cake, banquets, etc., and when the folks came together for pure worship one of the hymns that was always sung in our home church was that noble hymn of Isaac Watts:

"O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home."
And another one had the lines:
"The year rolls round and steals away
The breath that first it gave:
Whate'er we do, where'er we be
We are traveling to the grave."

As I write this article in the mission fields of Central America, another verse in the same hymn has more meaning in it than ever I thought it would have in my experience. "Dangers stand thick through all the ground
To push us to the tomb;
And fierce diseases wait around
To hurry mortals home."

But as we take a retrospect of the year past our hearts cannot but be full of gratitude for mercies and loving kindnesses, guidance and protection from the loving hand of Almighty God. Well has Dr. Alexander Maclaren said in one of his great sermons:

"The thing that lasts in the universe is a God's kindness, which continues 'from everlasting to everlasting.' What a revelation of God! Oh, dear friends, if only our hearts could open to the full acceptance of that thought, sorrow and care and anxiety, and every other form of trouble would fade away, and we should be at rest. The infinite, undying, imperishable love of God is mine. Older than the mountains, deeper than their roots, wider than the heavens, and stronger than all my sin is the love that grasps me and keeps me and will not let me go, and lavishes its tenderness upon me; it beseeches me, and pleads with me, and woos me and rebukes me, and corrects me when needed, and sent his Son to die for me."

"How are thy servants blessed, O Lord,
How sure is their defence;
Eternal wisdom is their guide—
Their help Omnipotence!"

Any one contemplating the past who cannot find in it many occasions for praise and thanksgiving evidently lacks the spirit which Paul enjoined us all to have in 1 Thess. 5:16-18:

"Rejoice evermore." Verse 16.

"Pray without ceasing." Verse 17.

"In everything give thanks, for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." Verse 18.

I remember reading in the life of William Bramwell that once when gloom settled upon him some one told him to look back in the past and recollect God's mercy and goodness and then begin to praise the Lord. He went to his room, prayed, and then began to praise the Lord and his fears and gloom all left him.

Dr. Amos R. Wells tells us that, "Oliver Wendell Holmes once forcibly compared the thankful heart to a magnet. You can take a dish of sand and scatter particles of iron all through it, and then sweep your hand through the sand in an attempt to find the iron; but you will not discover any. Then

PRAYERS AND HOPES FOR 1931.

That it might be a Revival year.
That we might have a Holiness Revival and a Revival of Holiness.
That it might be a Church-going year and that the people may hear the Gospel when they go.
That it might be a year of Spiritual Increase, not drought and decrease.
That it might be a Soul-arousing year—that preachers may be aroused to preach a full gospel and the mourners' bench brought back.
That it might be a "debt-deliverance" year to our Holiness colleges and schools and that more money will go in that direction instead of into new automobiles and other luxuries.
That it might be a Missionary Revival year in which saved and sanctified men and women will be sent to the Mission fields.
That it might be a year of Prayer—believing, importunate, mighty praying that will not cease till Heaven answers.
"Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think according to the power that worketh in us, Unto him be glory."

take a magnet and sweep it through the sand, and it will soon be covered with the bits of iron. 'So,' he said, 'the unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies; but let the thankful heart sweep through the day, and, as the magnet finds the iron, so it will find in every hour some heavenly blessings—only the iron in God's sand is gold.'

In reading the life of George Mueller, I noticed a reference to Psalm 37:23: "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord," and a notation is made thus: "And his stops also." How often we want God to order our steps but fail to ask him about our stops. Reading recently of Luther I recalled again that very providential thing which happened to him on his way back from the Diet of Worms, 1521. Luther was captured while riding through a wood and carried by devious ways to the Castle of Wartburg—there he was held captive by his friends for his own safety and it was here he began his translation of the Bible in the German language best understood by the people. The Pope raged against him and ordered his books to be burned, but in translating the Scriptures he started a fire in Germany that brought on that great conflagration known as the Reformation.

Among the American poets, William Cullen Bryant holds a high place. Singularly one of his greatest was written when he was only eighteen years of age. Singular that so solemn a subject should grip such a young man as that indicated in "Thanatopsis." The lines which are most often quoted of that great poem are these:

"So live that when thy summons comes to join

The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take

His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed

By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch

About him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

"So live"! says poetry, but Theology goes further and says: "For me to live is Christ." Phil. 1:21. When we live our life in the Christ atmosphere and spirit, when our years close and the volume of life, like a book, is shut up, death will have no terrors for us and the judgment no fears. Longfellow, in his famous poem, "Resignation," uttered a great truth in the lines:

"There is no Death! What seems so is transition;

This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call death."

As we contemplate another year we think with gratefulness of those words of Moses in Deut. 33:25: "As thy days so shall thy strength be," and I think in connection with that scripture another one found in 2 Cor. 12:19: "My grace is sufficient for thee."

"I heard it when starting the voyage of Life:
I heard it in calm days, I heard it in strife,
My grace is sufficient, My grace is enough,
When anchored in harbor, when tempests are rough.

"My grace is sufficient! I know all thy need
I know all thy labor, poor weak, bruised reed.

But lo! I will strengthen, and make thee my rod:

My grace is sufficient, for I am thy God."

As we contemplate another year of life with its responsibilities and privileges, its duties and trials and tests, its vicissitudes manifold, how blessed to be able to say with Psalm 31:15: "My times are in thy hand." If our times are in God's hand we are at his disposal and he may choose for us our places and our calls.

And as we look ahead into the weeks and months of the year ahead of us we must look Godward and Heavenward. We might cry in the apostle's language: "Who is sufficient for these things?" and have the answer come back, "Our sufficiency is of God." 2 Cor. 3:5.

"No confidence in self, for we are weak and frail,

But in the living God, who will—who must prevail;

So we can rest in Him, and know that He will be

Our Confidence and Guide, until our Lord we see.

"No confidence in self, but in the Living God,
Who gave His Son to die, and, through His precious blood,

We can look up, mid all, to Him our glorious Lord,

Who will not ever fail—of this we are assured.

"No confidence in self, our life is but a span;
We trust the Living God, of whom we say,
'He can'—

Can fill our every need and keep us by His grace,

Till in that coming Day we see our Savior's face."

Special Note.

When we were in Shanghai one of the most devoted missionaries we met there was Miss Cornelia Morgan, of Yunnan, China, who has spent over twenty-five years in that country. She had a most remarkable case of healing and sanctifying power at Bethel, Shanghai, under the labors of Dr. Mary Stone and Miss Jennie Hughes. She came to Shanghai blind in both eyes. She went back to Yunnan with sight restored in one of her eyes, and with a new glowing experience of sanctifying grace, and took with her five other Chinese workers. Miss Morgan and her chief assistant, Miss Jean Zia, an educated Chinese young woman who speaks English, is now in America. Let me commend them to the churches and conventions. They have a wonderful story. Address Miss C. Morgan, 534 S. Jefferson Ave., Springfield, Mo.

CHAPTER X.

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES.

HAVING devoted so much space to Deacon Upright's family affairs, it is now time that we turn our attention to others who are more or less closely connected with the history we are trying to write.

The reader will remember that we gave but brief mention of the religious awakening which followed the smallpox scourge in the city of Glenview. The incidents recorded in connection with the disappearance of Jessie Upright from her home seemed of sufficient importance to justify the attention we have given them, even if we had to digress somewhat from the main subject before us.

The interest awakened in the subject of religion was so widespread and deep that the largest auditorium in the city became too small to accommodate the eager multitude which night after night came thronging together to hear the stirring addresses and moving appeals which characterized the services.

In this emergency an appeal was made for funds to build a tabernacle for use in the evenings, that religious interest might center in one place at that time. With a promptness and liberality that showed how the hearts of the people were stirred, responses came from every quarter and the building was begun at once—the site, in a central location, having been donated by one of the wealthiest men in the city whose only child—a daughter—had been brought to Christ at the beginning of the meetings. As if by magic the building grew into a monster in size and strength, with every appliance for lighting, heating, and ventilation.

During the day, meetings were held simultaneously in the various churches, beginning with a sunrise prayer meeting for the membership of the churches, a noon service for men, and an afternoon service at 4:15 for the school children. At every one of these meetings a Divine Presence was manifest, and souls were wonderfully quickened.

Rev. Paxton of the Euclid Avenue Church gave himself wholly to the work. He went from house to house in his burning desire to reach and save the lost ones. He seemed endowed with an almost superhuman energy and power of endurance. He was in demand everywhere for sermons, addresses and exhortations, and responded heartily. His voice, always musical, and well controlled, seemed to possess a power and pathos that was well nigh irresistible.

It is not strange that a specially earnest effort should be put forth by a church whose pastor had become so absorbed in evangelistic work, nor that Euclid Avenue Church should soon become the center of religious influences and power.

Since the scales had fallen from Deacon Upright's eyes, he had become one of the most active and efficient laborers in the Master's vineyard. His well known punctuality in the performance of Christian duty, and his uprightness of character, had given him a hold upon the people that, under the new impulse of LOVE, which all felt now controlled him, made him a veritable "pillar in the church."

Walking in the new light, the deacon found opportunity to restore fourfold what he had, under mistaken views of right business principles, taken from any with whom he had had dealings in the past. His wealth had accumulated rapidly since he had come to Glenview, and he had the means to make full restitution to all. The money that had been so carefully saved and wisely invested did not seem so well worth striving to obtain—for the pleasure of hoarding—as for the pleasure of making it an instrument in furthering the interests of Christ's kingdom. The "poor had the gospel preached unto them" in a way that stopped the crying of hungry ones and warmed the bodies of shivering invalids whose funds had not been equal to their needs.

Without ostentation or needless publicity, Deacon Upright went about doing good, thus walking "in His steps." It did not take many weeks of such Christian activity to bring Deacon Upright into prominence in religious circles, and give him power with men. He heartily seconded every effort of his pastor, and became Mr. Paxton's trusted advisor and helper.

Together these two made a canvass of that part of the city most neglected by the churches, and planned to bring the gospel to the dark and destitute places. It is safe to say that hundreds were thus reached and saved who would otherwise have been left to perish in their sins.

The meetings had been going on for two months before the Deacon had come into his richer experience, or had closely identified himself with the earnest workers. Now he gave himself to the work with entire consecration. His carriage was in use every day and evening, and he hired others to enable him to gather the "lost ones" to the house of prayer.

Thus many, whom distance would have kept away from the house of God, because it was too far to walk and they could not find the money to pay car fare, were enabled to hear the gospel and accept its gracious invitations. And yet, the Deacon could not be long away from the bedside of his stricken wife. His work for the good of the cause was done during the hour or two in the day when he could leave Mrs. Upright in the care of Mrs. Queerman and get out for air and exercise himself. But his plans were all laid during the hours at home and no time was lost in hesitation or uncertainty.

Having suffered most cruelly from the influence of the saloon and brothel he turned his attention to such as were in danger from those places. So it came to pass that Deacon Upright uncovered the hidden foe to temperance and chastity that had so long bid defiance to law, and had laughed at every effort to bring it to the light.

Ralph's experience with reading room influences helped the Deacon not a little, as he gave his father a detailed account of the methods and equipment of these places, and designated the places he had known and visited. But even then many failures were suffered before the evil was finally rooted out.

The thorough organization of the men engaged in the business, and the promptness with which every trace of the business carried on could be obliterated made it exceedingly difficult to catch them. Liquors concealed in dark cellars were served to customers, though neither jug or decanter could be found on the premises. An innocent looking pitcher pump did duty as bartender.

It was not Mr. Paxton's idea that legal means should be taken to shut these places up, but rather that an effort should first be made to save the keepers themselves. With this idea the Deacon coincided heartily. But the men were aware of the fact that their secret had been found out and that they could not escape punishment for the violation of the law. It is a pleasure to be able to say truthfully that many closed their houses voluntarily and began to seek other means for the accumulation of wealth, or to provide for their families and dependents in an honorable way.

There were others, however, who were incorrigible and had to be dealt with by the stern hand of the law. Though fined, and imprisoned they kept repeating the offense with insolent pertinacity.

A strong public sentiment had been developed in opposition to saloons and brothels, and the city government did not feel safe in ignoring public sentiment any longer. So an honest attempt was made to stamp out evils of which the people justly complained. If the evangelistic services had done nothing greater they had aroused the public conscience and purged the politics of the city of the corruption which is the legitimate fruit of saloon domination. Vice became an unpopular thing and good men held the balance of power in the city of Glenview. But it must not be supposed that it was a bloodless victory, or that saloon men and keepers of bawdy houses meekly yielded to the demands of an awakened public conscience. Men of their stamp do not give up their hellish business or their exorbitant gains without a desperate fight. Such are proverbially unscrupulous in the use of means to further their own interests not hesitating to resort to violence or even to take life if occasion offer for so doing. A man who is vile enough to devote himself to destroying the souls and bodies of his fellowmen by selling them intoxicants will not hesitate to use pistol or knife if his interests seem to demand it.

The spring election—when the officers of the city were elected—was a hotly contested one, but had resulted in the overwhelming defeat of the saloon element.

While neither Rev. Paxton or Deacon Upright had made any special effort against the candidates of the rum power during the campaign, their well known position on all public questions made them the most hated men in all the churches, and the saloon men made no secret of their determination to "get even" with Parson Paxton and Deacon Upright. Those who have studied the character of the men who run saloons and bawdy houses will not be surprised at any wickedness they may be guilty of in "getting even." It is sufficient for our purpose to say that the newly elected city government began a crusade against every form of vice. Every house wherein an unlawful business was carried on was closed at once.

The incoming government assumed control at about the same time the special services in the city closed. The Weekly Call, a paper published in Glenview, in summing up the results of the meeting said:

"It is impossible of course, to estimate the spiritual results of the meetings. Influences have been set in motion that shall never cease, and the influences will probably widen as those reached by the meetings shall remove to other points. But of this fact we can speak with absolute certainty: the moral tone of the city is vastly improved and the security of life and property is proportionately great. The number of those who have professed conversion during the meeting aggregate over 5,000 souls. Some of these were formerly the most hardened and depraved of the city's inhabitants. Thus far they have given evidence of having undergone a radical change. They promise to be true to their principles and to become a credit to the churches to which they have joined themselves. Probably some will soon fall away and be no better than before, but the net results of the meetings will be an incalculable benefit to the city through all time."

If You Want Something

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

THE CHALLENGE OF THE NEW YEAR.

By Dr. L. R. Akers, President of Asbury College.

"Behold, I make all things new." Rev. 21:5.

WE are standing at the threshold of another year. January is a month of beginnings, named for Janus, ancient god of beginnings. This mythical god of doors was two-faced that he might look forward and backward. So, as we enter the portals of January, we look forward to twelve months of new dreams and endeavor and through it we may look back on things that have passed.

There is only one finer thing than splendid yesterdays: that is the unsullied tomorrows. New Year resolutions have become a matter of jocular comment. "Turning over a new leaf" is a subject for derision and ridicule. Yet if any day is appropriate for new resolutions it is New Year's Day. It should be a day of thanksgiving, and we might well sing together:

"Thus far the Lord hath led me on,
Thus far His power prolongs my day."

"Hitherto hath the Lord helped us," said pious Samuel as he set up a stone to God's protection, calling it Ebenezer. The Psalmist says, "Thou crownest the year with goodness." The Scots say our greatest hymn is,

"O God, our help in ages past,
Our hopes in years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
Our eternal home."

No man should be sad who looks on the whole fact of life. If he looks only as far as the grave he may indeed be wretched, but looking through and beyond the grave, his soul may well be content.

"Life is real, life is earnest,
And the grave is not its goal;
Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not written of the soul."

But the new tomorrows should call from us our best efforts. Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote on a New Year's Day, "My life this year shall be a challenge, not a truce." What a splendid resolve for each one of us! Longfellow, advanced in years, was asked by a friend, "How do you keep so vigorous and write so beautifully?" Pointing to an old apple tree in blossom, he replied, "It is very old but has never had prettier blossoms. A little new wood each year and out of the new these blossoms come." So with the life that blooms. New wood must be grown each year. When we cease to grow, we cease to go.

This is the time for us to check up personally on our inner lives. First of all, in our New Year resolutions, let us determine upon a greater evaluation of our time. "Brethren, the time is short," says Paul, while the cathedral mind of the Old Testament, Moses, in his wonderful prayer, says, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Time is not only money; time is life. To kill time is to commit soul-suicide. How tragic is the waste of time in unprofitable avenues of activity! Prodigals of time are on every side. The fallacy of "manyana," which is the Spanish word for tomorrow, and which almost invariably is the answer when any one desires something done, is shown in the fact that only today is ours. Upon the pulpit of the Metropolitan Church in Washington lies John Wesley's Bible, from which he read his text to mobs and multitudes. Upon the fly-leaf, in his own handwriting, are two words which should be written upon the minds of men everywhere: "Live today." A most timely stanza in our church hymnal reads:

"Lord, for tomorrow and its needs
I do not pray.
Keep me, my God, from stain of sin
Just for today.
Help me to labor earnestly
And duly pray.
Let me be kind in word and deed
Father, today."

It is our faith which may divide death and the grave. On the tomb of Dwight L. Moody at Northfield is graven the words, "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

Let us learn New Year lessons from old year failures. In factories devoted to the making of chains, power machines are designed to break the chains and thus reveal the weak places. It is sometimes a distinct advantage to have learned from a failure how to become strong. A man may be down, but he does not have to stay down.

With the coming of the New Year, let us get the forward look. "The set of their faces is forward." Hebrews 1:9. There are times when we must go forward like the commander who sails under sealed orders, like Abraham of old going out not knowing whither he went. So we may go in obedience to God. There is much of truth in the words.

"Trust and obey,
For there's no other way
To be happy in Jesus,
But to trust and obey."

It was this Faith that wrote for Abraham an imperishable name as "the friend of God." It was this trust which crowned Paul forever among the immortals. See this old veteran of the cross, as he exclaims, "But I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

No matter how restricted may be the sphere of our living there may come the glorious joy of winning the victory. On the aviation field that machine wins the reward which goes up with the smallest spiral, in the most restricted sphere. So we who must needs live much of our lives within the four walls of a room or in the narrow environs of a country village may yet in the spiritual realm win a victory of great magnitude. A round of cares may become a round of winged thoughts, too. We may do our daily tasks well and mount forward at the same time. Let us get the mounting spiral into our daily lives. May our spirits be like the field lark winging its way upward with a joyous song in its heart.

As we enter this New Year, let us determine by the help of God to gain the victory over worry. Truly worry is the sulphuric acid of life. Wesley said, "I dare no more fret than I dare curse and swear." The word, fret, is akin to the word, friction. Well does the Psalmist say, "Fret not thyself because of evil doers; neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity." This was the message of God to the Psalmist who saw brutal men climbing into places of authority and sinful men and women in purple and fine linen strutting through the land basking in the prosperity of ill-gotten gains. The cure for worry is to "trust in the Lord and do good. So shalt thou dwell in the land and verily thou shalt be fed." "Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him." "Be careless in the Lord."

Again, let us check up personally our spiritual resources. Has the inner life been burning low? Have we become jaded morally? Are we stronger and nearer to God than one year ago today? I recall wandering through the nave of a great cathedral in Montreal and beholding a tiny flame upon the distant altar. A priest, standing in the shadow of one of the great interior columns, said, "For sixteen years that flame has burned unceasingly." So upon the altars of our hearts there should be the unfailing flame of devotion to God and of service for humanity.

How can we make the world better? We may begin by becoming better ourselves. Carlyle once said, "Be a good man and there will be one rascal less." With all the preaching about a social Gospel, it is the sheerest sort of folly to overlook individual redemption and personal piety. Well did Governor Harmon of Ohio say, "All guilt is personal," and back of the social sins which are mirrored upon the front pages of our newspapers may always be found a personal lack of Christian morals. Transformed society can come only through the regenerated man or woman. John Ruskin, apostle of social betterment, declared all hope of this to be futile without individual salvation. "Myself a Christian, then my city Christian, then the world Christian;" this is the true order. Before we begin to pray for the heathen, we might ask our hearts the question, "Is my brand of religion the kind we ought to send the heathen? Would it satisfy their needs? Is my service to God lip service or heart service? I can send bread to the starving bodies of Asiatic sufferers. Am I able to give the Bread of Life to a starving soul here in America?"

As we look through the portals of the New Year, we may well resolve that this shall be a year of more effective prayer. Never shall we forget the motto which our sainted mother in our childhood tacked upon the wall opposite our bed so that when our eyes first opened to the light of day we beheld the words, "Prayer changes things." Truly prayer gets things done. Prayer is the projection of personality. When we pray we release mysterious currents of spiritual energy which beat against the Throne of God and the iron-clad hearts of men. A radio-gram leaping across the Atlantic requires high energy to overcome counter currents,

So highly energized prayer will overcome the opposition of the evil one and of evil men. Just as the regular tramp of troops will cause a mighty bridge to sway, so were our spiritual eyes open, we could note the tottering of Satan's Kingdom in response to the regular, united prayer of God's people.

Let us resolve that the new year shall mean more active service for the King. It is a scientific and spiritual fact that idleness is always a prelude to death. Stop using your hand and you will immediately begin to lose the hand. The first recorded sentence of Jesus was, "I must be about my Father's business." Hard work is not nearly so disastrous as idleness. Life is not a Pullman sleeper. It is a great labor camp. The church of the living God should not be an amalgamated association for the avoidance of activity but rather a conscientious combination of perspiring co-operators.

In a sense, every man must bear his own burdens, though we should bear each other's too. A man can help me carry my basket, but no man can eat for me. A man can give me a bed in his home, but he cannot sleep for me. A man can pray with me, but not utter my prayer. He can work with me, but cannot do my work. God has a task for each one and no other can do that task without leaving his own undone. "So we built the wall"—we are told, because all the people had a mind to work.

Many other resolutions we might make and all would be to no avail unless we come to the heart of the entire matter. For life to be truly and continuously victorious, for life to be dynamic with an ever-widening influence, that life must be surcharged with power from on high. Because of this, the message of him whose life was light and power still rings clear and plain, "Tarry ye, till ye be endued with power from on high." The coveted power is ours when the heart is made pure. Back to Pentecost is the way forward to complete victory. Before the tongue can be tipped with fire the heart must be cleansed from sin. How shall we be at our best for God? By giving him all there is of us. Let there be no "ifs" as to God's will concerning us, during the glorious days to come. With a fully surrendered heart then may we understand with the dawning of each day the message, "Behold, I make all things new."

"Pass the Time of Your Sojourning Here in Fear."

T. C. HENDERSON.

BECAUSE of their content of meaning one could believe that the Apostle Peter was thinking of the threshold of a new year, when he wrote: "If ye call on the Father, who without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work, pass the time of your sojourning here in fear; forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversations received by tradition from your fathers, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." (1 Pet. 1:17-19). These words will fittingly serve us for a basis of timely meditation at this New Year's season.

The dominant clause and idea in the paragraph is this: "pass the time of your sojourning here in fear." The idea is that there are certain aspects and involvements of our probation which should promote a mood of constructive fear in us. That, as we walk the highways of time we are in connection with such facts and realities as to live our days in great moral caution. It is immediately evident that this is not a familiar idea in this day and generation. Instead of being urged to fear, we are warned against it, for fear, we are told, is a disorganizing thing. We are told to ignore and deny the perils of our life. If one does not have an abounding confidence, then one should assume it; for the supreme virtue is confidence in oneself and his resources. Honest and sobering concern about moral values is quite passe. Think that you are sufficient, that you are happy, that you are greater than your foes and you are. Rely on your inherent powers and there is nothing and no one who can withstand you. Such sentiments as these are the "strengthening" philosophy of the current day. On such things we are urged to build our life. Successful living depends on the absence of fear. The inspired Apostle Peter knew nothing about such nonsense. He is here looking directly into the grave facts of human probation and there sees such possibilities and such perils as to argue that the most becoming poise for every one is fear.

Sobriety and circumspection were great words and truths with our fathers, but we have quite fully lost them. Modern religion is not profoundly burdened with moral anxieties. Mirth and sociability rate higher with the church today than does moral caution.

It is evident that there are fears which weaken and disorganize one's energies. There are fears which destroy courageous initiative. However there are fears which excite courage and which challenge one to venture and to fight. True moral fears will arouse rather than inhibit moral powers. If one thinks God to be a god of angry might, he will likely have a fear of him which will destroy all love and confidence in him; but if one thinks of God as Jesus Christ revealed him, he will so fear him as to be impelled to seek moral security for time and eternity. Fear is necessary to safety. He who does not fear sin will not avoid it. Fearing no moral danger one will walk into the pit. He who takes his enemies frivolously will be destroyed by them. If one does not fear disease he will do nothing to escape its deadly effects. Moral alertness and caution spring from moral fears. It is for constructive and caution-producing moral fear that this passage of Scripture is pleading. In support of this plea, the Apostle gives us several facts which should tend to promote this.

The conception of life which is here noted suggests the necessity of this mood of fear. Life is called a "sojourning." That is, the Christian life is like the journey of a man in a foreign country continuing for only a brief time. That is a suggestive picture. Life for the Christian, then, is not a complete and final thing; it is not an end in itself, but it is a journey away from home and among unfriendly environments. The Christian is a tourist traveling amid grave perils. The Christian life is not one of sheltered ease and security, nor is it a pleasant and lazy meandering without sober responsibilities, nor does the span of life offer ample time to retrace many reckless side trips; but it is a life of sobering moral ventures, moral hazards and anticipates a final moral accounting to God. If that is the true way to think of the Christian life, then evident it is that the Christian should be characterized by great caution and anxiety lest he be enticed to make the wrong country his home, or lest he be intimidated by unfriendly forces and foes surrounding him as he journeys, or lest he become careless and yield to the charm of forbidden indulgences as he "sojourns" here. This concept of life is certainly not intended to make the Christian life all drab and dour, far from that, but it will make every aspect of life more meaningful and the very fears which it promotes will drive one to excel in the elements of life which will bring eternal satisfaction and the truest happiness today.

The conception of God which is here presented should promote this attitude of fear within us. God is thought of here as both Father and Judge. "If ye call on the Father, who without respect of persons, judgeth—" We are familiar with the thought of God as the Father, but that he is also the Father who judgeth is not so fully stressed in our thoughts of him. We major on the mercy, the tenderness, the pity, the understanding and sympathy of God, but we should as surely and clearly see that he is our righteous Judge. He weighs our deserts and is absolutely loyal to justice and to all the moral involvements of his universe. He is our Lover, and he is our solemn Judge. It is a sobering thought that our personal destiny rests in the hands of the unseen and infinite God. He who cannot compromise justice, even though he is merciful. Today he extends redeeming mercy to us, but at the end of our brief sojourning we will meet him as the faithful Judge of all the earth. He observes us now. Tomorrow we will give an account to him of how we deported ourselves today. There is no magic effect of the redeeming death of Jesus Christ which can relieve us of moral accountability for our behaviour today. Every preacher, every Christian worker, every noted man, every humble, unheralded Christian—literally all of us will have to face him who is both our Father and our Judge. This fact should challenge us to spend the time of our sojourning in fear.

Accompanying this characterization of God as being the Father who judgeth, we find a striking statement of the way he administers justice; which should contribute to the promotion of moral caution as we live through the days of our earthly probation. He metes out justice impartially and uses our records as the chief witness for or against us. "Who without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work." Appearances, circumstances, rank or reputation mean nothing to this Judge. Who and what we are will be the one big item when we stand before him. In a world where wealth and influence can so easily swerve justice, it is not easy to fully appreciate the full meaning of impartial justice. We see the power of an educated mind, a filled and free purse, and the holder of high rank or office in the management of affairs among men, but before God there will be no respect paid to these, not even to high claims to piety and orthodoxy, but the rugged facts of our deepest character as revealed in our conduct. Who can live without caution-producing fear in view of our accountability to him who will one day see that every man comes to the bar of impartial and practical justice?

The Apostle continues to argue this matter by citing us to two phases of our personal salvation which should impel us to fear as we continue this brief and perilous sojourning through time. First, there is the fact that we are saved from the "vain conversation received by tradition from our fathers." What our forebears thought and did, they handed on to us, and we accepted these low traditions as guides for our living. However, in the Gospel we found salvation from these old ideals and practices, though those about us are continuing to follow them. Our danger is that we may let these old standards and habits reassert themselves in our living and thus violate our salvation. Ours it is to fear a relapse by being charmed away from Christ by the attractions of the old life—attractions which have the weight of their long hold on mankind, as well as being winsome and immediate to us all the time. We are under pressure to violate our deliverance and dishonor our Deliverer.

The other phase of our salvation mentioned is that we were redeemed at infinite cost. Not with corruptible things, as silver and gold, "But with the precious blood of Christ." God emptied his moral resources and gave the ultimate price to buy us back from the mastery of sinful traditions which enslave us. God, the Infinite; God, the Judge—

Slackness on Time, Never God's Way.

HENRY OSTROM.

"As some men count slackness." 2 Peter 3:9.

RENDERING those words a little plainer, we read "as men reckon it to be slack or tardy or uncertain." The words are taken from the heart of a description of scoffers. They are wont to say that God has not made good his declarations because of tardiness or slackness, and they argue their claim because of sameness. They trace over the years and then declare that all goes on the same year after year. Rather than be men of faith, they choose the dull dead field of fatalism; rather than be men of prayer, they choose to deny themselves the upward look and engage to gaze over the level, rather than be convinced even by judgment visitations (like the Flood), they scoff.

It is this dead-levelism that a time like the New Year should cause the sanctified soul to fairly blow up and declare that the abolition of such fatalism must be when a soul has spiritual discovery and is in-filled with the Holy Spirit. Year after year, sunrise and sunset, summer and winter, eating, drinking and sleeping—all such; and if not scoffing, then at least far from rejoicing in the Lord! Why, if observation is to be classed as an outlet of intelligence, why confine it to the level. Why not liberate it to search the realms above? Why not let it see what is above the fog and smoke of man's wild ways?

Now the Godly person does this. Indeed his power to observe should be wholly grasped and held by God who is above all this inanimate plenitude round about us here, dull and dead as it is.

Instead of musing over things continuing as they were long ago, his faith calls for discoveries which break up and all but utterly discard the sameness. His is the God of events, events fresh and new-born. Action is there instead of dullness and death. Events they are that accord harmoniously with the promises of God, events in answer to prayer, events, not one of which can harm the sanctified in him, since all work for good. And, if Israel of old was called upon to observe the Jubilee Year, the Sabbath Year, the New Moon, and many other events, how readily may the Christian (though every day is to him lived unto the Lord) rise above the average level in spirit and observe the New Year, recounting both the painful and the pleasant events and glorying in him whose love prevails equally in both classes of circumstances.

Ah, the Christian's God has given his word. He has said what he will do. From clear above the dust and fog has come a guarantee down to us where we live. If that Word could once fail, then all would fail. If God were once "slack" concerning that, then who could be faithful or where could faithfulness be found: and faithfulness is the great asset next to love in true friendship. But, it does not fail, and, more than that, it cannot fail. It is not grass to wither in the heat. No pretty flower faded and fallen by the way is this Word of God. It endures, and forever. And, because of it there is both warning and welcome in the ending of the Old and the beginning of the New Year. The warning tells of judgment on the earth in time to come and the welcome flows from the exceeding great and precious promises dispensing untold wealth to the soul surrendered to God. The Christian's God is watching over time and he cannot be late. He requires no preparation for eternity and neither the fear that it is near nor weariness of waiting tax his perfect nature. Hence, his "long suffering" (instead of showing us "slackness") but gives us the better to see that "a thousand years are with him but as one day." O, eternal God! O, Infinite One! Surely it is because thou art so great that not a second of time is overlooked by thee nor can eternal ages weary thee, nor can the very smallest need we have miss the loving embrace of thy unfailing care.

Shall we not, then, mount in thought above the changing spheres, above the rising and setting of the sun; and wrapt in adoration start forth in another year, the next great significant event to engage us being—"His Son from heaven"?

Adoration instead of sameness! Our powers engage in the interesting variety of praises and thanksgivings which only the recognition of his immediate and unfailing care can know. Fullness of growth, a spiritual increase instead of sameness. Redeeming the time and willing to pay the price in an evil day of idolatrous sameness, bettering the New Year!

The Christian's God regards the future. We may not stop here longer than to catch a glimpse of that future of the heavens and the earth in which dwelleth righteousness. Some change, for redeemed sinners who shall have come up out of an earth of deceptions and delusions such as this! Visits, and reignings in the presence of rebels are the present records of righteousness on earth. And, as for the heavens Satan himself provides many interruptions by "spiritual wickedness in the heavenlies." But he who speaks from THE THIRD HEAVEN, the heaven of heavens bids us look to a day when righteousness will no longer be as a guest but it will be AT HOME both on earth and in the heavens. Who thinks that we enter the New Year as blindfolded venturers?

A dream? No, God's Word. Let the New Year dawn as if arched by it and we pass under that rainbow into our tomorrow. A thousand years of peace; but more, the New Heavens and the New Earth where righteousness is no stranger. The best we can say of earth today leaves the sanctified a pilgrim and a stranger but out there he is at home where righteousness is at home. Talk about Home-comings! Let us have our tickets in hand and be on tip-toe for the trip for this one. Events speed up greatly near the final.

In the presence of such, who can measure the words—"Christ is made of God unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption"? So, the New Year is welcome for we are nearer the time of the New Earth. And that is sure for our death-conquering Lord has the power in his own hands. In the meantime we listen for the proclamation—"Thou hast TAKEN, TAKEN thy great power and has REIGNED." Money fame, health, they have a place. But who can stoop to see it long when he knows that the New Year marks the way to the New heavens and the New earth? And as if to make the highway markings doubly engaging, lo, we look for our Lord from heaven to reign a thousand years in his glory over all this old sin-stained, death-dealt, tear-soaked earth, again restored and wondrously beautified. All this and more, on the way to "all things new."

No room for scoffing here. He is not tardy. There will be no delays. If he is all to you—then, Happy New Year!

What Think Ye Of Christ?

This is one of Dr. Morrison's most recent sermons, and one of the very best he has ever written. It gives unanswerable arguments for the Divinity of Christ, and should be broadcast over the land. It will be a factor in arresting the unbelief and skepticism which is so widespread, and spreading more rapidly as the days come and go.

The Alabama Christian Advocate has the following to say of this sermon:

"What Think Ye of Christ?" is the name of a sermon just issued in pamphlet form by Dr. H. C. Morrison, of Louisville, Ky. Everything that Dr. Morrison writes or says is good, and this one is particularly good. If you are hungry for a particularly strong, yet spiritual, sermon, order this from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. The price is 15 cents per copy, or seven copies for $1.00."

The New Year Speaks.

The New Year speaks! It announces its advent in divers tones and under varied skies: here in the whistle and roar of bitter winds; there in the sigh and sob of tropic breezes; here under skies leaden and low, there under heaven's cloudless and sun-bathed; here in the strident clatter of a half pagan buffoonery curiously associated with New Year's Eve and there in the low-toned prayer and reverential hymns of a watch night service. The New Year speaks!

The New Year speaks of the transitoriness of life! It is but a breath, soon drawn and then expiring. Life's outer garments, its physical aspects and accessories, change as do the styles of Fifth Avenue. "The fashion of this world passeth away." So wrote St. Paul. "Change and decay in all around I see." So wrote the hymn writer. Families are broken. Lovers are separated. Society alters its code. Governments pass. Industry is revolutionized. The Scranton coal miner is stricken and so is King George of Buckingham. Manhattan skyscrapers today top the ground where yesterday Indian arrows fell and Indian war whoops resounded. Fame fades. Riches rot. Pleasures pall. Popularity passes. Hairs whiten. Steps unsteady grow. Death is nigh.

The New Year speaks of the permanence of spiritual values! Lovers come and go, but love remains, a measureless mystical force throbbing through all hearts and all years. The "captains and the kings depart," but the King of kings, the "same yesterday, today and forever," lives on, labors on, loves on, saves on. The verities of the soul are ageless like the stars. Righteousness and truth and purity and peace and sacrifices—these are the deathless things upon which the gnawing of time's tooth can have no effect. The New Year speaks! And this is its message:

"Build your hopes on things eternal—Hold to God's unchanging hand."

The New Year speaks of new opportunities! It bids us face forward, gird up our loins and march to conquest. It calls upon us to forget, Paul-like, "the things which are behind." The victories of yesterday are for our encouragement to further successes; they are not camping grounds for self-congratulation or self-complacency. The defeats of yesterday are for our instruction and profit; they are not to terrorize us or tyrannize us. Christ's man does not belong to the past, but to the future. He fronts tomorrows that are radiant with promise. He that hath ears to hear let him hear the voice of the New Year calling us to a reaffirmation of our covenant with God and our consecration to the immensely worthwhile task of "spreading Scriptural holiness over these lands."—Paul S. Rees, in The Tabernacle Tidings.

The First 10,000 Years in Hell,

With Introduction by Rev. H. C. Morrison, is a book of five stirring sermons, "Ten Thousand Years in Hell," "The Fate of an Unfaithful Shepherd," "A Pastor's Vision of a Lost Soul," and two others. This is a book that is calculated to make one stop and think, and there never was a time when it was more needed. 25c a copy, or $2.00 per dozen. Place a dozen or more where they are needed.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

HONGSUNG, KOREA.

Dear Friends of The Herald Family:

One has but to visit Korea to become convinced of the power of a personal devil. Devil worship is the principal religion out here. People pray to the devil; in times of drought and flood; a pig or chicken may be sacrificed to the powers of darkness; in cases of sickness a red-hot needle is often stuck into the quivering flesh of the patient to drive out evil spirits. Devil houses, resembling very much a four inch brass button, are fastened on the door posts of many homes for spirits to dwell in, and offerings of rice are placed on little shelves beneath them.

This morning at the five-thirty prayer meeting an old woman prayed in agony, under the delusion that her sins were unpardonable. At last she testified that she believed that Christ had forgiven her but that a great burden of sorrow and regret still rested on her heart. The day we arrived, Miss Scharpf, the missionary here, told us the gruesome tragedy of devil possession which was responsible for her grief.

Her grandson, one of the most respected and best loved young men in the village, was stricken with a severe headache. The entire family entered into an orgy of devil worship to drive out the evil spirit. They piled rich foods in the center of the table for the devils, and for five hours wailed and danced around it. The grandmother, who was leading the worship, later testified that the powers of darkness suddenly possessed them to such an extent that their incantations became marked with extreme violence, and for five days and nights they jumped, wailed, and shouted at the top of their voices. Finally the son who was sick went stark mad, took a sickle from the wall, and announced that he was duty bound to kill them all. When they fled he turned the sickle on himself and so lacerated the back of his neck that he died a few hours later.

Miss Scharpf found the family in the house of a neighbor, shrinking with fear lest the devils bring them to the same end. They were now glad to listen to the gospel of the one who alone could deliver them from the powers of hell. The entire family except one old grandfather eagerly turned to the haven of refuge Christ offered them; and throughout the following week there raged an awful battle between the Spirit of God and the forces of evil for the possession of these souls. Visitations of sickness, overwhelming fear, and even strange visions were brought to bear upon them to keep them bound. Hopeless darkness filled their hearts. The praying people banded together in constant travail, and, thank God, victory and deliverance came through this united faith. Demons were cast out, peace of heart abounded, and day after day it was our joy to see these redeemed souls in faithful attendance of our services.

The church here has been far too small to accommodate the crowd. A tent was erected but the temperature dropped below freezing and we couldn't use it, so we have been getting along in crowded quarters as best we could. The masses seem hard to reach with the gospel and fewer new believers have come to Christ than usual. However the Holy Spirit has been working in a wonderful way among the professing Christians. This afternoon a confession meeting followed the service. One after another men and women told of new found blessings. A few confessed hatred and dishonesty; many had failed to keep the Sabbath; and some even told of thieving and adultery. All who spoke praised God for forgiveness and determination to go through. Many pastors and Christian leaders testified to the joy that had come to them through the Baptism of the Holy Ghost. Though this is our smallest meeting in Korea with respect to numbers, in many ways it is proving to be one of the best. When time for parting comes we will be reluctant to part, God has so knit our hearts together in Christian love.

We praise God for the sterling work of Miss Scharpf who stands alone in this hard field with no other missionary to share her burdens. Her spirit of self-sacrifice has been a great blessing to us and has wrought inestimable gain to the Kingdom of God. She needs your prayers.

On November 29th we are to leave Korea for North China, where we will begin our work with the missionaries of the National Holiness Association in Shantung Province. We praise God that this door has been so timely opened with the passing of the war clouds. Please join us in prayer for this new conquest. Our headquarters address for at least two months will be Box 1489, Shanghai, China.

PERTH, SCOTLAND.

Dear Herald Family, Greeting:

At Uddingston, Scotland, which is near Glasgow, in the Church of the Nazarene a campaign of great victory was conducted. The best attendance they have ever had in a revival and with much conviction on the people there were many seeking and finding the Lord. The altar filled again and again with people who had never been converted. A dentist who was entering a saloon was attracted by the music in the open air meeting, came into the church and was gloriously saved and then brought his wife and children and such a happy family as they were. Many other interesting cases.

The Moser Sisters conducted ten special services for the young people and hundreds were in attendance. The object lessons and chart messages captured the hearts of these who came from homes where the parents do not attend church and they were soon weeping under the power of God's love for them. They came seeking pardon, as many as thirty-seven kneeling at a time and such a change came over them that the parents were convinced that God had wrought a work in their children's hearts.

These Scots are a steady, unemotional people that do not move on impulse, but take time, weigh the matter and when they do move you know they have made up their mind to go through and they stick to it so that most all who come to the altar are there for the first time and usually get through good. We are grateful to God for the good results we are having in all our efforts in the British Isles and surely feel in his will.

We note some relics of the old-fashioned Sabbath observance in Scotland. After the morning worship the blinds were drawn that they might not look out on the world and the afternoon spent in Bible study and prayer, no cooking on that day and all were reverent and quiet. Today the shows and shops are closed, many busses and tram cars do not run, one sees a great procession along roads and streets with Bibles and hymn books on their way to worship. Among the more religious there is no visiting and a simple meal, cold except perhaps tea. At church here most everybody has a Bible and they follow you in your text and references. The Bible is read and other religious exercises conducted daily in all the schools.

A visit to the great Catholic Grotto at Carfin which is an imitation of the one at Lourdes, revealed the extent of idol worship which Rome encourages. It is a series of shrines with marble images of the Virgin and various saints in a beautiful natural setting of flowers, trees, fountains and artistic walls, arches, underground altars in a veritable fairyland covering many acres. When finished it will cover 200 acres and have a cathedral of 6,000 capacity. Over a quarter of a million pilgrims came in three months in delegations from Italy, France, Belgium, Ireland and as many as 50,000 are there at one time drinking and bathing in the holy water which they claim has cured many of dreadful diseases, bowing before the images or kneeling on the many great stairways offering prayers to the saints. It is as near a modern Ganges or Mecca as could be designed and of course was founded by Divine (?) authority. The "Little Flower of Jesus" seems to be the attraction they holler about most and you would have to see it to understand it, although I saw and do not perceive, but they would no doubt explain that I was a dog or a heretic that had no faith in it and I would praise God that it was so. I prayed here like I got down and prayed in a Cathedral in Chester, "O Lord, open the eyes of these hungry hearted worshippers as you did the eyes of Martin Luther." They no doubt thought I was praying to a saint but I was blessing God I had a Saviour.

Like the guide at the Giants Causeway in Ireland insisted that I sit in the giants chair and with sea foam piled around me and the salt spray in my face make a wish, so I wished I could be more like Jesus. Then I remembered that spiritual things do not come by wishing but by believing and obeying. Not a matter of good luck but good living.

We spent some days in Edinburgh the romantic Scottish capital in the land of Walter Scott and found much of interest in this grand old city. The castle contains the ancient regalia of royalty, Queen Mary's room, Queen Margaret's chapel and "Mons Meg" the five hundred year old cannon that once fired the keys of the city to the enemy, also the newly finished Scottish war memorial which we felt rivals the English memorial at Menen Gate in Belgium is located in the court of the castle and from the battlements one may look down on Princess Street, one of the finest streets in Europe, with its magnificent gothic monument to Walter Scott and the gardens near which is a statue of David Livingstone. Or from this lofty station one may look back to the beginnings of Scottish history for it was here that Dukes were imprisoned, Marquises and Earls met their doom, and on the esplanade witches and martyrs were burned, kings were born and queens fled from the Lords of the congregation. Beyond the portcullis gate and the old drawbridge one may survey the fairest and richest parts of the realm.

The Royal mile down High Street to Holyrood Palace is a continual panorama of historical interest. John Knox's home built in 1490 is a wonderful relic of early architecture aside from its religious significance. Standing in the old "preaching window" one faces up the street toward St. Giles church of which Knox was rector. We had a season of prayer in Knox's study and reviewed his history in paintings and relics among which were the thumb-screws and other instruments of torture used in that day, and a gag on a ring which when placed in the mouth of tatters or evil speakers and the victim turned loose was a sport for the neighborhood. All of which stirred us somewhat with the spirit of those times.

St. Giles Church is well worth some time. At one spot an engraved plate informs us that "here one Jenny Geddes threw a rock at the preacher who was advocating a course contrary to the will of the people. Days of heroes, those when the church was a pendulum between Protestantism and Catholicism. We are enjoying with ease what cost others their blood.

Edinburgh is a galaxy of beautiful and interesting streets, museums, galleries, gardens, statues and great buildings and one may well conclude his visit at Greyfriar's churchyard standing by the grave of "Bobbie" the little dog who kept watch by his master's grave for seven years and was immortalized in Miss Atkinson's "Greyfriar's Bobbie."

My brother, if your heart lacks love for your Master then profit by this lesson of devotion from a dog who loved in life and after death refused to leave the grave where kind hands built a kennel and furnished food until death also claimed the guard who is now buried by the side of the one he loved. "Now abideth Faith, Hope, Love, but the greatest of these is love." "Love never faileth."

WILKINSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA.

Once a year we send in a general report to The Pentecostal Herald and as the year is about over we can report a wonderful year of activity for God. Our revivals have been better this year than any previous year seeing more souls saved and sanctified and having more revivals than ever before. We have worked with as fine a class of pastors as one could find amongst the different denominations, each one standing by us graciously with a large number recalling us again, some for the fourth time in succession, so with a busy year ahead we press on in Jesus' Name to preach a full salvation to a lost world. We will drop a word about the meeting here with the Union Gospel Church of the Christian and Missionary Alliance. There has been a constant flow of salvation from the very start. Sunday there were fifty people seeking God and a week yet to go. Bro. J. T. Mobberly, a wonderful Christian gentleman, is pastor of this church and has been for about fifteen years. They have a nice brick church which they recently purchased and are practically out of debt—a great missionary church sending as high as $9,000 per year to the Foreign field. Numbers are seeking full salvation—one more revival then home for Christmas. Pray for me.

H. N. Dickerson.

P. S.—Closed with around 300 at the altar; over 100 different people saved or sanctified. Amen.

HUGOTON, KANSAS.

We have just closed a remarkable meeting at Keyes, Okla. The pastors of the town had well prepared the way for a great victory. Scores of men, women and children were definitely blessed and united with the churches, family altars erected and a number of people began tithing. In a number of instances whole families were blessed and united with the churches.

One of the most remarkable things about the campaign, on the last Sunday morning the Methodist minister took a fine class into the church, and from the same platform the Baptist pastor took in a fine class.

We are at present in the Methodist Church, Hugoton, Kan., and the meeting is starting fine. Great crowds, deep interest and fine prospects. The Chamber of Commerce, Lions Club and the High School are fully co-operating in the campaign. Hugoton, it is claimed, will soon be the greatest gas field in the world. Thousands of people are coming this way. A great opportunity. J. B. Kendall.

REPORT.

As I have not reported this year I thought I would send in a report this being one of the busiest years of my life. My work has taken me in and through eighteen states and Canada. Have labored in eight camps, some of them the leading camps of the nation, made up of many denominations, other camps were small. Have worked with many of the leading evangelists in these camps and had blessed fellowship. The judgment alone will tell the good these camps are doing. May God's blessings rest upon the sacrificing people who keep them going. I was recalled to all except one of these camps for the future. Have labored in churches from the largest to the smallest, some thriving and flourishing, others struggling for existence. The good pastors and people have all treated me good and the fellowship with God's people has been blessed. Have preached to thousands as well as to small crowds and unseen radio crowds, have seen several thousand seek the Lord this past year. We start in the first of the year believing for greater victory and old-time revivals. Am thanking the Lord for health in both body and soul.

Bona Fleming.

Germany could whip France off the face of the earth today. The women of France raise poodle dogs. The women of Germany raise babies by the barrel. There are enough robust boy babies born in Germany every twelve months to make a powerful army of broad-shouldered, stout-legged, rugged men. It only takes eighteen years to make a soldier out of a baby boy. The very thought of sending them to war to mangle and destroy each other is horrible. But the big business of Europe for some centuries has been to raise babies into soldiers for slaughter on the battlefield. It makes the heart sick to read past history and contemplate the future.

The next time France and Germany want to fight, you may be sure your Uncle Samuel will keep out. The insanity of the past when this nation poured its young manhood into Europe to be cut to pieces with rapid-fire guns, and strangled with poison gas, will not be repeated. If, some time in the future, a president and group of congressmen in this country want to fight for somebody in Europe let them go over, get into the trenches, climb out into No-man's Land and hang their insides up on barbed wire entanglements, if they wish; but let no group of men in the Congress of the United States ever again vote our young manhood into a European war entailing a tax under which our people must stagger for decades to come.

The bitter feeling continues and increases between France and Italy. Both of the nations are armed to the teeth, glaring and growling at each other. War between them is not at all improbable. It is to be hoped it will not occur, but the powder barrel is handy and the spark is by no means impossible. Mussolini is belted, boastful and threatening. France and Italy have gone through the centuries without a Bible, without a saving gospel. The Romish priests have been too busy teaching the people to bow before plaster-Paris images, to have time to give them the saving gospel of Jesus Christ.

Meanwhile, millionaires, the underworld, the Catholic Church, the liquor interests, a number of Methodist preachers, and some hundreds of thousands of laymen, with other blinded Protestants, have united to bring the liquor traffic back upon us with bar-room down-stairs, and the bawdy-house upstairs.

If I am spared I will continue some further diagnosis of world conditions next week.

A Marvel of God's Grace and Guidance.

Some thirty years ago Mr. Chas. E. Cowman and Mr. E. A. Kilbourne, two telegraph operators in Chicago, beautifully sanctified according to the Wesleyan interpretation of the Holy Scriptures on the full redemption wrought for us by the Lord Jesus, undertook what, from a human point of view, seemed impossible. They felt the divine call to foreign mission work and selected Japan as their special field of service. With almost no money, but with a great faith in God and a great love for human souls, they went out determined to place the Bible, or some portion of the Scriptures, in every home in Japan, from the palace to the hut of the humblest, and by the grace of God they did it. It took some years. Their method was to hold meetings. They did not believe that the day of revivals had passed. Under the guidance and power of the Holy Ghost they got young Japanese converted, led them on into sanctification and sent them out with packs of Bibles, Testaments and Scripture portions. They sold their holy wares where the people were willing and able to buy, otherwise they gave them without charge. The devoted service of these young men was a great means of grace to them, and they grew wonderfully in adaptation, enthusiasm, witnessing and exhortation, and holy fires were kindled under their influence, in many sections of Japan.

Meanwhile, our brethren, Cowman and Kilbourne, built up a great training school at Tokyo, and gathered about them a remarkable group of Japanese Christians. It was my privilege to spend about a week at this school when I made my evangelistic tour of the world. It was a center of spiritual life and power. The Holy Spirit was in the place, doing a gracious work. It was there that I had the pleasure of meeting with that very remarkable man, now Bishop Nakada. He has gifts, graces, courage and power which make him a great factor in evangelism, in the upbuilding and strengthening of this wonderful work in Japan.

Brothers Cowman and Kilbourne have both entered into rest. They were two of the most interesting, humble, sweet-spirited, trustful men I ever saw. There was no excitement about them, nothing crude or dictatorial, but under the power of the Spirit they were real leaders, who were wonderfully used of God. Their work grew into a permanent church in Japan, called the Oriental Missionary Society Japan Holiness Church, which is now not only entirely self-sustaining, on a very firm basis, but making contributions to missionary work elsewhere.

This work has spread into Korea, Manchuria, Formosa and China, with training schools in each field, and a chain of 723 Mission Stations and Out-stations. About 1700 native preachers and Bible women have been trained and 300 students are now in the schools. Throughout the various fields over 400 trained native workers (600 including wives) are now devoting all their time to carrying the message of full salvation to their people, beside something over 30 of our own people giving direction and assistance to the work. From the very beginning the great thought of Brothers Cowman and Kilbourne was to bring the native people into regenerated, consecrated, sanctified, Spirit-filled leadership. Under the blessing of God they have had marvelous success and it is simply wonderful how these consecrated Christians are building churches, building up great schools, educating their workers and pressing forward with an aggressive evangelism that is winning and building in a gracious way. Not one nickel of money devoted to this great work goes for the support of modernists teaching of these pagan peoples to disbelieve the Scriptures and the saving and sanctifying power of Jesus' blood. In all these years of contributions of money to this work, not one penny has been used for the purchase of tobacco, but, with consecration and economy, the money, energies, faith and love of the people have gone forward, kindling holy fires of spiritual life and revival power everywhere.

When I was in Tokyo I preached in the daytime in their training school. I have never seen a place where I was more impressed with the devoted earnestness of the people than at that place. In the evenings I preached at a Baptist Church, one of the largest auditoriums in the city of Tokyo. We had, in a few evenings, something more than a hundred people who professed salvation at the altar. The last four evenings I preached in the city in one of the Methodist churches, and there we had not less than 100 professions of saving faith. Sometimes conversion there means to be converted from their idolatrous beliefs and worship to belief in Christianity, in the Bible as an inspired book, without regenerating power. Such converts must be led on to a saving faith in Christ,—which can be done, by a devout people who are filled with the Spirit. In the meetings to which I refer, most of those at the altar gave every evidence of exercising saving faith and being genuinely regenerated.

The headquarters of this very remarkable full-salvation missionary work are at 832 North Hobart Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. I am spending a few days here, preaching in the evenings. The Oriental Missionary Society people are carrying forward a very gracious work here, for the conversion of sinners and sanctification of believers. Sitting in the pulpit last night and looking out over the audience, I was profoundly impressed with the thought of the prayer, faith and influence of these people that has spread abroad into so many countries beyond the wide seas, and has brought such a multitude of people to Christ, having already sent a great host of immortal souls, sanctified by the precious blood of our risen and triumphant Lord, home to paradise. I could but think what tremendous results the past fifty years would have brought if, in the Mission work of Protestantism, there had been the same consecration, the wonderful sanctifying baptism with the Holy Ghost, and the single eye to the salvation of souls that has characterized the people of this Oriental Missionary Society.

Mrs. Chas. E. Cowman, wife of the founder, is the present President of the Society, carrying on the work of her sainted husband.

Rev. E. O. Rice is Secretary and Treasurer of this Society. The work is under the control and direction of a Board of Trustees who stand firmly together on the Bible basis of the Wesleyan interpretation of full salvation from all sin through the sanctifying power of the Holy Spirit. Recently the work here has taken a step forward by bringing out, as their pastor, Rev. E. W. Petticoat, and Rev. James E. Campbell as song leader. These are men in the prime of life, strong physically, consecrated, sanctified men, with peculiar gifts. We anticipate for them great success and blessing in the work of salvation in this marvelous city. May God continue to bless and guide and keep this work in the homeland and in the foreign fields, in his own mighty hands throughout the future as he has in the past.

AT THE THRESHOLD OF 1931

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

*****

WHO of us is so thoughtless and careless as not to indulge in sober and serious reflections at the exit of the Old Year! Who is it that does not resolve to make the New Year better than its predecessor! The past is chronicled on the pages of life's history; if it has been worth while, well and good; but if the pages are stained by deeds of regret we pause upon the threshold of the New Year and bestir ourselves to better and nobler living.

It is an old and true saying—
"Of all sad words of tongue or pen;
The saddest are these—It might have been."
How gladly all of us would recall the hasty word, the neglected opportunity, the squandered time, but "what is written is written," and while we cannot remedy the past we can make the future count by avoiding the mistakes of the past.

Some one has said that "The proper study of mankind is man." Then let each of us begin by examining ourselves that we may see wherein we need toning up, weeding out, and put in shape for the best and most useful year of our life. May we not be content with anything less than the best, thus heeding the exhortation of the old Book: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Nothing short of this will meet the divine requirement and make life worth while.

Let us closet ourselves with the Searcher of hearts and hear what he would say unto us. I wonder if the rebuke—"I have somewhat against thee," may be fittingly applied to you or me? You recall the charge brought against the Laodicean Church was, "Thou hast lost thy first love." Now honest! Is our love to God as fervent and strong today as it was when the Holy Ghost first shed it abroad in our hearts? Or have the tendrils of the world wound themselves about our hearts and quenched the flame that once glowed with undimmed splendor! How about our consecration? Is our all on the altar of sacrifice laid, or have we kept back part of the price? Are our private devotions as frequent and enjoyable as formerly, or do hosannas languish on our tongues, and our devotion dies?

If we plead guilty of the above, there is comfort in the thought that we can "begin anew our journey to pursue," "forgetting the things that are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, ever looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith."

How shall we provide for the coming twelve months? What repairs does our machinery need? Are there screws to be tightened, bands to be adjusted ere we start on the run of 1931? If so, let us tarry at the mercy seat until we are endued with power from on high. That will enable us to emerge from the tunnel of discouragement, climb the mountain of difficulty, and pass through the valley of humiliation waving the banner of "More than conqueror" over the defeated foe.

There is no such word as "Failure" in the vocabulary of grace; but the note of "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" sings loud and clear from the heart of every trusting child of God. The promise, "Greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world" should stimulate and hearten every soldier of the cross to put up the bravest fight he has ever made. The invisible, yet ever present Paraclete, stands alongside each of us to show himself strong in our behalf when the enemy would lead us into the trenches of affliction, or the wire entanglements of life's temptations and disappointments.

There is no such territory as "No man's land" in the kingdom of grace. Neutrality in the Christian program is an impossibility. We are either for God or against him; and if we would avail ourselves of the resources of grace we must identify ourselves with the allied forces of righteousness, bravely contending for the right unto the end.

With the past under the blood, with our hearts anointed anew by the Holy Spirit, with our armor polished afresh, and our shield of faith between us and the enemy, we have no cause for dismay. If we fear God we have nothing else to fear. "Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ, unto whom be glory forever and ever." Amen!

"PASS THE TIME OF YOUR SOJOURNING HERE IN FEAR."

the Father; God, who knows true values, gave the most costly treasure of his heart, the blood of his Son for us. It is evident that in the eyes of the Father, who judgeth, we are of infinite worth. We have cost the Father so much that we dare not live our days recklessly, indifferently, superficially and ambiguously. To live without great moral caution is to show that we do not appreciate our own worth, nor do we care that God loved us so.

As we advance into this new year, a year that should know much of good cheer, let us set ourselves to think clearly about this brief and perilous sojourning which we call life; and let us never fail to remember that he, on whom we call, is the Father that judgeth with strict impartiality and with consummate loyalty to the facts of our record; and let us never lose sight of the fact that we have been saved from the very practices which are rotting others about us, and that we are of infinite worth to God; and thus we will "pass the time of our sojourning here in fear," and the year before us, and all the years will be satisfactory.

The Price of Success.

"It is a fine thing to face up to life, to respond to the difficulties that it puts in front of us, to match ourselves against its call to do, testing us with hard and worthwhile things. The one who runs away from things is a coward. Facing up to life and taking its difficulties and obligations somewhat seriously is the only way of making life count. Making a success of life in any real way is never child's play. It is never done by accident or trifling. Courage and hard work and persistence are a part of the price that always has to be paid."—Christian Guardian.

THE HERALD BILL OF FARE FOR 1931.

What is the Matter with the World? We have the most aggressive and interesting Bill of Fare for the readers of The Pentecostal Herald for the coming year this paper has ever published.

There will be a series of interesting articles under the head of "What is the Matter With the World?" or a diagnosis of world conditions. A world at war with God cannot be at peace with itself.

The Pope-Emperor.

The Pope-Emperor and his subjects. Some startling facts about the growing political power of Romanism in this nation. These articles ought to be read by a million people.

If Christ Should Come to Jerusalem!

There will be some most interesting chapters under the head—Things We Ought to Think About. Many devout people believe prophecy is fulfilling rapidly, and that we are nearing the end of the age and the Coming of the Lord. Why not read and think on this wonderfully inspiring subject? If the Scriptures teach anything, they teach that Jesus Christ is coming back to this earth in person, and in great glory. This is a neglected subject. Let us study it together.

The Greatest Moral War.

We are now in the throes of the greatest Moral War ever fought out in these United States. The Demon Liquor is making a tremendous assault upon the manhood, womanhood, childhood, home, church, school, health, peace, prosperity and sobriety of this nation. Strong drink is the bitterest foe of God, humanity and Heaven. This coming year this paper will fight the Liquor Demon to the last ditch. Join us in this holy war against all the powers of united evil on earth and in perdition.

A Real Revival of Bible Salvation.

The greatest need of our country is a real revival of Bible Salvation, widespread, deep and abiding. This will be our plea, urgent and constant, January, 1931 to January, 1932. Without Holiness No Man Shall See The Lord. There it is written in the Bible. Should we tear out the leaf on which it is written, or throw the entire Book into the white hot furnace, it will not change the facts. Somewhere, somehow, we must be cleansed from all sin, made holy, or we can never enter Heaven. For forty-three years this paper has sought to spread holiness of heart over this land.

Modernism and Methodism.

We shall have a vigorous discussion under the head of Modernism and Methodism. We have some startling facts on this very vital subject that ought to be known to all Methodists. We shall publish and discuss them at length.

Thirteen Hundred Million Babies.

There are Thirteen Hundred Million Babies due to be born in the next four decades. What will be their color? There is something for you to think about. Well, you can read about it in The Pentecostal Herald the coming year.

The Statesman versus The Politician. Read this as it comes out and think about it. Studies in Isaiah on the Restoration of Israel To Palestine.

Twelve Live Sermons by Dr. Morrison.

The Herald Pulpit

Will give a sermon each week from some wide-awake preacher. These sermons, alone, would make three large volumes, selling at $1.25, each, worth twice the subscription price of The Herald.

The Sunday School Lessons.

Dr. O. G. Minglehoff will continue his illuminating and helpful comments on the Sunday School Lessons. We have not had a man more competent to handle this item of our paper than Dr. Minglehoff—gentleman, scholar, and deeply devout. There will be no "fly in the ointment" of his interpretation of the Scriptures.

Dr. Ridout's Travels Abroad.

Dr. Ridout and wife are traveling in Central and South America, and later in Africa. He will have letters of travel on his usual page.

A Whipping Post Law.

How would it do for the next General Conference to establish a Whipping Post Law for all preachers who fail to bring up full collections for all conference claims? This is a live question. Something must be done. Mere talk won't do it.

Return of the Jews to Palestine.

Do the inspired prophets promise the return of the Jews to Palestine? A live question. Renew your subscription. Let us study the discussions in The Herald for 1931.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE NEW LEAVES.

"Wake up!" said a clear little voice. Tommy woke, and sat up in bed. At the foot of the bed stood a boy about his own age all dressed in white, like a fresh snow. He had very bright eyes, and he looked straight at Tommy.

"Who are you?" asked Tommy. "I am the New Year!" said the boy. "This is my day, and I have brought you your leaves."

"What leaves?" asked Tommy. "The new ones, to be sure," said the New Year. "I hear bad accounts of you from my Daddy—"

"Who is your Daddy?" asked Tommy.

"The Old Year, of course!" said the boy. "He said you asked too many needless questions, and I see he was right. He says you are greedy, too, and that you sometimes pinch your little sister, and that one day you threw your reader into the fire. Now, all this must stop."

"O must it?" said Tommy. He felt frightened, and did not know just what to say.

The boy nodded. "If it doesn't stop," he said, "you will grow worse and worse every year, till you grow up into a Horrid Man. Do you want to be a Horrid Man?"

"N-no!" said Tommy. "Then you must stop being a horrid boy!" said the New Year. "Take your leaves!" and he held out a packet of what looked like copybook leaves, all sparkling white, like his own clothes.

"Turn over one of these leaves every day," he said, "and soon you will be a good boy instead of a horrid one."

Tommy took the leaves and looked at them. On each leaf a few words were written. On one he said, "Help your mother!" On another, "Don't pull the cat's tail!" On another, "Don't eat so much!" And on still another, "Don't fight Billy Jenkins!"

"O, cried Tommy. 'I have to fight Billy Jenkins! He said—'

"Good-by!" said the New Year. "I shall come again when I am old to see whether you have been a good boy or a horrid one. Remember,

"Horrid boy makes horrid man! You alone can change the plan."

He turned away and opened the window. A cold wind blew in and swept the leaves out of Tommy's hand. "Stop! stop!" he cried. "Tell me—" But the New Year was gone, and Tommy, staring after him, saw only his mother coming into the room.

"Dear child," she said. "Why, the wind is blowing everything about."

"My leaves! My leaves!" cried Tommy, and jumping out of bed he looked all over the room, but he could not find one.

"Never mind," said Tommy. "I can turn them just the same, and I mean to. I will not grow into a Horrid Man." And he didn't!—Selected.

A DECEIVER IS DECEIVED.

Mrs. Geneva Mendenhall.

A great many years ago, there lived in the far away land of Canaan, two brothers. Their father's home was a tent; and around it were the tents of his people, and his flocks of sheep and herds of cattle.

One day the younger brother asked the older brother for a very precious gift and the older brother traded it to him for a bowl of stew. After the older brother's hunger was satisfied and he began to realize what a valuable thing he had given away, he became very angry and threatened to kill his brother.

When the boys' mother heard the threat, she told the younger boy that he had better go away for a while to the home of his uncle in Haran.

So the young man left his home on the edge of the wilderness, and walked alone toward a land far to the north, carrying his staff in his hand.

One night in the mountains, far from his home, he lay down on the ground and with a stone for his pillow, he soon fell asleep. And on that night he had a wonderful dream. In his dream he saw a bright strip of light running like a magic carpet from where he lay, far up into the sky. Angels were coming and going in the light, and far away at the very top stood the Lord God. And God spoke, and told the young man that he was the God of his fathers, and would be his God too. And God promised him that his children should spread far and wide through the earth, and that through his family the earth should receive a great blessing.

And the young man awoke praising God and he set up a great stone pillar which he called Bethel, meaning that God was in that place.

Then the young man set out again on his journey. He waded across the river Jordan, climbed great mountains and slowly passed the great desert on the east, until at last he came to the city of Haran.

Now in those days, each city had a great well and when a stranger arrived he usually went first to the well to quench his thirst, rest himself, and meet the people. So the young man went to the well and waited awhile until he saw a young woman coming to water her sheep. He took the flat stone from the top of the well, drew the water and gave it to the sheep. He then discovered that the girl's name was Rachel and that she was a daughter of the very uncle he had come to find. And his uncle, whose name was Laban, gave him a welcome and took him into his home.

After while the young man told Laban that he loved Rachel, and he said, "If you will give me Rachel for my wife, I will work for you seven years." To which bargain Laban agreed, so that the young man cared for his sheep, oxen and camels for seven years, and so great was his love for Rachel that the time passed very quickly. But when the marriage day came, Laban deceived the young man and the bride, covered with a heavy veil turned out to be an older daughter, Leah, whom he did not love at all.

The young man was very angry, but Laban explained to him that in their land they could not allow a younger daughter to marry before an older one. "But," he added, "if you will work seven years longer you may have Rachel also." For in those times men often had two wives. So the young man worked seven years more, fourteen years in all, before he won Rachel for his wife.

In the land of Haran the young man had become rich, having received a share of the sheep, oxen and camels as wages for his work. After twenty years he decided to go back to the land of Canaan to see his brother, and his father, who was still living.

So one day he gathered together his wives and eleven sons, and all his sheep and cattle, and camels and started back to Canaan. But on the way he heard that his brother Esau was coming to meet him, and he was terribly afraid to see him. That night he sent a rich present on before him, and he prayed earnestly to the Lord. And while he was alone, he felt that a man had taken hold of him. And he wrestled all night with the man, who was an angel. But in the end the angel gave him a new name and blessed him, so that he was no longer afraid. And when he met his brother, Esau ran to meet him, threw his arms around his neck, and the two men wept together.

1. What was the young man's name?

2. What was the gift he asked of his brother?

3. What new name did the angel give him?

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come asking admittance to your friendly circle again. Aunt Bettie, I wish to thank you for publishing my first letter. Through it I won the sweetest pen pal, Miss Grace Shoel, in Philadelphia. And my father received several good books from a man who read my letter, Geo. I. Marinar, of New York. So you see it not only brought pleasure to me, but to father also. I would be glad to hear from the cousins whose ages are between seventeen and twenty-five or thirty. My birthday is Sept. 19. Does any one have my birthday? If so, please write. Bonnie Lee Pennycuff.

Decide, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little country girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have red hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am eleven years old and in the fifth grade. I joined the Methodist Church last summer. I think everybody ought to try to live right. My Aunt Mary takes The Pentecostal Herald and she sends it to me and I enjoy reading page ten. My weight is seventy-one pounds. Lillian Marie Carroll.

Kilmichael, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter. I attend the Free Methodist Church. I have a guinea pig and a kitten. I am a Christian. I hope all the other children are, too. We have a little calf. Papa takes The Pentecostal Herald. I am ten years old; papa is fifty-five years old. Elizabeth Jolley.

Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been a good while since I have written to the dear old Herald. I am always glad to see the day come to get The Herald. It sure has meant lots to me. It comes next to the blessed Bible. Dear boys and girls, keep close to the Lord, for he is our best friend in time of need. I am thankful each day, he has been so good to me. My heart goes out for lost souls. Bro. Morrison's health is improving. The Lord is sparing him for some great work. Dear boys and girls, don't go to dances, swimming pools, movies nor any other worldly places for that isn't pleasing unto God. I belong to the Methodist Church. Our pastor is Rev. J. S. Maxie. He is a good preacher. I live on a farm, and enjoy it very much. Effie Dixon.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Mississippi boy join your band of boys and girls? I will be fourteen years old March 15. Who is my twin? I enjoy page ten because it has so many Christian letters in it. I go to Sunday school and church. I want all of you cousins to pray for my home. Mother died Dec. 24, 1919. I know she went to Jesus because she was a Christian woman. I now have a step-mother and she is a Christian too. I have five brothers and four sisters. God bless the cousins and Aunt Bettie. Tilman W. Swales.

Edinburg, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for a Virginia boy? I am nine years old and in the third grade. My birthday is August 26. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I have a good father and mother. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins. Amos L. Ness.

Galax, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am trying to live for Jesus. He has done so much for me. The more I serve him the more real he seems to me. I love him this morning with all my heart and am more determined to do his will than ever before. I have been in several meetings this past summer and fall and seen many souls saved. We have Sunday school every Sunday and prayer meeting every Saturday night. We had a great revival here this summer, about fifty souls were saved. Rev. G. C. Hesson did the preaching. He is an old-time gospel preacher. Would like to hear from some of the boys and girls of page ten. Will try to answer all I receive. Mary Waller.

Rt. 1, Carthage, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I too would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. I am a Christian and attend the Reformed Baptist Church. My father takes The Pentecostal Herald and I like to read page ten very much. I hope to see this letter in print as it is the first I have written to you. Mary Henry. I guess your middle name to be Helen. Please be sure to write to me. Vera Glasgow, I guess your middle name to be Marie. My age is fourteen years, and my birthday is July 5. I am a Sophomore in high school and my favorite game is basket ball. Would some one please inform me who Mr. W. B. is? I will answer the letters or any of the boys and girls who write.

Myrtle M. Beal.
Beals, Maine.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I live in Bardstown, Ky., where "My Old Kentucky Home" was written. I am twelve years old and in the seventh grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My preacher is Brother Perry S. Stone. He is a grand preacher. Tell the others to write to me. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with P and ends with R, and his six letters in it. I hope to see my letter in. Anita P. Monroe.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Nebraska girl enter your ring of boys and girls? I am twelve years old, and fifty-nine inches high. I am in the sixth grade. I can't go to church because there isn't any near. Myrtle E. Punner. I guess your second name to be Eva. Am I right? My middle name begins with J and ends with H. I will answer all letters received. I will close, hoping to see this letter in print. Esco Brooks.

Box 83, Republican, Neb.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please make room for two Tennessee sisters in your happy band? This is our first letter to The Herald and would be glad to see it in print. We enjoy the cousins' letters, and think The Herald is a grand paper. As we are strangers will tell about ourselves. We look like twins, though we are not; have brown hair and eyes, about five feet and three inches high, weigh one hundred and three pounds. Our age is between seventeen and twenty-six. The one guessing the nearest to our age will send a snapshot. I, Nannie Mae, am the oldest. We go to church and enjoy going there more than anywhere. Our father and mother are both living. They own a farm of one hundred acres, with a six-room bungalow house sixteen miles from Winchester. We live only one and a half miles from a small village of Lois. Or home is among the hills and we get very lonesome. We hope all you boys and girls will please write to us. Mother told us when we were little, "When you visit friends don't stay too long." We'll go and give room for some one else. Thanking Aunt Bettie for printing our letter. Nannie Mae and Jewel Evans.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I see I have a twin. I am an old subscriber to The Herald, the best paper I ever saw. My birthday is May 15. I had a brother just two years to a day younger than myself, but, born May 15. He died the 4th of Last May. How I do miss him. Mary E. Taylor.

Cynthiana, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? We don't take The Herald but one of our neighbors lets us have her paper to read. I enjoy reading it, especially page ten. I have brown hair, brown eyes, and am four feet, eight and one-half inches tall and am ten years old. My birthday is December 21. Have I a twin? If so please write to me. I am in the fifth grade at school, and I like to go to school. As this is my first letter I will close with lots of love to the cousins. I hope to see this in print. Alma Lee Carver.

Rt. 3, Alvaton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I was requested by a reader of The Pentecostal Herald, also a Christian, to write you. She would like your prayers and letters from readers. Her health is very poor, much needing an operation—without any funds. She has a little boy who cannot go to school for lack of clothes and books. Her name is Mrs. R. L. Meador, Cohutta, Ga., Route 1. Am in hopes she will get letters and prayers, also some one will get some clothes so the boy may go to school. The Pentecostal Herald has my prayers for greater success.

FALLEN ASLEEP

WOOLEN.

F. W. Woolen fell asleep at 8:30 P. M., November 5, 1930, in Levering Hospital, Hannibal, Mo. His funeral was held by the writer in the Hannibal Holiness Mission, Nov. 7. The Scripture for the occasion was taken from Job 5:25, 26, "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in its season. Thou shalt know also that thy seed shall be great, and thine offspring as the grass of the field." A large congregation of loved ones, friends and citizens of Hannibal and New London came to pay their last respects.

Brother Woolen was a little past his 80th year, and had been associated with the Holiness people of eastern Missouri and western Illinois for over a quarter of a century. His beaming countenance was ever an inspiration and a blessing. He was gifted as a personal worker and soul winner. Both young and old held him in highest esteem.

He leaves a wife, three daughters, two sons, three sisters and a brother, besides a large number of grandchildren, to mourn his going. He won the respect and affection of his nurses in the nearly three weeks he was in the hospital. God's sustaining grace was never more evident than in Sister Woolen as she waited at his bedside. Some one remarked, "She is a living example of what sanctifying grace can do."

We laid him away in beautiful Berkley Cemetery at New London, and await the resurrection morning to see again his loving face.

ARNOLD.

Rev. J. D. Arnold departed this life Sunday night, Oct. 26, 1930. He attended church at the morning service, prayed a pointed prayer, walked about four miles, ate a hearty supper, and insisted that the family go to church for the night service. All decided and went on to the service leaving Grandma Arnold with him. In a short time after they had gone he had prayer as usual, only omitted the reading of the Bible, then he added fuel to the fire, got a drink of water, sat down in his chair, drew a long breath and was dead; never spoke one word.

Brother Arnold lived to a ripe old age being seventy-nine his last birthday. He leaves to mourn his loss a faithful companion, one son and daughter-in-law, and four grandchildren. Brother Arnold has been a preacher in the Free Methodist Church for a number of years. We all loved Uncle Jim. To know him was to love him. We ask all the family of God to remember the precious family in their sad hour of grief. One who loved him very much.

C. M. Smith.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Once again I am asking the readers of The Pentecostal Herald to remember me in prayer while I am on the World's Missionary Journey. The Lord willing, I shall leave from Los Angeles, Jan. 28 on the N. Y. K. Steamship Line, on boat Muru Tatsuta. I will be in Japan first and then Korea and China. Next I shall be in India. The Lord permitting, I shall go overland from Calcutta to Bombay, and try to reach the important missionary centers. From India I shall sail to Egypt and Holy Lands, and return home through important centers of Europe. Anyone in any of these countries interested in my ministry, may address me at Oregon, Wis., or P. O. Box 1489, Shanghai, China, care of Oriental Missionary Society.—Rev. C. H. Jack Linn.

NOTICE!

Mrs. Tommie Mercer, Douglas, Ga., writes that her children need clothing. She has a girl four years of age and a boy 6. They are in need of any kind of clothing, and those who may have articles suitable for children of these ages may send them to the above address.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

J. K. Kelley: "I am writing you to make special request for prayer for Mrs. J. K. Kelley, who is critically ill. Furthermore, Mrs. Kelley asked that you make special prayer for her. She has great mental suffering, which threatens the loss of her mind."

Mrs. J. M.: "Pray for me and my dear husband and three children that we may be healed of our affliction; also for father, mother and brothers."

A Reader: "Pray that my husband may become a Christian, and that he may be successful in a certain undertaking."

E. T. W.: "Pray for a worldly mother that she may be saved, and that the home may become a Christian home."

Mrs. W. R. V.: "Pray earnestly for the salvation of my daughter."

M. C. W.: "Join me in prayer for some glorious victories, all of which I am asking in this request."

Anxious Mother: "Pray for my children to be saved and that we have family worship and be a comfort to each other."

A Mother: "Pray that my husband may be saved, and for my daughter that she may be healed."

An Anxious Aunt: "Pray for a woman who has a weak mind that God's love may fill her heart."

A LETTER FROM BROTHER McCORD.

Since my last article appeared I wish to give you a more recent report. I was in the hospital for over five months; wife was in Wesley Memorial Hospital for over four months. September 13, one of Atlanta's best surgeons operated on wife to find that her trouble was cirrhosis of the liver, for which medical skill had nothing to offer. The doctor sewed her up, brought my son nearly to my hospital and on putting him out of the car said, "She may live two days, but don't tell your father her condition." I knew she was being operated on and was expecting good news; when my son came to my bedside I saw there was something radically wrong. When he told me we both cried, and he said, "I'd rather she had died when she was in that same hospital when I was only nine months old."

The awful news completely floored me, but having been a prize fighter in my early days, God did not let me take the full count out, but said, "Get to prayer quickly." I sent for a nearby preacher to go and anoint her and pray for her, but he did not have the faith for a seemingly impossible case. God spoke to me again, saying, "Like Hezekiah of old, you have served me without a break since your sanctification 27 years ago. Get up and go 16 miles to your wife, anoint and pray for her, as per James." I got out of bed and made the trip by street car and obeyed God. The doctor patted me on the back and said, "Dr. McCord, we are doing all we can for her." I was too full for utterance, but mumbled out, "Doctor, you have the Great Physician in the case with you." I promised God if he would spare wife to me and son we would give our lives to the ministry of divine healing. We are now at home in Sale City, Ga. I want to thank all of you for your prayers, letters of cheer, checks and well wishes. God has never failed me. Yours under the blood and in perfect peace and love.

W. Walstein McCord.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. W. H. Liphthrott: "God saved me, 15 years ago, and he keeps me pressing on each day. Last fall I was taken seriously ill, and I promised God if he would raise me up I would work in his vineyard. God called me to go into the highways and hedges and has blessed my work. My husband was taken ill and I had to make the living for a family of seven, and I became careless about the Lord's work. God showed me my backslidden condition and I confessed my sins and God set me back upon the Rock. I am now working among the poor fishermen at Stephenville, Fla. These people had no church, school, Sunday school, and fished on Sunday as on any other day, but since my coming here they have a church, Sunday school, prayer meeting where souls are saved. We need your prayers, that God may increase our tithes and offerings that we may be able to keep the work going."

A. S. Beck: "We closed our tent meeting in Columbia, Ky., with the largest crowd we have been privileged to speak to in five years. 83 souls were saved during the meeting. We moved to Campbellsville, put up our tent and had a number saved. When the weather changed we moved to the courthouse and had large crowds. Bro. A. E. Minnick was with us the closing service at Columbia, and preached a number of times for us at Campbellsville. He has great success wherever he goes. There were 27 converted in the Campbellsville meeting; among them drunkards and bootleggers. Members of the Christian church cooperated beautifully and we were kindly cared for in a Presbyterian home. We promised them we would come back in 1931. We have won hundreds of souls this year. My address is 1019 S. Fourth Ave., Louisville, Ky."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson III.—January 18, 1931.

Subject.—The Ministry of John the Baptist. Luke 3:7-17.

Golden Text.—Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance. Luke 3:8.

Time.—A. D. 26.

Place.—West side of the Jordan, east of Jerusalem.

Introduction.—It is by no means easy to make a just estimate of the ministry of John the Baptist. He was God's prepared man for a special work; and we must see him from that standpoint, or we shall not see him at all. He came of a good heredity, and grew up under good environment. Some who rest upon the dollar basis might think otherwise concerning his home life and his desert life in after years; but God needed a rugged man for rugged work, and had John brought up to meet the strenuous work of his after years. God can do little with a nice little kid-gloved, bejeweled dilettante who has been brought up in the shade with a gold spoon in his mouth. He wants men who can stand sunshine and rain, sleet and snow—men who can live on coarse fare, and sleep on the ground, if need be. All this he found in John the Baptist; wherefore he was a chosen vessel for a high calling.

John's ministry was short, rapid and pungent. It was his to tear down mountains and hills, to fill up valleys and gorges, to make rough roads smooth and crooked highways straight. He was preparing for the coming of the King of Glory. Others might have time to plant shrubbery and cultivate flowers along the way: he was too busy blasting out rock and laying down concrete. He was about thirty years old when God spoke to him out in the desert, and told him that it was time for preaching. It was a stormy time in his country. The Jews were groaning under Roman domination, against whom their hatred burned like a furnace. Tiberius Caesar reigned in Rome, and the hated Pontius Pilate governed Judaea, while Herod ruled in Galilee. To preach at such a time and in such a region was almost as dangerous as putting fire into a powder mine. It was not a time for one to count his life dear unto himself.

We have no need to suppose that God had no good people in those days: He has never left himself without witnesses of his saving grace. Even in the days of Elijah he had seven thousand who had not bowed the knee to Baal. One would hunt a long time to find better souls than Zacharias and Elizabeth, who walked in all the ordinances of God blameless. Simeon and Anna, who were in the temple when Jesus was brought in to do for him after the demands of the law, were saints of God. John had a chosen handful to say "amen" to his preaching; and he needed some human backing, as every true preacher of the Gospel does.

John's preaching was severe. He had no flattery for rich or cultured sinners. All were sinners before God—rich and poor, high and low. "Repent ye," was his cry to all. Proud Pharisees in their phylacteries, paupers in their rags, and soldiers with their arms clanking at their sides were all sinners alike to him. His after-meetings cut to the blood. Roman tax-collectors were told to collect no more than the law allowed. Soldiers must oppress no one, and be content with their wages. He surely made short work of hypocritical aristocrats. They would have killed him long before Herod got his head, if he had not been under divine protection.

John's baptism could hardly be called something new, seeing that it had long been the custom among the Jews to sprinkle clean water upon repenting backsliders. Under the cutting words of John vast multitudes of Jews professed repentance, and John simply did what others before him had done: With a bunch of hyssop he sprinkled them with water from the Jordan, calling it a baptism unto repentance.

One point in John's ministry deserves special notice: The baptism of Jesus. Jesus had no sin, and for that reason could not be baptized unto repentance. For nearly 1500 years every high priest among the Jews had been sprinkled with water from a running brook, and afterwards anointed with the holy oil of the tabernacle. This was the initiatory ceremony for the high priest; and Jesus being its fulfillment, having come to fulfill the last jot and tittle of the law, must enter his high-priestly office in exactly the same way, except that the oil that was typical of the Holy Ghost must give way to his coming. This was the most sacred act in all the ministry of John.

Comments on the Lesson

7. O generation of vipers.—Vipers are poisonous snakes. Matthew says that John made this thrust at a multitude of Pharisees and Sadducees who came to his baptism. There was lightning in that. Who hath warned you?—John does not seem to have thought that his preaching could arouse such hypocritical sinners as he knew them to be. He had no confidence in them.

8. Fruits worthy of repentance.—If your repentance is genuine, live up to its demands; quit all your meanness, and live clean lives. That is good preaching for any people. We have Abraham to our father.—They banked on their descent from Abraham. Being his children made heaven their eternal home, no matter how they behaved themselves. But John gave them to understand that God did not need them at all. If he wanted more children of Abraham, he could turn a pile of stones into children. Whenever we think that God cannot get along without us, the time has come for us to visit a mourner's bench.

9. The axe is laid unto the root of the trees.—I wonder if John could have used severer words than he uses in this verse. He meant to say that those Pharisees and Sadducees were the trees that were bringing forth bad fruit, and that God was going to cut them down and send them to hell. We are in direful need of a lot of just such preaching today in America. Our people have become so slobbered over with the softsoap of Modernism, that we need an army of men like John the Baptist with their scrubbing brushes and caustic potash to do a bit of scouring to clean up the churches and the nation. A full hundred such men might be a blessing to the City of Washington and the surrounding country.

10. The people asked him.—This request seems to have come from the common people who composed the multitude. They wanted to know the way of salvation. They were different from the aristocrats with whom John had so little patience, and with whom he had dealt so severely.

11. He that hath two coats.—Christianity makes every man his brother's keeper. One who has the things of this world must divide with his needy fellowman, or forfeit his peace with God. There is no use in trying to explain away God's command when there is real need; but one is not to feed a lazy fellow who will not work. Paul settles that: "If any will not work, neither shall he eat." The command is reasonable. We are God's stewards.

12. Publicans.—These were Jews who had become tax-collectors under the Romans, and were thoroughly hated for it by their own people. They were regarded by the Jews as the very worst of sinners. Matthew and Zachaeus belonged to this class. They needed salvation not because they were publicans, but because they were sinners.

13. Exact no more than that which is appointed you.—The tax rate was fixed by the Romans; but some of these publicans were in the habit of "squeezing" the people, to use a term that is common among the English speaking people in the Orient. They put on an extra tax to fill their own bank accounts. In other words, they were a set of common grafters—thieves, to be plain.

14. Soldiers.—I suppose these were heathen Romans doing duty in Palestine. John does not mince matters with them: "Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your wages."

15. The people were in expectation.—There was a conviction upon the people that the time was approaching for the appearance of the promised Messiah: and some of them concluded that possibly John was the promised One.

16. I indeed baptize you with water.—Not in water. That is a physical impossibility. John was baptizing them unto repentance; that would be the end of his ministry; but One mightier than he was coming after him, who would baptize with the Holy Ghost and fire. This was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost when tongues of fire sat upon the heads of the one hundred and twenty and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost.

17. Whose fan is in his hand.—Referring to the old process of winnowing out the chaff from the wheat. The Jews would have no trouble in understanding the figure. The wheat, good people, would be housed in heaven; but the chaff, bad people, would be sent to hell forever. John's preaching was plain. No one could misunderstand him. It was great preaching—great in its simplicity.

Among those who have purchased one of Asbury's mattresses is Dr. Clarence True Wilson, nationally known temperance leader, whose testimonial I am quoting:

"I have three of your finely made and most comfortable mattresses in my home out in Portland. In adjoining rooms there are beds equipped with the famous 'Beauty Sleep' mattresses and these are not superior to yours in any respect. If the people knew that students of Asbury were making the best mattresses in the country, you would be swamped with orders. In the first place, we get better mattresses for less, and in the second place, it helps to maintain the best Christian school in this country and to equip the best Christian workers who are being sent out by any college to help make this a better world. I am glad that I heard your announcement in the Chapel at the last Commencement and that I now have three of these mattresses in my home. Am glad to own them because of what they are and what they represent."—Dr. Clarence True Wilson, General Secretary Board of Temperance Prohibition and Public Morals of the M. E. Church, Washington, D. C.

There are other splendid testimonials which we could give, but we ask that you learn of the excellency of these products by becoming the possessor of one. As soon as we can get settled we have given orders for two, and am sure we shall not be disappointed in our investment.

THE JUNIOR BOND ISSUE OF TAYLOR UNIVERSITY

To overcome the crisis in the financial world; to provide a ready and safe means for friends to render the needed assistance in making the payments now falling due for its plant and shelter, Taylor University announces an issue of Junior Bonds and invites the friends of Christian students to make investment in any amounts from $50.00 to $1,000.00 or more, as early as possible in the present year.

THE INVESTMENT IS ATTRACTIVE

- (1) Because it pays 7% per annum
- (2) Because the bonds are callable at 2%.
- (3) Because of its philanthropic character.

SECURITY AND SINKING FUND

The security for this $150,000.00 Junior Bond Issue is as follows:

|                                                                                                              |                     |
| Equities in productive property in Minneapolis, Minnesota, Fort Wayne, Huntington, and Upland, Indiana ..... | $100,000.00        |

The institution is delayed in realizing upon these assets because of depressed values or for other reasons. It is the purpose to retire this bond issue, which is a five year issue, before it matures. At least 50% of collections from the product, sales or collections of the above assets will go into a sinking fund for this purpose.

With all its splendid assets, with its beautiful Christian Education work going forward in full volume, Taylor University is in distress for cash. Your immediate investment is requested as an act of friendship to the cause. We know you may find other opportunities of investment which are just as attractive, but in this you will be meeting a need while you serve yourself. The interest is 7%, payable annually.

Make check, in multiples of $50.00, payable to Taylor University. Send to W. V. Bishop, Bursar, Upland, Indiana. Your interest of 7% will begin as soon as your check reaches the school and you will be given an Interim Certificate till your bond is ready.

PERSONALS.

Roy R. Decker: "Walter R. Decker has assisted me in four evangelistic campaigns as soloist and song leader. His ability as a soloist is especially marked. He sings in the spirit and interprets the blessed Gospel in song with wonderful expression. His work with the children is inspiring and he knows how to make the congregation respond to his leadership. He is a willing worker and a hard worker and will fit into the program of an evangelist or pastor. The congregations where he has assisted me have been gracious in their praise for his excellent services. I unhesitatingly recommend him to any evangelist, any pastor, any congregation."

John J. Hunt: "Brother Walter Decker, of Corry, Pa., assisted with me in a camp meeting at Hurlock, Md., in July, 1927. I found him a young man of sterling virtues and fine spirituality. He led the singing with art and evangelistic pathos. His personality is pleasing and his manner winsome. In his solo work he displayed considerable ability as well as adaptability. He is an inspirational, evangelistic singer capable of splendid usefulness. I heartily commend him to the holiness folk through the U. S. A."

H. R. Burton: "The revival recently held at Asbury Chapel, with the Rev. E. G. Grimes, of Vincennes, as the evangelist, was one of the best in the history of the church; not so much in the number of conversions but in the spiritual awakening of the church. There were eighteen conversions and two sanctified, all adults. Sixteen united with the church. Rev. Grimes is a safe and sound advocate of holiness. His sermons are helpful and inspiring. Will heartily recommend him to any one that wants an old-fashioned Methodist revival."

Does your church need a revival? I want to tell you of a God-called man. His name is Rev. L. S. Hoover, of Bedford, Indiana. He is fearless yet tender, and preaches a full salvation and a complete deliverance from sin. For two years he was one of our engaged evangelists at Mt. Lookout Camp Meeting, at Lima, Ohio. His work is of the highest type, clean and efficient. I am only delighted to recommend him to my brethren.—Rev. Roy C. Dotson, Pres. Mt. Lookout Camp.

BEACON LIGHTS OF FAITH

By CHARLES F. WIMBERLY

Is a book "no preacher can afford to be without. It contains information every Christian ought to have. It is entertaining and instructive to a high degree."

"This book is inspiring because it is informing. It is a book of genuine value for preachers, Sunday school teachers and all others who would have intelligence about the history of Christ."—Christian Evangelist.

Edmonton, Alta, Can., in the Pantages Theater. Practically all the full salvation churches and missions in the city are in the campaign. Large crowds are attending and many souls are seeking and finding. The city is being stirred more and more. We are having some remarkable conversions. We are praying that hundreds may be brought to God. The streets of the city are filled with men and women who are out of work. Then the drink curse is awful in Canada. We have seen more men and women under the influence of liquor in our visit to three cities—Vancouver, Calgary and Edmonton—than we have seen in the states during the past five years. The so-called "Government Liquor Control" is a terrible farce. The God-fearing, law-abiding citizens are heart sick over the situation and are praying and working for deliverance from its unspeakable curse."

H. A. Foust: "After a victorious year spent in evangelistic work we have accepted the pastorate of the First Church of the Nazarene, New Orleans, La. This beautiful city has a religious background that is wonderful and historic. It has thrived under four different flags; some of the greatest preachers of our day have filled the pulpits of this city. It is half-way between the North and Florida. We invite the holiness people who may be passing through to stop and worship with us. If any one reading these lines should have friends in this city, who might be interested in having us visit them, write us and them. Our address is 1225 Fern St., New Orleans, La."

DEATH DOES NOT END ALL.

By The Editor.

THE Bible plainly teaches that if a man die he shall live again. Death is not the end; it is simply a transition. It is moving from one place of habitation to another, and the mover carries with him his real self, the soul with all its faculties. He has the same character over in that other world that he had here. Whatever changes are made in the soul must be made in this world during the life of an individual; that is to say, a change from bad to good, from the state of sin to the state of salvation. No doubt there will be change in the spirit world; the good will doubtless grow and rise into higher states of comprehension, capacity and appreciation; the bad will no doubt descend into deeper states of darkness and woe.

* * * *

The preacher should very faithfully point out to men the nature of sin, its bad effects on character in this life, and the fearful ruin it brings in the life to come. Jesus Christ did not hesitate to speak in plainest terms and picture with vivid figures the woe and torture that await the impenitent wicked in the world to come which, in the Bible, is named Hell. It is a place of doom for those who trample upon God's law and reject God's mercy in this life, who would not be saved, who chose to sin and take the consequences. The consequences of sin are fearful in this line. Near where I am writing, a man who had participated in a murder a few days ago was sentenced to the penitentiary for life. If he should live a hundred or a thousand years the sentence hangs over him. The violators of God's law and the rejecters of his love sentence themselves to the dark prison house of the lost for all eternity.

* * * *

I do not believe we shall ever have in this country the great revival we need until the people are made to see sin in the light of the ruin it brings, the unreasonableness of it, the hurtfulness of it here and the awful hell which awaits its deluded victims hereafter. God has implanted fear in the human heart, a very useful and important part of a man's nature. It keeps him out of the fire; it keeps him out of water too deep for him to wade if he cannot swim; it guards him against disease; it makes him hasten for a cure if disease has laid hold upon him; it makes him very careful at the street crossings. If the race should be robbed of this element of fear things would go topsy-turvy and society would be broken up and the world would become a slaughter-house of accident, disease and death.

* * * *

God in the Holy Scriptures constantly appeals to the fear he has implanted in the human breast. He warns, entreats, threatens and points out the results of sin. He thus strives to awaken fear and turn men away from sin. It is a very important part of the preacher's business to drive into, and fasten upon, the hearts and minds of the people a holy awe, a fear to sin against God, an ab-

TO GO OR STAY.

(A little poem from Dr. Morrison's sick room)

Oh Christ, my Lord, my Saviour dear,
Shall I come home, or tarry here?
I do not know what is the best—
For me to labor, or to rest.

I find my heart doth long to see
A host of sinners won to Thee.
Guide Thou me with Thy strong hand,
I'll fully follow Thy command.

So I will gladly come or stay
To preach the Word while yet 'tis day;
To help some prodigals to turn
Their weary feet toward Father's Home.

All rugged paths are smooth to me,
If I but know I walk with Thee;
And when my little task is done,
For Thee to welcome me up Home.

H. C. M.

horrence of things that are evil, a dread of the consequences of sin, a good square look at what sin will bring; an intelligent comprehension and appreciation of the Bible teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ on this awful subject of the future state of the wicked. This does not mean that the preacher must abuse the people or storm and rave at them. It means that with earnestness, in the language of the Word of God, in harmony with the teachings of Jesus, he must make men to know and feel the final, awful outcome of a wicked, impenitent life.

What is the Matter with the World?

No. II.

THE diagnosis of a sinsick world we note some ugly symptoms in South America. They have had war in only seven of those republics down there within the past twelve months; killed quite a number of poor, ignorant people, driven out of office five presidents, a sixth one resigned, but is persuaded to go back into office. The Patient is no better; not a sign of improvement, but fever high and great restlessness. Bloodshed is certain; possibly a short delay, but bloodshed by bullet and bayonet sure to begin soon.

Those poor, starving, ragged, dirty, diseased, misruled people have all been Roman Catholics for centuries; no Bibles, no saving gospel, no civilization worth the name. If this republican Raskob, Chairman of the Democratic Party, was not so busy giving thousands of dollars to get rid of the Eighteenth Amendment and bring back the saloon, so dear to him and his like, he might spend a few of his millions buying Bibles to distribute among his fellow Romanists down in that priest-ridden country. Come to think of it, if Raskob should be guilty of such a sin against Rome as to have ten thousand Bibles distributed in those Catholic countries, I warrant the Pope would ex-communicate him. Think of that for a minute!

Give those South American people a half century of pure gospel, with the Bible and public school, and that country would be regenerated. Modernist missionaries would do them no good. They need godly preachers and teachers to lead them to Christ.

Mexico has not had a war for several weeks. The shameful assassinations which have been committed, or undertaken, down there against men who have endeavored to lead their people out into better things, have always been done by devout Romanists.

There is little hope for this Patient, suffering to the south of us, without a complete change of intellectual and spiritual diet. The essential remedy does not seem to be at hand; all the indications are that there will be rebellion, riot, and bloodshed for some time to come.

What of our concern, did you say? Careful, there! The disease of restlessness is contagious as smallpox. The nations are coming to be such near neighbors that no one can safely say, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

More diagnosis next week.

CHAPTER I.

Iwant the readers of this paper to go with me patiently and thoughtfully through several chapters on the subject indicated at the head of this article, and see if they do not furnish food for sober reflection.

If God spares me to write for THE HERALD this year, much of what I shall have in mind will be colored with the truth contained in two verses found in the twelfth chapter of Revelation. Read the ninth verse of that chapter: "And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him."

The reader will please to notice that at the present time the Devil and his angels are inhabitants of this world; and note their employment, "which deceive the whole world." Read the twelfth verse: "Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the Devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time."

I shall write quite a bit this year with these two verses in mind. Believing the Scriptures as I do, and believing that the Devil is a powerful, personal being making havoc of the human race, I shall attribute

TRAVEL NOTES AND SALVATION TIDINGS.

I am writing this in Salvador, the smallest of all the Central American Republics. It has a coast line of about 140 miles, and in size would about equal the State of Vermont. Its population is above a million. It is a land of volcanoes; one of them, Mount Izalco, has been called by sailors the "Lighthouse of Salvador." At night the glare from its fiery crater could be seen far out on the Pacific. Salvador had an earthquake in 1917 destroying about fifteen million dollars worth of property. It is quite progressive in its government and its capital city, San Salvador, is about the most modern and progressive city in Central America. It raises coffee, sugar, cotton and Peruvian balsam used so much in medicines and perfumery. Religiously, it is Catholic, but missionary work is getting in and souls are being saved and sanctified; where Bible salvation is being preached good gospel results ensue.

As one reads the history of the Pacific, the Caribbean and the South Seas it is full of stories of the Buccaneers and Pirates, Sea Rovers and scoundrels. Strange that a lot of the activities of these fellows were garnished with prayers and worship. How terrible is the story of blood-thirsty Morgan and the sack of Panama, 1671. After looting the city which, in those days, was one of the richest cities of the western world, he set fire to it and after five days burning it was nothing but a smoking heap of ashes. Morgan set out for the Caribbean with 175 mules laden with gold, silver and other treasure, and a train of 600 Spanish captives held by him for ransom. When they begged for mercy his answer was, "He came not to hear lamentations and cries, but rather to seek money." It is almost unthinkable that such a pirate and scoundrel should be knighted by the King, and afterwards made Governor of Jamaica.

Another outstanding buccaneer was Drake, afterwards famous as Sir Francis Drake, who defeated the Spanish Armada when it came to destroy England. As buccaneer, he sailed the ship known as The Golden Hind; his greatest capture was the galleon Cocafuego, a Spanish treasure ship. On board he found fourteen great chests of gold and silver and other bars and wedges of silver and gold weighing, so the story goes, some twenty-six tons. The value of the spoil, if put into present day terms, was equal to fifteen million dollars. After looting the ship of her treasure Drake permitted the Captain and crew to proceed on their way, after making valuable presents to the Captain and giving each member of the crew a gift of money and clothing. One thing to Drake's credit was the fact that he killed no Spaniard and spilled no blood. His captures were all bloodless. These things happened in Queen Elizabeth's time when the ethics of government were not quite as rigid as they are today, when it comes to the freedom of the seas and international law. Indeed, I suppose one thing which justified Drake in his looting was, that a state of war was existing between Spain and Britain.

We hear and read much about the Revolutions in Central and South America. To us North Americans it seems strange and unfortunate, but it will help some of my readers to understand things a trifle better if I explain that this is seemingly the one and only way to secure a change in governments in these Republics. It seems impossible to have what may be called a decent election by ballot, so when one party wants to put the other out it is by bullets instead of ballots—hence the Revolution—so called. It is the fellow who can command the most force that gets the reins of government in most instances. Take Guatemala, for instance. It was ruled for a quarter of a century by a despot, Manuel Estrada Cabrera. When Barrios was assassinated this man walking in on a Cabinet meeting laid a revolver upon the table and said: "Gentlemen, I am President of Guatemala." He was two-thirds Indian and they knew what he meant, and it was settled there and then. When his term was out he would announce that he wished to be relieved of public office and hoped that some other candidate would step out. This was his way of finding out who opposed him, and no candidate was willing to run the risk as he knew it meant imprisonment and, possibly, death. Finally, this despot was overcome and ended his life in prison. Since then Guatemala has had a fair government. Those Revolutions occurring in other Republics are only an attempt to change governments. Time may come when it will be done by ballots not bullets.

IV.

The relationship of the United States to Central America is very close and vital. One has said, "The U. S. A. is friend, teacher, policeman in one to Central America." From Washington to Panama Uncle Sam exerts a big moral and political interest which must not be lessened or ignored. Today a number of American officers came on board at Corinto Nicaragua. I found upon inquiry that we have groups of American officers in various parts of this Republic and for good reasons, not the least of which, may be that we have a three million dollar interest in the Canal project which some day will materialize.

When the French undertook to build the Panama Canal they put into it over three hundred millions of dollars and all they got from it was the death of hundreds of Frenchmen and thousands of others, extravagance by the managers, and bankruptcy. The United States built the Canal for three hundred and seventy-five millions and made a success of it because they first proceeded to clean up the Isthmus of yellow fever and malaria. The motto was "first clean." For four hundred years the name Panama was associated with yellow fever and malaria. It used to be said before the U. S. A. took hold of it that there are two seasons at Panama: First, there is the wet season, lasting from the 15th of April to the 15th of December, when people die of yellow fever in four or five days. Next, there is the dry, or healthy season, when people die of pernicious fever in from twenty-four to thirty-six hours." It was the mosquito known as the "stegomopia" about one third the size of the Jersey mosquito, with zebra-white and black stripes upon its body, that did the mischief. When a female of that breed bites a yellow fever patient its blood becomes inoculated with yellow fever bacteria, and when it bites a person there is no chance of escaping the fever.

V.

The Panama Canal saves 8,000 miles between New York and San Francisco. We can now reach the Atlantic from the Pacific in ten hours whereas prior to 1914, it took 30 days and entailed a voyage of thirteen thousand miles around stormy Cape Horn.

The background of Central America in some senses rivals that of Egypt and India. Ruins of a civilization are scattered round which makes it hard to put any date to.

Maybe there were empires here when the Pyramids were being built and before Moses was born. Who knows? It is easy to conjure up pictures of Spanish invaders running rivers red with the blood of Indian warriors, of pirates treading the Main with dripping swords and leather sacks of gold. For three centuries Spain ruled this part of the world. In 1821, the shackles were shaken clear off by some sections and the Spanish-American war in McKinley's days cleaned the Spaniards clear off the Western Hemisphere—never to return but the effects of Spanish domination remain in the beautiful Spanish language spoken everywhere and in the Roman Catholic Church in its lowest, corrupt and morally debilitating form.

SALVATION TIDINGS.

We recently spent ten days in the Nazarene Mission field up the mountains of Guatemala. Their annual conference at Salama was held Nov. 6-16. This was a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. We were preaching three times a day and at every altar call souls were seeking God for pardon, restoration and holiness. Rev. R. S. Anderson has been a missionary for over twenty-five years in Central America. The work at Salama and Coban was started in the days of Bro. McClurkin, of Tennessee. There is a fine school hospital and Bible Training work carried on in Coban and there are many churches and missions in operation in various parts. The work at Salama is in charge of Rev. R. C. Ingram. The preaching was interpreted in Spanish by Bro. Anderson. Miss Gardner and Mrs. Coats interpreted for Mrs. Ridout. This is a very fine work, well grounded and carried on in the very best missionary spirit.

Our last extended meeting in Guatemala was at Zacapa, a prominent railroad center and a city of 10,000 inhabitants. The day meetings were held in a vacant building and the night services in the theater. Zacapa has been a neglected place and these night meetings drew many people who seldom hear the gospel preached. After the third night we had to get out as it interfered with their theatricals which were to follow our meetings. The fact was the people after hearing the gospel singing and preaching failed to patronize the theatre and one night they had no performance because no crowd came. They served notice on us to quit. We next went to a hall near the post office where we had fine crowds, both inside and out. People from many places came to the Zacapa meeting and the little band of workers there rejoiced at what had been accomplished by the five days' meeting. "Gloria a Dios" they say in Spanish, which means "Glory to God."

Many a time at altar services have we seen seekers rise from their knees and go down somewhere and ask forgiveness of some brother and sister whom they had wronged by word or deed. In one instance a preacher asked forgiveness of his wife. Often have we seen the altar or floor wet with the tears of some seeking soul, and we have heard strong men cry aloud as they sought God.

The workers who assisted in the singing and interpretation at the Zacapa meeting were from the Friends Mission of Chiquimula. Miss R. Esther Smith spared no pains in furnishing workers to help us.

We held seven series of meetings in different parts of Guatemala beginning at Quigura, then Gulán, Chiquimula, Rio Honde, Salama, Zacapa and Guatemala City, where we preached three times for Rev. A. R. Higgs. We are now moving on to Cristobal where our next meeting will be held. Our address will be Balboa, Canal Zone. Letters sent there will be forwarded. Postage only two cents.

CHAPTER XI.

THE LOST IS FOUND.

BEGINNING with the discovery of oil at "Oil City"—by which name the town platted by the railroad company was called—an era of great activity in railroad circles extended through several years. The C. & G. W. system was extended from ocean to ocean, and branch lines or feeders of the main line, were built in various sections of the country. In the reorganization of the company, John Queerman was elected Superintendent of the Pacific division, with headquarters in San Francisco. As soon as he could settle up his affairs in Glenview, he took up his residence in San Francisco, where we shall find him closely identified with the Bethany Congregational Church, though widely known and greatly beloved by the Christian people of the city generally. He had, by close economy, and judicious investment, amassed quite a considerable fortune, which it was his pleasure to dedicate to the service of God. He retained the simple and inexpensive habits that had distinguished him in the earlier years of his life, and was open handed in the furtherance of every good work.

Bessie had demonstrated her ability to take care of herself and to bear her full share of the expense incident to the vigorous prosecution of religious work in every community in which her work as hospital nurse called her.

One of the first enterprises to engage the attention and interest of Superintendent Queerman was the building of a Railroad Y. M. C. A. building. He contributed liberally to the funds of the society and suggested certain improvements, the cost of which he paid himself. He also added a wing to the company's hospital, which greatly aided in handling the patients treated there. While the company bore the principal expense of the addition, yet there were little items which were provided for from his own purse. He religiously devoted one-tenth of his income to help on the work of the Lord, though by no means limiting himself to that amount.

Of course Bessie's work was connected with this new hospital and in time she came to be matron of the institution.

Mrs. Queerman found that the higher position of her husband introduced her to a different class of people and widened her field of usefulness very materially. She kept herself in touch with the families of the more humble employees of the company, while she easily and naturally maintained the place to which her husband's position introduced her. She was too true a Christian and a woman to allow any class distinctions to influence her conduct toward any with whom she was brought into contact. She had an earnest desire to help all who needed help, either in material or spiritual things. She had been greatly blessed in her work for the neglected ones of Glenview and could not feel that her change of residence or more exalted position made it any less a privilege and a duty to continue in the same work in San Francisco. It was therefore not long after becoming settled in her new home before she began to explore "the regions beyond" the ordinary bounds of church and society influences. It is true that her experiences were not all pleasant ones, and that she often met with scowling looks and rude repulses. But she found some hopeful subjects and for these she could endure much hardship.

It was while engaged in this work that she made a discovery that was unexpected yet fraught with results of far-reaching influence and importance. She had spent the afternoon, nearly, in ministering to the sick and needy ones in one of the many "tough" localities with which larger cities are usually cursed, and had just turned her steps toward her own home, when she was hailed by a young woman whom she had befriended some time before and entreated to go with her to a cheap lodging house, where a poor woman was raving in delirium and accusing herself with murder. Inquiry brought out the information that the sick woman was an opera singer, who while possessing quite a talent in her line, had nevertheless failed of success and seemed completely discouraged and heartsick.

Upon entering the poor room in which lay the sick woman, Mrs. Queerman heard a voice that startled her by its strange familiarity, and yet its note of remorseful despair put out of her mind every other feeling than that of intense longing to be able to open to this despairing soul a door of hope and peace and rest.

The poorly lighted room and the deep lines which suffering had drawn on the countenance of the sufferer prevented instant recognition. But after a time as memory began to recall the face so like, and yet so unlike, the face before her, the truth dawned upon her that Jessie Upright had not gone to a suicide's grave, but had willfully deceived and broken her mother's heart, and was now beginning to pay the penalty.

Jessie Upright lay before her; all the brightness gone out of her life, all the beauty faded from her face and the marks of sin and suffering indelibly stamped upon her countenance! Her flesh seemed scorched by the fever that held her in its grasp, while her brain seemed busy with the sins of the past, and the terrors which thoughts of the future seemed to conjure up. She was in a state of wildest delirium from which it seemed impossible to rescue her. A pitiful story of her past came out in broken sentences and bitter wailings, which wrung the heart of the listener with sympathetic sorrow.

Mrs. Queerman could do nothing more than to hold the clutching fingers and stroke the raven hair of the sufferer. Yes! she could do more, she could pray that her Savior and Friend would speak to this soul as he had spoken to other erring ones. "Neither do I condemn thee. Sin no more lest a worse thing come upon thee!"

As soon as arrangements could be made, she had Jessie conveyed to her own home—after telegraphing to Mr. Paxton of the Euclid Avenue Church at Glenview, and requesting him to break the news to Jessie's family. There followed weeks of anxious watching and careful nursing, which kept Mrs. Queerman busy day and night. For she could not let this life flicker and go out like a burned-out candle, if it were possible to prevent it. She knew what the restoration of a repentant Jessie to the Upright family might do for the stricken mother, who yet lingered on the border of sanity, though as yet unable to enter. And she knew how precious to the heart of the Christ is the soul that returns from its wanderings and begins to cling to him and to walk "in newness of life." And so she waited and watched and prayed through all those days and nights before consciousness returned and the fever yielded to treatment and convalescence began.

As soon as Mr. Paxton received the telegram from Mrs. Queerman he called upon Deacon Upright, and informed him that Jessie had been found, that she was in a critical condition in San Francisco.

While he did not feel that he could leave his wife, he rejoiced that he could show his love for his erring daughter by assuming all the expenses of her illness and sending Ralph to watch by her bedside, and to bring her home as soon as she could bear to be removed so far. How he longed to fly to her himself and to atone for some of his sternness by tenderly nursing her back to health and home. Of her experiences, or of her sin, he knew next to nothing, but in his heart he felt a yearning tenderness that could overcome everything and help her to redeem herself, whatever her sin might have been.

The other members of the family—save the mind-darkened mother—shared his anxiety, and could scarce control themselves and wait for the slow recovery and tedious convalescence.

Mrs. Upright still had those intervals of intelligence, during which, since the deacon spoke of Ralph and Jessie as though they were both at home—and in fact, as if they had never left the home nest or done any wrong act, she seemed to be trying to recall something that had been forgotten in connection with them. It was a merciful Providence that the awful sorrow which had pierced her through then, had been forgotten and the recollection of the past might not embrace the sin of his children until both body and mind had gained strength to endure the recollection.

One day, about a week after the news of Jessie's whereabouts and condition had reached Glenview, as the deacon sat by the bedside, watching his wife, who seemed to be in a deep sleep—more natural and restful than any she had taken since her illness—the doctor came in, as usual to see how she was getting on. As soon as he saw her, he started quickly forward and felt of her pulse. His countenance flushed with pleasure and excitement as he turned to the deacon and said:

"Be hopeful, my friend! Your wife will regain her health and her mind as well! This sleep is the best medicine, as it is the surest indication of returning health and mental vigor."

"Thank God for his mercy," the deacon said, falling upon his knees and lifting his eyes toward heaven in grateful thanksgiving.

Both watched for the moment of awakening with a silent prayer that God would keep the mind from again losing its balance. An hour—two hours passed before, with a sigh, the sleeper awoke with the light of reason shining in the eye, and the hand so enfeebled with sickness was extended to the doctor, who could scarce restrain himself from exhibiting the excitement he felt and speak in a natural matter of fact tone of voice.

"How do you do, Mrs. Upright? You have had a nice long sleep haven't you?"

"Yes, I have had a good sleep and feel quite rested. I think I shall be wanting something to eat pretty soon. I have a feeling that I have been very ill, but am going to get strong again."

"Oh, yes! You are to get along nicely. But you must not get in too much of a hurry. Everything is going on alright, and the deacon and the children are becoming capital cooks and housekeepers. Now you are to take a good long rest and regain the strength that has been lost by sickness. I'll leave the deacon to entertain you, as I have a patient to see at once. I'll leave you a little medicine, that will help you to rest more easily. You must not try to talk very much for a day or two. After you are strong you can make up for time lost. Good bye." And the doctor took his departure.

Deacon Upright forced himself to be calm, and to control his voice and his features so that his wife might not become excited during this first talk they had had for so many long weeks. No reference was made by either

NEW YEAR MEDITATIONS.

Rev. A. H. M. Zahniser.

REMEMBERING GOD.

"I remembered God, and was troubled."—Psa. 77:3. "And thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee." (Deut. 8:2). "Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing." (Phil. 3:16).

AS we come to the closing of the calendar year, and stand on the threshold of a new year, and look out into the untried future, it is well to pause, consider, and ask ourselves such questions, as, How can I make the lessons and experiences of the past bear most successfully upon the future. What have been my failures and blunders during the past year, and their causes? What measure of success have I attained, and what has contributed most to my accomplishments? One thing sure, if we do not learn from past experiences, the future will be no better than the past.

Janus was an ancient Roman god, whose name came from a Latin root that meant gate, or opening. Hence he was the "god of openings or beginnings." He was supposed to furnish the proper spirit for an opening. His gates were swung wide open in times of war, and were never entirely closed, except when they considered they had absolute peace. From this god, and the superstitions and customs that went along with his worship, we get our name January, as designating the first, or opening, month of a New Year. Janus was a double-headed, two-faced god. He was supposed to look both ways, hence the better prepared to direct the forward march, because he could see what lay behind.

Christians worship no heathen god, nor trust in any myth. Their Deity is the God of the ages, past, present and future. He has told us, "I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." (Mal. 3:6). He assures us, "Every good and perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." (James 1:17). He who is the end of the conversation of saints is, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today, and forever." (Heb. 14:8).

In declaring to Moses, the Name of the One who had commissioned him, Jehovah said of himself, "I am that I am: Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I am hath sent me unto you." (Ex. 3:14). Jesus Christ, as God manifested in the flesh could say truthfully, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, before Abraham was, I am." (St. John 8:58).

In an untried way we need a guide; in a dangerous journey we need a guard who is familiar with the route, and understands the dangers we are exposed to, and the enemies we must combat and overcome. We have such a Companion in the person of our Savior. We see then it is our duty and great privilege to ever keep him in mind and set God always before our face.

Much is said in the Scriptures concerning our thoughts and the things we should remember. The Psalmist says here, "I remembered God and was troubled." But some people have remembered God and been made shouting happy. Sometimes a troubled remembrance leads to a comfortable assurance and blessed communion. This psalm that begins with sorrowful complaints ends in gracious encouragement. A troubled remembrance may issue into a joyful remembrance, and a conscious indwelling of the Divine presence.

Let me emphasize, first of all, The gratitude we should feel for the faculty of memory; and the use we should make of it in the interests of our souls.

Of what benefit would any learning or education be if we could not remember? How thankful we should be that the Creator has given us the faculty that enables us to recall the knowledge of past impressions and events. The power to retain and meditate upon the happenings and experiences of the past in the light of the present, also enables us to consider their probable bearing upon our future. Having observed how the decisions and activities of 1930 resulted, we may conjecture with a good deal of safety how like choices and actions will terminate in 1931. Yea, more, if we remember how the God of yesterday stood by us, when we trusted and obeyed him, and are conscious the God of today is with us, we may safely trust the God of tomorrow—for he is the same. Let us feel a real responsibility to use our memories as well as all our other bestowments and gifts to the glory of the Giver.

Much is said in the sacred Scriptures concerning our thoughts and the things we should remember. The last prophet of the Old Testament cannon tells us, "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name." The inspired penman exhorted the Hebrews, "Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus." (Heb. 3:1). St. Paul, in summing up his efforts to show the church at Philippi how to maintain proper standards and live holy lives, says, "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." (Phil 4:8).

We have an illustration of how there are times when remembering God and being troubled are necessary to repentance and restoration, in the experience of Peter. In Mark 14:72, we read, "And the second time the cock crew. And Peter called to mind the word that Jesus said unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. And when he thought thereon he wept." The marginal reading says, "He wept abundantly." Luke puts it, "And wept bitterly."

The Scriptures speak of various things we should remember, and of a few we should forget. Those worthy to be remembered are too numerous to admit of being mentioned here.

We should remember God in our youth: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." (Eccl. 12:1). Early impressions and decisions have a tremendous influence upon our after life. Living and working for our Heavenly Master is so important that we should not waste the morning of our probationary day in sin and thoughtlessness. Are not such adages as, "The child is father to the man," and, "As the twig is bent, the tree will be inclined," in harmony with the proverb, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." (Prov. 22:6.)

We should remember our promises to God, and the covenant we have made with him. The prophet Jonah said, "When my soul fainted within me I remembered the Lord: and my prayer came in unto thee, into thine holy temple." (Jonah 2:7). It seems we are more apt to remember God when in trouble. But the solemn promises made at such times should not be forgotten, nor esteemed lightly. God requireth that which is past. The true citizen of Zion, "Sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not." "Remember Lot's wife." One man of my boyhood acquaintance said, when in trouble, he promised the Lord if he would help him out that time, he would not bother him again as long as he lived. But that is not the proper attitude. Answered prayer should encourage further prayer. What promises some of us have made to God in different crises of our lives!

We should also remember the past mercies and deliverances of God. Israel was admonished to "Remember all the way which the Lord" their "God had led" them. Paul would have his converts to continue to walk by the same rule, and to mind the same things shown them in the beginning of their Christian life. Even though he desired they should press forward to richer and higher attainments. Asaph exclaimed, "I will remember the years of the right hand of the Most High. I will remember the works of the Lord; surely I will remember thy wonders of old. I will meditate also of all thy work, and talk of thy doings."

How often the Israelites had their attention called to the marvelous way Jehovah brought about their emancipation from bondage, and their exodus from Egypt; and how he led them dry shod across the arm of the Red Sea, through the wilderness, and over the Jordan into the Promised Land. It is well that we bear in mind the spot "more dear than native vale or mountain" where we first found the Savior, and felt our sins forgiven, and that we be able to sing, "I never shall forget how the fire fell, when the Lord sanctified me." Have you not received some remarkable answers to prayer, and experienced some striking deliverances during the past year?

We should remember our friends and neighbors (yea, our enemies, if we have such) who are in need, or in a state of suffering. This season of the year, all God's people should be ready to remember in mercy and the spirit of helpfulness the poor and needy. Let us generously remember those agencies and institutions that minister to the down-trodden and submerged portions of society; also show a personal interest in mankind less favored than ourselves wherever we may have personal contact, or direct influences. The Master has made it our privilege to show our regard for him, and our appreciation of his mercies and blessings, by ministering to others in his Spirit and Name. "Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble." (Psa. 41:1). "And the king shall answer and say unto them, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Note also his words to the negligent, "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." How astonishing the reward; how terrible the punishment that follows; "and these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal."

There may be reasons and occasions for even God's people to be troubled in remembering God, and his holiness, and his claims upon the souls of men: These may be personal or relative reasons. Our personal unlikeness to him, and unfitness to stand in his holy presence should stir our hearts, and call us to prayer. We should not only be moved to say, "I hate the sins that made thee mourn." But justified souls, not yet fully sanctified and entirely cleansed from the in-being or pollution of inherited evil and moral corruption, sometimes feel to pray,

"Tis worse than death,
My God to love,
And not my God alone!"

The crucifixion of "the old man" is sometimes severe. But if we have tasted of the love of God, and know the joys of sins forgiven, and something of sweet fellowship, then become painfully conscious of how the inward defilement holds us back from the blessed communion we might have, and blurs our spiritual vision, remembering that "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." There is often a season of trouble and struggle when we are even tempted to cast away our confidence and wonder if we have any grace at all. But then perhaps "the darkest hour is just before the dawning," and the flood of light bursts in upon the soul, and the sense of purity and cleanness and intimate fellowship prevails. Praise the Lord!

The desolations of Zion may produce these troubled feelings. The desolate and unprosperous condition of the professed Church of Christ calls for mourners in Zion. The lukewarm state of the church in this Laodicean age is a cause of deep grief to the saints of God. But there is a joy in keeping spiritual yourself whatever others do.

We might mention also, world conditions, and the vast number of souls still in the darkness of spiritual night, the great needs of humanity, with the prevailing wickedness all about us, and general forgetfulness of God and his claims. The disregard for the Lord's Day; the neglect of God's house, the profaning of the name of God, the polluting of God's pure air with the fumes of liquor, and the vile cigarette, the manifestations of immodesty and lewdness, the evident licentiousness and multiplied forms of sinfulness and wrong-doing all unite to cause the people of God to sigh, and cry and mourn before Jehovah.

We may be sorrowful, yet always rejoicing. We can rejoice in him who is mighty to save, and able to keep, and whose gospel is suited to all mankind, and in the fact provision has been made for the salvation of all who will accept his gracious invitation and come to him on the terms of the gospel may be saved. But as to resting in past attainments or being satisfied with former accomplishments, or present conditions, may every Christian reader testify, "But this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

"Pressing onward as we can,
Still to this our hearts must tend:
Where our earliest hopes began,
There our last aspirations end;

"Till amid the hosts of light,
We in Thee redeemed, complete,
Through Thy cross made pure and white,
Cast our crowns before thy feet."

AN IRRESISTIBLE MAJORITY.

W. S. BOWDEN.

"Fear not; for they that be with us are more than they that be with them." 2 Kings 6:16.

NOTHING flies so swiftly, so surely, so constantly as time. No strength of human will can stay its steady, onward march. Hoarded wealth is powerless to buy back the years already gone. At the close of the year the mind instinctively turns to this flight of time. With lightning speed the old year has rushed its round, and buried itself in the eternal past. The clock has ticked away its moments, one by one, until the moments and days are all passed, no more to return.

Solemn thought! Not a moment can be recalled, not a step can be retraced. All is locked in deathless silence. The past is forever gone. The present is ours. The future God holds in his hands. It is natural that thoughtful persons should have serious reflections at such a time as this. It is our object to try to give special directions to these reflections, to turn them into the channels that may prove the most profitable.

Let us pay a little attention to the context before noticing the teaching of the text. Benhadad, King of Syria, warred with Jehoram, King of Israel. Benhadad's plans were found out. He suspected an enemy in the camp. He summoned his officers, and demanded of them an explanation. He was told that Elisha, the prophet in Israel, was the cause of the king's designs being frustrated. When he learned that Elisha was in Dothan he took immediate steps to conquer him. He sent a host in the night to take their places on the heights around Dothan. When Elisha's servant went out in the morning he gazed with dismay on the horses, chariots and hosts which surrounded the city. Much bewildered, he exclaimed, "Alas, my master! how shall we do?" The trustful prophet answered, "Fear not; they that be with us are more than they that be with them." "And Elisha prayed, and said, Lord, I pray Thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha."

1. Our text suggests that in this world there is hostility to God and His people.

The Bible declares this, observation confirms it, experience demonstrates it. It is well to look the proposition square in the face as we enter the days of the New Year. There is nothing gained in denying the fact that there are forces arrayed against us if we be for God. There is the world, the flesh, and the devil.

1. The World. THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Hear the words of Jesus, "Beware of men." "Behold I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves." "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." John 15:19.

2. The Flesh.

"For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." Gal. 5:17.

3. The Devil.

The Bible represents the devil with all his forces, malice, subtlety and skill as being opposed to God and his people. We need not fool ourselves by thinking that the devil is either asleep or dead. We need to keep out of "the snare of the devil," to "resist the devil," to "stand against the wiles of the devil." Let us face our enemies, but not magnify the difficulties. There is a brighter thought in the text.

II. Our Allies.

Our text teaches that there are more for us than there are against us. We ought to rejoice in this truth as we face the untried scenes of another year. Because this is true we are assured of victory.

1. The Godhead is For Us.

There is a joyful thought in this verse written long ago: "Be strong and courageous, be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is an arm of flesh; but with us is the Lord our God to help us and to fight our battles." (1 Chron. 32:7). We may look all our foes in the face, and exclaim with the Apostle Paul: "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Rom. 8:31.

(1). God the Father is For Us.

It is a blessed truth that "one with God is a majority." There is a striking inscription on the front of Downing Hall, N. Wales: "Without God, without all; with God, enough." We should be strengthened by reading these brave words by General Gordon: "Why should I fear? Is man stronger than God? I go up the Soudan alone, with an infinite Almighty God to direct and guide me, and am glad to so trust him as to fear nothing; and indeed to feel sure of success."

"The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge." Psa. 46:7.

"If God be for us, His banner o'er us, We'll sing the victor's song at last!"

(2). Jesus Christ is on Our Side.

He died for us. He arose for us. He lives for us. He loves us. He intercedes for us. During his earthly ministry he had compassion on all the needy. He possesses the same compassionate heart today. This is his glorious message to his people: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the age." Matt. 28:20.

(3). The Holy Spirit is our Guide and Helper.

The Holy Spirit is our teacher and inspirer. Thank God that we may count upon the presence and help of the Holy Spirit. "Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come. He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you." John 16:13, 14.

2. All God's People are On Our Side.

We are treading the path that the saints have trod. There are many noble souls in the thick of the fight today. They are with us. We are not alone as far as the fellowship of the saints is concerned. If we stand for truth and righteousness the very best people are with us.

3. The Unfallen Angels are On Our Side.

The ministry of angels is one of the most fascinating thoughts presented in the Word of God. "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." Heb. 1:14; Psa. 34:7.

er to anything that had occurred previous to Ralph's imprisonment or Jessie's disappearance.

Mrs. Upright's mind seemed to take in only the present moment. It was a merciful Providence which kept the mind from recalling the past with its heart-breaking sorrows. There was rest and joy in looking into the love-lit eyes of her husband, and listening to his words of affectionate solicitude for her comfort and happiness.

Yet, in spite of his outward calmness, and the exercise of his strong will, the deacon inwardly trembled lest a sudden recollection on the part of his wife should dash to the ground the cup of joy he was raising to his lips. How earnestly he prayed that God would strengthen her mind to withstand the awful shock that must follow the recollection of the sin and shame of the bitter past.

One of the powders which the doctor had left, and the deacon had given, produced a deep and restful sleep in an hour from the time of her last awakening, during which the deacon stole out of the room to apprise Lucy and James of the favorable turn in their mother's case, and to caution them against any show of excitement in her presence. And so the children schooled themselves to appear unmoved by the, to them, great happiness of having the mother's mind clear and her bodily health so greatly improved.

STEPS TO A DOWNFALL.

REV. E. E. SHELHAMER.

"Looking diligently lest any man fail, 'fall from' the grace of God."

One falls into open sin all at once. Long before a man is known as a rascal, long before a woman is known as a loose character—they have allowed their thoughts and eyes, little by little, to wander and dwell upon the thing presented to their minds. No doubt Satan finds as much satisfaction when one listens to his suggestion, as, later, when this same party falls into open sin, for that disgraceful thing down the road ten miles distant cannot take place until the thought and suggestion is first entertained.

We saw, on one occasion, a beautiful butterfly alight for a second on a cabbage leaf, and then on another. We thought, "That butterfly does not remain long enough to get any nectar or food. Why then, all this activity?" Upon close investigation, I found that every time she lit upon a leaf she deposited a tiny nit or egg. Nature did the rest and it was only a little while until the tiny egg had hatched out into a tiny worm. Immediately, this little worm began to feed upon the plant, and it was not long until it had become a large worm. Then, in turn, this large worm became another butterfly, and thus reproduced its kind a thousand-fold.

Now, the process of temptation, and finally a downfall, is on the same principle. Satan, through the eye or ear, deposits the nit, or germ, in the form of a suggestion. If we dare to harbor and nestle this for a moment, it will be only a little while before we will have a serpentine brood on hand. Hence, the wise thing to do is to crush, as we would a viper or an ugly worm, the first intimation to do wrong. Let us notice carefully four steps to a downfall.

ATTENTION.

Here is where the tempter succeeded with Eve. He called her attention to the beautiful and luscious fruit. Having gained this vantage ground he quickly caught on to her natural weakness—loquacity. Had she only kept a closed mind and a closed mouth all would have been well. It is the same with every holy soul today. Such an one cannot be tempted except along natural and legitimate lines. "When the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took." It is that first look that makes it possible to think, then forget all former resolutions. Job realized this when he said, "I made a covenant with mine eyes: why then should I think upon a maid?"

Notice Achan's sin! He "saw" the goodly Babylonish garment and shekels of silver, then "coveted," then "took," then "hid," then "died in disgrace." No one can fall until he first looks or listens, then lingers, then longs, then lunges. It is simply impossible to be overcome on any line so long as the mind is closed to the thought of yielding and the question is undebatable. Remember this, you are invincible so long as you do not let down the first bar and throw open the subject to debate. But if you dare to do this for a moment the floods will pour in and sweep you off your feet.

CONSIDERATION.

This is the second step. If Satan can get one to ponder, then wonder, the battle is likely to be lost. One man said, "If I were tempted along a certain line I do not know what I would do." This man was defeated already. How unlike Joseph, who no doubt had it settled in his mind beforehand that come what would he would not sin. He was fortified and as unmovable as Gibraltar, when temptation came. "How can I do this great wickedness and sin against God?" He put God first rather than please the flesh.

GRATIFICATION.

Is it not strange how one can go stone blind in a moment in view of present profit or pleasure, rather than wait for joys and comforts more enduring? David "saw," then "inquired," (considered), then like a mad animal broke down the fence and ruthlessly trampled under foot all sense of honor and righteousness. After he had gotten through with his seeing and sending, then God began sending strife, sedition, and sorrow which never ended. Reader, beware!

HUMILIATION.

If one could only stop long enough to look around and behold the many shipwrecks, he might take warning. Some of these were once mighty in sailing the high seas and doing commerce for God. But they trifled, ventured too near the rocks, and are now out of commission—stranded on the shores of time. Others are dismantled and though pretending to be in service, are like floating derelicts without mast or rudder—more dangerous than old hulks, high and dry on the beach.

Precious reader, remember there are souls now in hell and others on their way there, who at one time roamed on plains of spiritual light grander than you or I ever experienced. To your knees! To your knees!!

If You Want Something

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

Spurgeon has said: "That we breathe in the atmosphere of heaven by prayer and we breathe it out again by praise; prayer and praise make up the essentials of the Christian life."

Holiness Unto The Lord.

ACROSTIC.

B. F. DURLING.

How wonderful is the spiritual deep in which one may live. Over and through the soul moves the cleansing tide.

Over the true seeker hovers Infinite Love and the unfailing promise.

Life hid with Christ in God dwells in the bosom of the Father.

Icebergs on their sunward side flash like diamonds. Their opposite sides are dark with shadows. So that soul turned Godward shines with heavenly graces. Turned earthward there rests upon it the gloom of night.

No image of the sun shines forth from the muddled pool. So from a heart clouded by sin, gleams no vision of God.

Every power may be touched and energized by the Holy Spirit.

Souls unfolding Godward are more sublime than a created universe.

Sinful words serve themselves rather than God.

Utter renunciation of sin means the receiving of the uttermost of God.

Nothing is so blessed as to be all the Lord's and to possess the Lord.

Trust is the key into God's uttermost.

Our one short life suddenly leads down into Eternity.

The soul was made to be permeated by Deity. How many limit God's uttermost.

Existence owes its worth to the fact of God's communicability and the spirit's power to receive God into the life.

Listen to the voice of God within thy soul!

Over the Spirit is, Hovering Love.

Religion evermore, should be the disciplining of the spirit Godward.

Death will be the opening of the door into the higher glory.

"Inasmuch."

I met a stranger in the way,

His heavy load I shared,—

It was a little thing I did,

To show him that I cared;

We parted and I soon forgot

The kindness I had done,

Till One drew near and spake to me

In language all His own:

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these,

Ye have done it unto me."

I saw a wan and weary face,

'Twas shadowed o'er with care,

I looked again and now beheld

The trace of sorrow there;—

I sought to soothe and sympathize,

To hearten and to cheer,—

And, once again, those self-same words

Fell on my spirit's ear:

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these,

Ye have done it unto me."

I saw a little shiv'ring form,

'Twas starved and poorly clad,

A tide of pity filled my heart,—

I gave it all I had:—

What happiness! What gratitude!

'Twas wonderful to see,—

And then, once more, I heard a Voice

Repeat those words to me:

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these,

Ye have done it unto me."

So I have come, in all I do

To ease another's load,

To look beyond the one I serve

And see—the Son of God!...

What high and holy ministry

Lord Christ, Thou givest me,

Since all I do for "one of these"

I do it unto Thee!

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

HONG SUNG, KOREA.

Dear Friends of The Herald Family:

The other day while we were in Syenchun holding revival meetings, Dr. Chishom who is in charge of the Presbyterian hospital there, took us for a spin in the country. We noticed as we entered his machine that he had several bundles of printed matter piled upon the floor. As we drove along his helper was constantly dropping these sheets of paper out of the car and we soon learned that these were gospel tracts telling in simple form of the love of Christ. The people all along the way eagerly picked them up and some read them immediately while others put them in their pockets to read at a later time. Children came running from afar as they saw the papers dropping from the car and often pursued us for a good distance in order to get a tract. The doctor told us he never goes out in his car without taking a good bunch of tracts along and told of some remarkable conversions as the result of spreading the good news in this manner.

One day as he was driving through a little country village distributing these gospel portions a man from a distant town happened to pick one up. He had never heard of Christ before and as he eagerly digested its contents he became greatly concerned. He went back to his own village. There were no Christians there, no preacher to tell him of Christ, no Bible to read. All he knew was what he had read in this tract. He followed the simple instructions given therein and gave his heart to the Lord. He became a changed man and immediately wanted his friends and neighbors to know about this "new way of Life." He began to inquire in neighboring villages and soon learned that the man who had dropped the papers along the road was the Christian physician at Syenchun. He hurriedly made his way to Syenchun and found the doctor. He earnestly pleaded with him to send a preacher to his village. A preacher was sent and as the result of passing out a single little tract a church has been organized there and many are worshipping the true God and Saviour of the world.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the first convert in Korea was converted through reading a portion of the gospels. He had been engaged by the foreign missionary to do some translating work. The missionary gave him a portion of the New Testament which only contained the gospels of Luke and Matthew. He took them home and that evening began to read and could not stop until he had finished reading through both gospels. He then realized his need and saw his privilege in Christ and was converted. He became a strong Christian. So everywhere in every land the "Word is proving sharper than a two-edged sword" and the seed sown is not being sown in vain, but as it falls upon good soil continues to bring forth an abundant harvest.

Last week we held a five-days' meeting in Kwak-sun which is located in the northern part of Korea. Representatives from thirty of the churches in the neighboring towns were present including preachers and Bible women. Four services were held every day and from the very beginning God poured out his Spirit upon us. The church building was too small to accommodate the crowds that came and in order to make room for the older people, a children's meeting was held every evening before the regular preaching service. Some three or four hundred children under fifteen years of age came to every meeting and as soon as their service was closed, they were asked to leave to make room for the crowds waiting on the outside to get in. A gracious revival swept the church and many sought the experience of sanctification and were definitely blessed. Others were reclaimed and a number saved. We praise God for answering prayer.

We never met a more hospitable group of people anywhere than we found in Kwak-sun. While there we lived in a Korean house and did our own cooking. They continued to send us so much food we hardly knew what to do with it. The best of the land was not too good for them to send, and they showered us with kindness of every sort. We have fallen in love with the Korean people and they have won our hearts. Please continue to pray for us, for your prayers are being answered.

Yours in him,
Asbury College Missionary Team,
Crouse, Kirkpatrick, Erny.

RILEY, KANSAS.

Recently a most heart-searching revival was conducted in the Methodist Church, at Riley, Kan., by Dr. O. G. Minglehoff. Soul-stirring messages were delivered from night to night, and the pastor, Hjalmar Larson, was happy to see approximately thirty bow at the altar seeking the great experience of entire sanctification. Many others were definitely blessed during the meetings, and there is much encouragement in the fact that people are continuing to make inquiry regarding this victory experience and earnestly desiring it.

There was a sad lack of heartfelt conviction, and the evil one gave us a most difficult battle. I have never listened to greater evangelistic messages than Dr. Minglehoff brought to our people. At one service, in particular, the power of God was so manifested that people went from the service as if awed by its presence. Never have I worked with a more Christlike evangelist and with no one as humble—humility that is truly Christian. One of the great results of the meetings was the fact voiced by one of our leading citizens when he said that Dr. Minglehoff had certainly overcome the prejudice against holiness in our town, and this was only accomplished by his preaching holiness without fear or favor. Dr. Minglehoff was at his best and we were happy to sit at his feet and be taught in spiritual things.

A MIGHTY VISITATION OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

On Nov. 2, we began a meeting at Highland Park Methodist Church, Louisville, Ky., of which Rev. C. C. Jones is the successful pastor. This is his seventh year at this church. Seven years ago he began work here in a small frame building; today they have a beautiful, commodious church with ample room for the different phases of church work. A heroic task in erecting such a building but now it will soon be free of debt and is a thing of beauty. Seldom do we find a man and wife so well adapted to the work of the Lord as Brother and Sister Jones. She is a helpmate and a hand-maiden of the Lord, indeed. She has a large Bible class of women, averaging around fifty each Sunday.

Brother Jones had been preparing the way for the revival hence, from the beginning an interest was manifested. People began to pray more fervently. All night prayer prevailed for a week. Some one at each hour in the day and night was praying and God's promises were verified. People began getting saved at the altar, in the pew, in the homes, in the places of business until scores were swept into the kingdom, until over 100 found Christ as their pardoning Savior. Don't tell me the times of revivals are over. Don't tell me hearts are not hungry for the living Christ. Don't tell me the altar of prayer is no longer necessary. Men's hearts are hungry. "Today is a day of glad tidings; if we hold our peace mischief will come."

"O for a passionate passion for souls,
O for a pity that yearns.
O for a heart that will love until death,
O for the fire that burns.
O for the pure prayer power that prevails,
That pours out itself for the lost.
Victorious prayer in our Conqueror's name,
O for a Pentecost!"
On with the Revival!

W. E. Thomas.
Westminster Apt., Nashville, Tenn.

ASBURY CHAPEL REVIVAL.

Just closed a three-weeks' revival at Old Asbury Chapel, near Bicknell, Ind. The first Methodist society was organized here in 1887, and this place has been highly favored by spiritual pastors. Rev. Burton, the present pastor, is a sanctified man and gives out a clear, clean-cut gospel. There were more than sixty different ones came to the altar for reclamation, consecration, eighteen were clearly converted, several prayed through for sanctification and eighteen joined the church.

Sunday, Dec. 14, was a banner day. The largest Sunday school attendance for some time and a packed house at both Sunday services. All expenses raised and over one hundred dollars left for the local budget, beside paying the evangelist a liberal sum for his three weeks' labors.

Yours for souls,
E. G. Grimes.

CENTERTOWN CIRCUIT, M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH

Since conference we were assigned to this work and are delighted with our people. They have received us gladly. We have held one real revival at Equality, one of our churches, and the Lord saved sixty-five souls, and about forty will unite with our church. The meeting went on nearly four weeks. Some were saved in the home, on the roadside and the old church rang with the shouts of newborn souls. Old men said that they had never seen anything like it. If the Word is preached God will honor it. I am always glad to tell the world that he is true and able to do all he promised, and if we will put him to a test he will prove his power. We are planning on holding a meeting in the Centertown Church beginning January 1. We covet the prayers of The Herald family for this people, for things are at a low ebb, but we believe that God is more than a match for the devil and through him we can win.

We did our own preaching in the meeting at Equality and aim to here. We like The Herald. It is inspiring to us and much help to us in our work.

E. C. Whitworth.
Pastor of Centertown Charge.

DECKER, MICHIGAN.

We have just concluded seven weeks of revival services in the Methodist churches at Decker and Elmer. The Rev. Chas. A. Jacobs, of Charlotte, Mich., was the evangelist, and brought stirring messages of Bible truth that covered every phase of Christian life and experience. The depths and hideousness of sin, actual and inbred, were laid bare; in connection therewith the heights of grace attainable through the atoning blood were clearly shown. The spiritual life in both churches was at a very low ebb at the beginning of the meetings; the transformation that has been brought about is amazing. Many have sought the Lord in saving grace and sanctifying power. It was a splendid sight to see parents seeking the Lord together. The attendance and interest far exceeded our expectation from the beginning. The Brethren in Christ, Free Methodists, Mennonites, and many others were hearty in their co-operation and support.

The results in evidence are the attendance and spirit manifest in the prayer meetings, also in the Sunday school, and in the family altars established. The offerings were good and freely given. A large number on the last night expressed their desire to have Evangelist Jacobs return next summer for a tent meeting campaign. People attended the meetings from all over the Thumb of Michigan, many having heard Bro. Jacobs in meetings at other places. We heartily endorse the ministry of this God-inspired evangelist and recommend him to any pastor or camp meeting committee desiring a revival on Bible lines. The above meetings were from Nov. 2 to Dec. 21, 1930.

J. H. James, Pastor.

REPORT OF R. P. MARSHALL AND WIFE, The Radio Evangelists.

Since our last report we have been engaged in radio work almost exclusively. From March to July we were preaching and singing every day in our radio revival services over WDOD at Chattanooga. A group of people bought the hour. In July we returned for a short while to our evangelistic work, holding some meetings near Chattanooga. One very interesting, though short one was at Sulphur Springs, Ala. From there we went to help Rev. W. F. Calhoun at Brewton, Ala. This was a good meeting in which both Methodists and Baptists worked together, although it was supposed to be a Methodist meeting.

We returned to Chattanooga to take the place of Program Director and Chief Announcer of WDOD. During the past several months we have held radio services from this station every Sunday afternoon, in addition to our regular work. It was our hope to have more religious services, but commercial interests have first call in a secular work. The call of our work refuses to be stilled and satisfied with occasional services; so it is our intention to return to the evangelistic field with the New Year.

After a year of radio work we feel that there is a wonderful possibility in it for real soul-saving work. We have let the freak organizations have the full swing until there is danger that we will lose a great amount of our hold on the people who would gladly hear a sane, religious message. Modernism has seized the opportunity, and has the best hearing of any group, with its great services over the chains. The time has come when the Conservatives must meet the challenge, not by turning the job over to any fly-by-night religious crank, who can use the radio as a means of gathering the shekels, but by putting on radio services that will appeal to the people who are really asking for it. Yesterday, as our station, over my protest, ran three hours of old-time fiddling and yelling music on the Sabbath, the phone rang many times to protest over such a desecration of our Lord's day. Many people are waiting for the gospel to be given them, and are being fed on trash.

We have made a study of field and best methods of conducting radio religious services, and will be glad to consult with any one who is planning to attempt anything in that line. Our work in this field and a knowledge of the studio technic may be of assistance to some one. Write us at Lewisburg, Ky. Of course we are open for dates to assist in revival meetings as preacher or singer. Mrs. Marshall also sings and plays the piano; we specialize in children's services.

WOODLAND INTERDENOMINATIONAL HOLINESS CONVENTION.

December 16, the third All-day Holiness Convention of the Woodland Interdenominational Holiness Association was held at Thomas, So. Dak.

Rev. and Mrs. George Rhoads, pastor of the M. E. Church at Thomas, assisted by Bro. and Sister Chambers, had made the plans well. By noon over forty people had gathered. The forenoon was taken up with the love-feast. The testimonies of God's people rang with praises to him who is able to save from all sin. In the afternoon, Rev. Eling, Wesleyan Methodist pastor at Redfield, brought the message. Its searching truths went home to the hearts of all and at the close five men were at the altar seeking the blessing of holiness.

Although this was only the third meeting, the holiness people of northeastern South Dakota feel that just such times of fellowship and refreshing are needed. It is planned to hold two more before our Woodland Interdenominational Holiness camp meeting in June with Bro. Shelhamer as evangelist. The next one will be held in Esmond, So. Dak.

May God own and bless every one that scriptural holiness may continue to spread throughout this part of South Dakota.

W. M. Redfield, Esmond, S. D.

to him much of the turmoil, strife and misery that are going on in the world at the present time.

First of all, the Devil hates God and seeks to give him sorrow in the destruction of human beings, who are the special objects of his love. The Devil inspired the whole theory and craze of evolution in an effort to put God out of the belief and thought of men. He inspires his servants in the matter of the liquor traffic. He has been at the head of this business from its inception. He and his deceivers hate prohibition with bitter hatred. The Devil manipulates the ambitions, covetousness and carnal pride of men to bring on wars. He is at the bottom of the perfect riot of dishonesty, wastefulness and graft in county, city, state and national government. The Devil is in the world on a rampage of ruin among men. He does not spare the home or the church. To break up the home and corrupt the church is one of his chief objectives.

The modernistic preachers who are destroying the faith of the people in the Bible, the virgin birth and sacrificial death of Christ, are the chief priests of the Devil. That is an eloquent, beautiful and patriotic saying, and fine to arouse the spirit of enthusiasm at the time it was written: "All men are born free and equal." Theoretically, this may be, in a sense, true; in fact, it is not true. Some sort of an eccentric philosopher may come along some day and write a sentence something like this: "All men are born in bondage and unequal." And he may produce some arguments in favor of this theory that will put you thinking.

Up to the present time, the white race has had leadership in the world. I would not waste time arguing with any one who will question that statement. The Devil is now set, in a very special way, for the curtailing and destruction of the leadership of the white race in the world. Come with me next week.

Three Thousand Idle Preachers.

We are informed that there are three thousand idle preachers of various denominations in these United States. This ought not to be. There are millions of people in this country who are not hearing preaching of any kind; many more are hearing preaching which has no gospel in it to save the soul from sin.

These preachers, if called of God, ought not to be idle. They need not be. Let them go to preaching at once—where? Just anywhere they happen to be, on street corner, in front of a blacksmith shop, on the steps of a courthouse, anywhere you can find room for your feet, stand and cry out to men to "repent, repent and come to Christ. Hurry up about it! The first thing you know you will be in hell. Wake up, my fellowmen, forsake your sins and come to Christ. Delay is dangerous."

Yell that out and more like it, stamp your feet, wave your hand, weep, let the tears roll down your cheeks. Hollow at the top of your voice, inviting men to come to Jesus. Draw your breath through your nose, and you will not get sore throat. Drop your voice a bit, as the people gather. Don't beg, but don't be afraid to pass your hat for a collection. Take what you get and tramp on and preach again. The first thing you know some one will have a great revival.

Tear loose, rebel against idleness; refuse to keep silent, but go to preaching with all of your might. Some one will give you a tent, some group saved under your ministry will rent you a hall, and if you are a real gospel preacher, it will have to be enlarged to hold the hungry crowds that come to hear you preach.

Some will ask, How will you get from place to place? I thought some one would ask that question and I have thought out a scheme of transfer—walk! There you are, walk. Jesus and his disciples walked and they got there on time. Stop and preach every few miles, and make a loud call to repentance. Don't hesitate to walk. The men who followed Clark to old Vincennes walked. The men who shot the British between the eyes at the battle of New Orleans walked all the way from Kentucky to Tennessee to do it and slept out of doors on the way. Go to preaching. Shell the town, village or country place.

Dr. Morrison in a Sanitarium.

Because of a serious weakening of the heart Dr. Morrison has been compelled to cancel his preaching engagements, and is now taking rest and treatment in a Sanitarium near San Diego, Calif. He reports that he is improving nicely. Of course he will appreciate your prayers.

I Wish I Could See You

And urge upon all whose subscriptions expire in this month, that you be prompt to send us in your renewal, as we shall give Dr. Morrison's splendid articles on "What's the Matter with the World" in the first issues in this month. After this we shall start a series of articles from our Editor-in-Chief on "If Christ Should Come to Jerusalem?", which will provoke serious minded people to thoughtful reflections. In fact, there are so many good things promised in THE HERALD for this year that if you should miss a single issue you would probably lose that which is the very message you need for some difficulty through which you may be passing.

I trust it may be that every reader of THE HERALD whose subscription expires this month, will, if necessary, make some sacrifice in order to keep THE HERALD a weekly visitor to your living-room table. THE HERALD is a paper that you need not fear for your child to read, as it does not carry anything but the best for old and young.

Let us hear from you at once, enclosing your renewal and, if possible, send us the name of one or more new subscribers whom you wish to help to a better life, religiously, during the coming year.

I wish for each and every one the most blessed New Year you have ever had.

As the new, clean sheet is handed to us for a new beginning let us determine to fill it with golden deeds for the Master in service to our fellowmen.

Yours, hoping to hear from you real soon,
MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Bud Robinson's Monthly Letter.

To the Readers of The Pentecostal Herald:

LET me say a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year as this letter may not reach the office until after the Christmas number has already been printed; then it will do for the opening of the year of 1931.

The servants of the Lord will celebrate the greatest event in the world's history. There has never been a greater day on earth, and never could be a greater day than the one on which the blessed Christ was born. Every one of the Old Testament prophets had something to say of the birth of the world's King. Of course, no other birth could have the same effect on the world as the birth of the Son of God.

When the fiery prophet Isaiah in the 9th chapter and 6th and 7th verses looked down over the hills of the earth and the rolling times of on-coming ages and made this wonderful prophecy it was something new to that nation at that time: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, the The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."

Let the reader remember that when the old Book tells us that God will perform a thing it is as certain to take place as God lives. God did not say that he would perform this wonderful prophecy a week or a year, or even in a hundred years, for it was at least seven hundred years before the King of the world was born. But thank the Lord the time came when the angels came out from the upper world and sang that wonderful song for the first time, "Peace on earth and good will toward men." For unto us this day a child is born. This is the same child that was spoken of by the prophet Isaiah. We fail to see where the devil and the infidels can put their finger on a single passage of the Holy Scriptures that has ever failed, or ever will fail. A Christian has the best foundation to build on of anybody on the face of the earth. St. Paul said that "God cannot lie." Let me take time to thank our blessed heavenly Father that our beloved Christ said that the Scriptures cannot be broken.

The old Prophet wrote about the coming of the Christ as though he was already come. In the wonderful prophecy he said, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given." He counted the thing as though it had already been fulfilled. When our heavenly Father moved upon one of his prophets to write a certain thing it went down as though it had already been fulfilled. The reader will recall a statement made by King David when he said, "All of my members were written in this Book, when as yet there was none of that man's generation before King David was born; that in the mind of God King David stood out in his mind and plan as though he was at that time sitting on the throne at Jerusalem; when the facts are, King David had not been born. There is no such a thing as a man coming on the scene as a great leader and God knowing nothing of the thing. God knows his men before they are born as well as he does after they are born.

When God had Moses to write some four thousand years before Christ was born, "that the seed of the woman would bruise the serpent's head," God saw the whole thing then as plain as he saw it the day that Christ was born, and grew to manhood and met the Devil and defeated him on every battle-field. It was not a surprise to our heavenly Father when Jesus met the Devil in the Mount of Temptation and drove him from every one of his subtle temptations. He did it with the Law of Moses, which proves to my mind that God raised up one man to write the Laws for the whole world, for all time, and all people, in all ages of the world; that man was Moses, the one that the infidels and backslidden preachers have cursed and hated for generations past, and will do the same for ages to come. God just about lets men do as they please with the understanding that every sin they commit must be met and settled for at his judgment bar.

Not only did God raise up one man to write the Law for the whole world; he also raised up one man to write the theology for the whole world; that man was St. Paul. God tells us that St. Paul was a chosen vessel unto him. It is clear to my mind that God had prepared Paul to do a certain work, and that work was to write the theology for the world. You can't think of a thing that pertains to the great plan of salvation, but is fully explained in the writings of St. Paul. If you desire to look at an unregenerated human heart look at the third chapter of Paul's letter to the Romans. If you desire to look at the heart of a regenerated believer, look at the third chapter of 1st Corinthians. If you desire to look at the heart of a wholly sanctified man, look at the third chapter of Paul's letter to the Ephesians. That is just a sample and not the whole bill of fare.

Thank God, we have one Saviour, the blessed Christ, and we have one Lawyer that servant of the Lord called Moses, and one theologian, that prisoner of Jesus Christ called Paul. So when we believe in a whole Bible for a whole world, and a salvation from all sin for all men; we have no apology to offer to the unbelievers of this present day. Thank the Lord, we have found him of whom Moses and the prophets did write, and he has lifted us above the fog and mist of this unfriendly world, and has planted our feet on the Rock of Ages. We have no such things as doubts to bother with. We just as much believe every word of the Bible as if we had written it ourselves. We as much believe that the whale swallowed Jonah as if he had swallowed us; for Jesus said that, "As Jonah was three days and nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days in the heart of the earth."

When a preacher who is honeycombed with unbelief asks you to prove that the whale swallowed Jonah, don't you try to prove that he did; if you do, you will insult the Lord himself; but tell him that you believe every word of the story, and then put it up to him and tell him that it is so, and if he doesn't believe it for him to prove that the whale did not swallow him. We believe it, and if the other fellow doesn't believe it, let him disprove it. When you meet him on his own platform he must do the proving or the disproving, as the case may be. Our heavenly Father never sends us out to try to prove the Bible. He gives us the Bible and we believe every word of it; if the other fellows don't believe it, let them do the disproving. We are settled, satisfied, contented and at rest as to the Virgin Birth of the Christ, his Deity and Eternal Sonship. We don't have to prove anything. Thank God, we believe it from one end to the other.

We want to start in on the New Year with a tighter grip on Christ and a very loose grip on this old world. We want to, if it is God's will to spare us for the next twelve months, to live each day as though we thought it was the last. Our motto ought

THE YEAR BEFORE ME LIES.

The year before me lies—
A happy year!
My Christ beside me stands,
And smiles upon me;
At ev'ry turn are heaps of good
That I may do for others,
To make their lives more pleasant;
Thus happiness is sure to come—
It never misses those Who pour their full hearts out
In deeds unselfish.

The year before me lies—
O Will of Heaven,
Grant that this coming twelve-months
Shall be the fullest given yet
To Thy dear service!
I would not waste a minute.
Time is so fleeting;
My life is hast'ning rapidly,
I must be doing, doing,
Or time shall close upon me
And leave undone
The work I long have cherished.

The year before me lies—
'Twill quickly vanish,
But it will carry me
One great step nearer
To God's eternal paradise,
Where flowers never die,
Where chilly winds ne'er blow,
Where wicked men and women
Can never mar nor hinder
The rest and peace perpetual
Of His beloved.
God's years are but man's stepping-stones
From earth to Heaven. —Sel.

to be, "Live today as though we were going to die tomorrow, and work today as though we were going to live forever." Two things will keep us straight: good living and hard work, and plenty of it. No time for Mary and Doug and Arbuckle; no time to waste on Cadman and Fosdick and Potter. We must let the dead bury the dead, and we must follow the Lord. We have the Garden of Eden to look back to and therefore, we don't have to look to the Zoological Garden. We know where we came from, we know who we are, and we know where we are going. We belong to the crowd that has a Divine Creator and that makes us a divine creation. We are happy and contented; we are cleaned up and cleaned out; then we are in a condition to be filled up and sent out. We have the message the world is dying for—a know-so religion and a full salvation on a rock foundation. In 1931 let no child of God get uneasy when a fellow finds a bone in Italy, or a jawtooth in Germany, or a shin bone in South America. Keep looking up and expecting to go up. Thank God for the day that the King of the world was born, and that he has lifted you above the fog and mist of the wicked world in which you live. Unbelievers have nothing to offer you but unbelief, fear and doubt. Thank God, "unto us a Child is born, and unto us a Son is given." We know whom we have believed, and we know that he is able to keep that which we have committed unto his keeping. Glory to God the Father, and God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost forever and ever.
In perfect love and all, for Jesus, for 1931, if it is our good pleasure to live.

BUD ROBINSON.

The Mills of the Gods.

Most any one enjoys a good, thrilling story and in this book you will get a good picture of present-day conditions and what the to-morrows will bring.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

THE TEMPLE OF GOD.

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you." 1 Cor. 3:16.

Man has ever exerted himself to build the most beautiful temples imaginable for God to dwell in, but has never been able to equal the temple which he has designed for his abiding place; the body of man.

It is the most beautiful, the most holy temple ever designed and yet man has ever desecrated and abused it more than anything God has made.

It was not made to be a pleasure resort for all kinds of evil desires and worldly lusts, but as a place of fellowship with God. Let us keep this temple clean and pure.

Florida Holiness Camp Meeting.

The sixth annual meeting of The Florida Holiness Camp will be conducted in large Tabernacle, South Florida Ave., Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 12th to 22nd, 1931. This camp is interdenominational and stands for orthodox Bible holiness. Our purpose is an old fashioned camp meeting to promote spirituality in our churches. In this time of wickedness and sin, financial depression, suffering and sorrow, great lack of revivals of religion, God's people are urged to pray for this camp meeting.

We are fortunate in securing as leaders for this camp, Dr. H. C. Morrison, Editor of PENTECOSTAL HERALD and General Evangelist of M. E. Church, South, Dr. C. H. Babcock, nationally known Evangelist of the Nazarene Church, Rev. Warner P. Davis, pastor of M. E. Church, South, Wilmore, Ky., Rev. E. Watt Smith, Presiding Elder Bartow District, Florida Conference M. E. Church, South, Prof. Charles W. Grant, recent graduate of Asbury College, will conduct the singing. Other workers will be present to help.

Good meals will be served on the grounds in large dining-room. Hotel accommodations, rooming houses, private homes, etc., can be had in Lakeland at very reasonable rates for all who may attend. The largest attendance in history of camp is expected. Please pray, plan to come and write Rev. H. H. McAfee, Box 534, Lakeland, Fla.

H. H. MCAFEE, President.

AN IRRESISTIBLE MAJORITY.

III. "Fear Not."

Why should we fear anything or anybody? We are on the winning side. Who will harm us if we be followers of that which is good? No weapon formed against us shall prosper. Many times over are we exhorted in the Word: "Fear not." "Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea." "In God have I put my trust; I will not fear what flesh can do unto me." "The Lord is on my side; I will not fear what man can do unto me."

"He hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me; for there were many with me." Praise God!

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

A TALL YOUNG KING.

During the years that Samuel ruled as judge in Israel there was peace throughout the land, and the people destroyed their idols, turning to the worship of the Lord. But while Samuel was a just judge, ruling in a quiet yet strong way, his sons grew up to do wrong and turned away from the teachings of their father. When matters were brought before them to be judged, they decided in favor of the man who gave them the most money, whether he was right or wrong.

So the elders of all the tribes complained to Samuel that he was growing old, that his sons were unjust judges, and added that since their neighbors, the Edomites, the Philistines and the Syrians had kings, they should like to have a king too.

At first Samuel rebuked the elders and told them that God was their king, but after he talked to the Lord about it, the Lord said, "Do as the people ask, and choose a king for them." Then Samuel set out to find the right man to be the first king of Israel.

One day as Samuel was sitting in judgment at the city of Ramah, a fine, noble-looking young man, so tall that he looked over the heads of all those about him, came to ask the judge's help in finding some mules which had strayed from his father's farm. As soon as Samuel saw this handsome stranger, it seemed as if the Lord's voice said, "This is the man who shall rule over my people."

Then Samuel took the tall young man home with him and treated him with great courtesy. The next morning before the young man left, he told Samuel he belonged to the tribe of Benjamin and that his father's name was Kish. Samuel poured oil on the young man's head as a sign of the Lord's blessing, and told him that God had chosen him to be Israel's king. But the young man felt very humble and went quietly away to his home on his father's farm.

Not long afterward Samuel called all the people together at a place called Mizpah. All the people had to march before Samuel, one tribe at a time, and when the tribe of Benjamin came by Samuel had it taken out. And out of the tribe of Benjamin he chose the family of Kish. But when the young man's name was called he was no where to be found, for he had hidden in the camp.

But the men searched him out and Samuel proclaimed him king. When the young man stood among the people, he rose head and shoulders above them all.

Samuel explained the laws to the people and wrote them all out in a book for them to keep. And most of the people were proud of their brave, new king, but there were some who objected to him because he was an unknown man from an unimportant family.

For many years this young king, with God's help, led the armies of Israel to victory over their old enemies, the Philistines, as well as fierce Ammonites who lived near the desert on the east of the Jordan. But as his kingdom grew, and his power increased, sins of pride, wilfulness, and jealousy crept into his heart, so that he disobeyed God, and God forsook him. And the kingdom did not pass to the sons of this king, but God raised up a man of another tribe, and another family to reign in his stead.

Questions.

1. What was the young man's name?
2. Why did the people of Israel ask for a king?
3. Where did the young man live as king?

At the top of this story I think we should print: Last week's story was the story of Jacob.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let another girl join your happy band of boys and girls? We don't take The Herald but Mrs. Newman lets me have her's to read. I enjoy them very much. I am saved and sanctified. I am a member of the Nazarene Church. I love the services of the Lord. My heart's desire is to work for him. I am glad so many of the cousins are Christians. Let us be sure we are. May God bless you all.

Bessie Carver.
Rt. 3, Alvaaton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I am again. I have written before and I certainly do thank you for giving it a place on page ten and please make room for another. I have just been reading page ten and some of the letters certainly are good. I'm so glad some of my cousins are Christians and I hope it won't be long until all of them are. I want all of you cousins to write to me, I certainly do enjoy reading letters from folks, especially Christians, as I am a Christian myself. Listen cousins, do you think life is worth living without God? I do not. I would have no desire whatever to live if it wasn't for my hope in God. I have no desire to attend picture shows, dances, or anything like that. I'm glad that the desire has been taken out of my heart and thank God for good Christian parents that have never approved of such things. There are no Christian girls of my age that live near me, but I can live a Christian life by God's help if I have to live it alone, and I am earnestly praying that God through his infinite mercy will save many others. I'm fifteen years old, birthday May 11. I have gray eyes and light hair.

Lou Ellen Mulkey.
Rt. 3, Anderson, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I was converted when I was a child, but when I grew up I turned my back on God and tried to find pleasure by serving the devil, but there is no pleasure for any one serving him. I would pick out some of the weakest church members and say I was as good as they. Bro. Earl Phillips held a revival. I went one night. He preached a wonderful sermon about the children of Israel crossing the Red Sea. They gave the altar call and I sat there and shook like I had a chill hoping some one would come to talk to me and scared to death they would. No one came and I left before the services ended, with all theimps the devil had in town at my heels. I never went back any more during that revival. The latter part of August, 1928, Bro. Phillips had the Grant Brothers sang from Asbury. You know the ones from Asbury can preach. They were on fire for God. I had been in the hospital the first part of August. I didn't go to the meeting until the last week. It wasn't that I wasn't able, for I was doing my own work, but the devil said I had better stay away. You know how a holiness meeting stirs a town. I went, and when they came in the tent and I saw their faces you could see heaven there, and when they sang "Zion's Hill" Mother Grant would shout, with heaven so thick on her face you couldn't have scoured it off with sandpaper. I went home that night miserable. I wished I could be a Christian, not one like I had been that would fly up when I couldn't have my way. My sister got reclaimed. The devil said, "Now she will think she is better than you." Praise God, that afternoon I went to the meeting. The Grant brothers sang "The Haven of Rest." God showed me that I had none, so I went to the altar and took all the sins that I had and put them as far behind me as the East is from the West. Next A. M. I was alone, and I said I am going to be sanctified. I gave up everything I had or ever expected to have, myself included, and then the fire fell. I have been in meetings where the Christians were almost afraid to come to the altar for prayer, on account of sanctification. But I never knew of any one ever being sanctified that didn't have to want it bad enough to ask for it. I know how The Herald has helped me; there have been times when I was in the valley, couldn't see a thing, then The Herald came and it seemed that God just gave Bro. Morrison the power to write what I needed. Have you a shut-in friend? Send them The Herald. God will surely bless you and them. May God bless and keep every reader of The Herald, and Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, is my prayer.

Mrs. Ethel Newcomb.
Box 21, Richview, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Have you room in your happy band of boys and girls for an Ohio girl to join? I have dark brown eyes and brown hair. I am ten years old, weigh 65 pounds. Have I a twin? My name is Virginia Sontzenheiser. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with A and ends with E, it has four letters. I am in the fifth grade at school. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. The name of my class is Polly Anna Class. My middle name is Anne.

Virginia Sontzenheiser.
Uniontown, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: From time to time I have thought I'd like very much to write a letter for page ten; not that I'm a gifted writer but as I enjoy reading the many good letters from various countries. I especially enjoy the letters from those telling of their Christian experiences as it is an inspiration to me to read such letters. My grandmother Tarpley takes The Herald. We live in the old home with her. Both my parents are living and I have two brothers; Thomas is seventeen years old. I am eleven, and John Rolfe is eight. We are Methodists and enjoy any good Christian services. I stayed with my aunt and uncle, Mrs. J. L. Tabb, Colquitt, Ga., and went to school there last term. My cousin, Elmo Tabb, is in Congo Belge, Lusambo, Africa, a medical missionary. His wife is a missionary also. It's wonderful to read of some of their experiences there. Aunt Bettie, please print this letter as it is my first.

Leonda Tarpley.
Rt. 2, Toombsboro, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a girl from Kentucky join your happy band of boys and girls? I am fifteen years of age, five feet tall, have red hair and gray eyes. My birthday is September 3. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. I sure do enjoy page ten. As this is my first letter I would like to see it in print. I would be very glad if some of the cousins would write to me, if any care to write.

Mayzelle Lambert.
Trammel, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I feel the Lord would have me write you this letter this nice day. This is my second letter to The Herald. I am a cripple. I can walk but not as others do. All of those who read this pray for me that God will heal me. I love Jesus with all my heart. Dear cousins, let's do all we can to help the ones who are out in sin. They are all unsaved in my home. I am the only one that is a Christian. I stay with grandpa and he is not saved. It is so hard to live a Christian life. Aunt Bettie, please print this. Keep praying that I will never let the old devil have his way again in my heart. Pray that I may hold on to Jesus, that those around me will see I have Jesus in my heart. I get lonesome as there is no one to stay here with me. Grandpa stays alone. I will be glad to get letters from all the States.

Pauline Harner.
Rt. 3, Celina, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please move over and give a little Tennessee boy room for a little chat? My name is Claude Sauceman. I am a Methodist preacher's son. I live on the Newport Circuit. I go to church at Jenkins Chapel. I like to go to church. I have two brothers and two sisters. I hope W. B. is hunting wild cats when my letter arrives.

Claude Sauceman.
Rt. 2, Cosby, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band? I have been a silent reader of The Pentecostal Herald for some time; but neglected writing. I take the paper and enjoy reading it very much. I am married and have a baby boy. I live in the country about five miles from Roanoke. I like the Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to The Herald. We do not take it but a friend gives it to us. I am twelve years old, have dark brown hair, brown eyes. I guessed Katherine Taylor's first name to be Mary. I enjoy reading page ten very much. I am trying to live a good life. I go to Church and Sunday school. I would like to hear from all the boys and girls of The Herald. I enjoy reading letters. This is my first letter and would like very much to see it in print.

Ed. Brown.
Rt. 1, Box 148, Doerun, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Since there are but a few children from Ohio that write to this paper I will write. My hair is brown, I have brown eyes, I have light complexion. I think that you will allow me to join the happy boys and girls. I wish that you would leave room for me to put my letter to be printed in The Herald. We do not get The Herald but my grandmother shows it to me when I am there. I enjoy the letters of other boys and girls that are near my age. I am eleven years old and I am in the sixth grade. I go to Sunday school nearly every Sunday I can. I was born Oct. 29, 1919, at Hartsville, O., but now I live north of Uniontown near a little pond they call East Morland. Love to Aunt Bettie and all her cousins.

FALLEN ASLEEP

ASHINHUST.

Harold Ashinhust died August 22, 1930; was born in Weaubleau, Mo., May 23, 1903. He moved with his parents and only sister to Pleasant Hill, Mo., when six years of age. For some time he has been living in Kansas City and following the business as a barber, in which he became an excellent workman. It was as a barber that I first met him. I discovered that he was a serious-minded young man, that he had high ideals and that he was interested in religion. He volunteered to come to our church (the Marlborough Baptist) and I told him we would be glad indeed to see him there. So the next Sunday evening he came, accompanied by Miss Bonnie Shatto who was destined to become his wife. I believe that as he sat and listened to the sermon that evening he became a Christian; the soil was ready for the good seed. He came again and again and in a few weeks (March 16, 1930) he and Miss Shatto came forward and made known to us their faith in Jesus Christ. They were baptized May 4, 1930. Immediately they began to show their interest in the work of the church. Often since he and she too, have told me how much they appreciated the friendly and spiritual fellowship of the members. Meanwhile I had begun to think that, soon, Harold would become one of our active and most useful members, but that hope, like that of his loved ones, had to perish.

He was married but a short time ago to Miss Bonnie Shatto and they had spent a few happy days together. Life was sweet, hope was strong, the future full of promise, but God had another plan and I am sure that all of us who knew them feel that the parting of their paths so soon by death is one of the great mysteries of human life. It is a note of sadness to which all our hearts respond. But we believe that even this, God in his wisdom and love, planned. We shall not complain; God knows best.

Harold's father passed away in Pleasant Hill, eight years ago. His mother still resides there. His young wife and his sister, Mrs. Nona Williams, are here in Kansas City. Their sorrow has become our sorrow; there is much to make their sorrow sweet. How pleasant will be the memory of a son so noble, a brother so kind, a young husband so true. May our Heavenly Father bestow his grace and comfort.

Rev. T. P. Stafford.

Pastor of the Marlborough Baptist Church, Kansas City, Mo.

GUNDER.

Mrs. Maria Nancy Gunder, better known as "Auntie Gunder," peacefully fell asleep, trusting in Jesus, Friday evening, Nov. 21, 1930. She was the daughter of Calvin and Olive Hutson, born in Edinburg, Ohio, Dec. 10, 1846 and lived to the good old age of 83 years, 11 months, 11 days. She was married to Joseph S. Gunder, April 19, 1866, who preceded her eight years ago. To this union were born three children, Josie, now deceased, Frank, of Ravenna, O., and Roy, on the homestead. Besides the sons she leaves one brother, Melford Hutson, of Newton Falls, Ohio, two granddaughters, Mrs. Nina Collins and Mrs. Thelma Hill, both of Akron, O. A beloved little granddaughter, Ethel Gunder, preceded her grandmother years ago. In her young days, she was saved and remained faithful to the Methodist faith until her death. A fitting tribute was paid Auntie Gunder by our former pastor, Rev. C. D. Patterson, now of Greenville, Pa. His text was, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2:10. It was a comforting message to the living.

Funeral services were held Monday, Nov. 24, 1930, 2 P. M., at Wood's funeral parlors. Burial in Edinburg Cemetery beside her husband. Just a few days before Auntie left she told her son not to worry for her for she was trusting in Jesus.

Lovingly written by her neighbor,
Mrs. Ettie C. Shewell.

KELLER.

Ida Catherine Riblet was born Nov. 11, 1855, and died Nov. 16, 1930, aged 75 years, 5 days. She was united in marriage to Wm. Franklin Keller on Dec. 22, 1880. To this union were born three children, now Mrs. Ora Butler, Jay Keller and Mrs. Floy Slack who, with seven grandchildren and two foster grandchildren and one sister and step-mother, survive.

She was converted when a young girl; was a member of the Hedding M. E. Church for years, always faithful in attendance as long as health permitted, then she clung to the Bible and her religious papers for spiritual food. During her last illness, when suffering, she would plead with Jesus to help her and to come and take her. She said he had helped her so many times he never failed her. She loved God's promises and died trusting in her blessed Savior. She went to sleep and peacefully slipped away from us on Sunday morning at 2 o'clock. The following verses were found in her Bible:

"Walking with God in sorrow's dark hour,
Calm and serene in his infinite power,
Walking with him, I am free from all dread,
Filled with his Spirit, oh, softly I tread.
Walking with God, oh fellowship sweet,
Thus to know God, and in him be complete;
Walking with him whom the world cannot know,
Oh, it is sweet through life thus to go.
Walking with God in sorrow's dark hour,
Soothed and sustained by his infinite power,
Oh, it is sweet to my soul thus to live,
Filled with peace which the world cannot give.
Walking with God, oh may my life be such that my Lord can walk always with me;
Walking with him I shall know day by day,
That he is my Father, and leads all the way."

Her funeral was conducted by Rev. L. C. McFarlin of Centerville; text, Rev. 14:13.

Her daughter,
Mrs. Floy Slack.
Fredericktown, Ohio.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Pray for the salvation of a son.

Mrs. C.: "Pray for a mother that she may have good health, and that her husband may find employment."

A Herald reader requests prayer for three brothers who are sick, that they may be saved; also for other relatives, and for herself that she may have a better experience.

READING, PENNSYLVANIA.

This is the first time I have reported for over two years. I can say that this has been the best year of my ministry by far. During my camp meeting season, July, August, and September, I saw between fifteen hundred and two thousand souls bow at an altar of prayer.

I closed my last meeting with Rev. J. H. Parker at Reading, Pa. Rev. D. E. Higgs, district superintendent, and Rev. J. H. Parker, pastor, secured the People's Methodist Church in the heart of the city for the campaign. The meeting was well advertised, and people came from all over the city, filling the church to its capacity, some being turned away. The first week of the meeting was a Sunday school convention, a preachers' meeting, and a revival, combined. Dr. Ellyson had charge of the Sunday school convention, and Rev. T. M. Anderson preached several times in the preachers' meeting. The Kutch Sisters, singers and musicians, proved a great blessing to the revival.

Rev. J. H. Parker came to Reading eighteen months ago, finding a membership of thirty-nine. They now have over one hundred members. The last week I was there we saw two hundred bow at the altar, receiving a fine class of eighteen members the last night. Rev. D. E. Higgs and Rev. Parker are carrying the meeting on for two weeks more. Bro. Parker writes me that they haven't had one barren service. Rev. D. E. Higgs, the new district superintendent, surely has the vision for his district.

We are now in a great revival campaign in Chester, W. Va. The altar is lined at every service, and God is blessing us. Rev. C. B. Pugett.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IV.—January 25, 1931.

Subject.—Jesus Tempted. Luke 4:1-13.

Golden Text.—For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted. Hebrews 2:18.

Time.—Early part of A. D. 27.

Places.—The Jordan River and the Wilderness near the Dead Sea.

Introduction.—The question is often asked: "Who is Satan?" He is a fallen angel. We say this with confidence, although we have but little in the Bible to prove it. Knowing that many have been accustomed to interpret Isaiah 14:12-15, as referring to the Devil, I have taken time to make a critical study of the passage, but find no such meaning in it. The reference seems to be solely to the king of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar. I quote Dr. Adam Clarke as being a representative commentator. He is writing concerning this clause: "O Lucifer, son of the morning." "Although the context speaks explicitly concerning Nebuchadnezzar, yet this has been, I know not why, applied to the chief of the fallen angels, who is most incongruously denominated Lucifer, (the bringer of light!) an epithet as common to him as those of Satan and Devil. That the Holy Spirit by his prophets should call this arch-enemy of God and man the light-bringer, would be strange indeed. But the truth is, the text speaks nothing at all concerning Satan nor his fall, nor the occasion of that fall, which many divines have with great confidence deduced from this text. O how necessary it is to understand the literal meaning of Scripture, that preposterous comments may be prevented." Dr. Clarke contends that the expression should be translated: "Howl, son of the morning." It seems to be a fearful prophetic thrust at Nebuchadnezzar.

I notice one other passage that I think has been wrongly applied to Satan: Ezekiel 28:13-15. The thought really begins at verse 12, which shows plainly that the application is to the king of Tyrus (Tyre). The entire passage seems to be a piece of bitter irony against that wicked king and his depraved city. I see no reason to apply it to Satan.

Now if you will turn to the 6th verse of the Epistle of Jude, you will find a passage that manifestly refers to the fallen angels, although the name of Satan is not there mentioned: "And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day."

This depraved being is mentioned under various names in the Bible. In Rev. 20:2 he is called the Dragon, the old Serpent, the Devil, and Satan. He is termed the "prince of this world," and Beelzebub. In some places he is called the "tempter." The name "Devil" means slanderer. Jesus calls him "a liar from the beginning." He is also termed an "accuser of the brethren." The word Satan is from the Hebrew, and means simply an "Adversary." The Bible makes plain the fact that he is the arch-fiend, and that he is in the very strongest sense of the word a malignant personality.

Satan is represented as having under his control a host of inferior beings who are termed "his angels," messengers. Properly speaking, there is but one Satan; that is, one Devil. His underlings are demons. They all seem to be employed by him in an effort to ruin the human race.

Our lesson today deals with what may be called a combat between Jesus Christ our Lord, and this arch-fiend. No man fully comprehends the import of this temptation; but some profitable lessons we may deduce from it:

I. It was a real solicitation to evil. It is scarcely to be supposed that Satan knew the true nature of Jesus Christ. He perhaps knew that he was dealing with a mighty Being of spotless purity; but, had he recognized the Deity of the Master, he would hardly have been so bold.

II. There has been much disputing as to the possibility of Christ's yielding to the temptation. I am not sure that any one knows anything whatever about that matter. Guessing is easy; but that will not reveal truth. I shall not venture.

III. Inasmuch as Jesus Christ had no carnal nature to which Satan could appeal, the temptation was of necessity addressed to his normal desires. But the temptation must have been intense; for he suffered under it. It must have been broad in its scope; for we read in Heb. 4:9, that he "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin."

IV. I think Dr. Samuel Chadwick of England is correct when he states that Jesus did not overcome Satan as God, but as man; and that he used the very same power of the Holy Ghost that is vouchsafed unto us; for otherwise the fact that he overcame Satan could be no encouragement to us. Thank God, we too can win through the Divine Spirit.

V. Since our Lord suffered such sore temptation, it is very presumptuous for any one to suppose that he can get beyond temptation in this life. That would put one above his Lord.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost.—This expression is a bit strange, seeing that Jesus himself was God; but I suppose that it refers to his humanity. Was led by the Spirit.—The Holy Spirit. Mark says: "The Spirit driveth him."

2. Being forty days tempted of the devil.—Matthew seems to indicate that the temptation did not begin till after the forty days of fasting; but Mark's account implies that the temptation ran through the forty days. Luke's account is not perfectly clear; but after comparing the three accounts, I am persuaded that the tempter did not begin his onslaught until the end of the fast. He was, perhaps, waiting till he thought the time was ripe for the surest success. He is wise; but he made a mistake that time. Instead of one's being rendered too weak to withstand temptation by prayer and fasting, he is strengthened against it. He did eat nothing.—Infidels laughed about this fast for a long time; but in recent years many have fasted much longer than forty days, and seemingly without harm.

3. If thou be the Son of God.—

Both Luke and Matthew say: "A son of God." Either the Devil did not recognize his Deity, or else he was trying to throw doubt upon it. The "if" indicates as much. Command this stone that it be made bread.—This was an appeal to the normal desire for food. Jesus could have done just what Satan suggested, and there would have been no harm in his turning a stone into a loaf of bread; but he could not yield to the Devil's solicitation, even though he was in dire need of bread. Nor can we yield to any suggestion from the tempter without injury to our souls. Have nothing whatever to do with him.

4. It is written.—Jesus knew that the Old Testament was the inspired Word of God; and he used it against the Devil, and thereby set us an example. Nothing whips him quicker than Scripture. The Psalmist says: "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I may not sin against thee." Have your ammunition ready. Jesus recognizes the fact that man is more than flesh and blood. Common beasts can live on nothing but material foods; but man must have soul food. He needs to feast upon the Word of God.

5. Into a high mountain.—Commentators contend that this was a physical impossibility unless they were upon some high mountain overlooking the kingdoms lying around Palestine, which region was often termed the world; or, perchance, the Devil was capable of giving him a spiritual vision of all the kingdoms of earth. Whatever it was, it required but a "moment of time."

6. All this power will I give thee.—Again the temptation was to a normal desire. Control of the kingdoms of this world was the very thing that Jesus had come for. But the Devil's price was too high; "If thou therefore wilt worship me." Here we have indescribable audacity and lying. Satan has usurped control of this world, but owns nothing. His declaration of ownership was a lie out of the whole cloth. He seemed to realize that Jesus Christ had come to take control of the world; but by his audacious lying he purposed to bring even the Son of God under his dominion. We note that Matthew reverses the order of the last two temptations.

8. Get thee behind me, Satan.—This would seem more properly to follow the last temptation, as it was an order to leave. Again the Master says: "Is written." Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.—It is a mystery how any one can pray to saints and angels in the face of the plain words of Scripture. It is all idolatry, and on a par with the worship of the gods of heathenism.

9. A pinnacle to the temple.—It has been impossible to locate this definitely. Some have supposed that it was what was termed "The King's Gallery." Josephus says it "deserves to be mentioned among the most magnificent things under the sun: for upon a stupendous depth of a valley, scarcely to be fathomed by the eye of him that stands above, Herod erected a gallery of a vast height, from the top of which if any one looked down, he would grow dizzy, his eyes not being able to reach so vast a depth." Cast thyself down from hence.—Note the use of the "if" again in the preceding clause. The Devil is great on quoting Scripture; but he bends it to suit his own ends, as he does in this case. Again the appeal was to a normal desire. Jesus came to show the world his Deity; and the Devil is very anxious to help him. If he would just jump headlong into that awful valley, everybody would believe in him at once. Of course the angels would catch him; so that he would not be hurt.

12. Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.—No one dare presume upon the mercy of God. Even Jesus would not do that. The Psalmist prayed: "Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins: let them not have dominion over me." Satan garbled a quotation from Ps. 91:11, 12. Jesus replied with a quotation from Deut. 6:16. God will not suffer us to trifle with his mercy.

13. The devil . . . departed from him for a season.—But only for a season. He would renew the attack later. Matthew adds that "angels came, and ministered unto him." Some one suggests that they brought to him the needed food. Maybe so: that is reasonable; but nothing is said to that effect. They did whatever was necessary for the strengthening of his hungry body. We have the assurance that angels encamp round about us; and I suppose they strengthen us amid the sore conflicts of life.

CHRISTIAN CONQUESTS—Studies in Spiritual Victories. By Robert Merrill Bartlett, First Congregational Church, Norwood, Mass. Dr. Bartlett's ministry is noted for worship guidance. He preaches the self-disciplinary religion that offers a way of conquest over common, everyday experiences. His ever-recurring emphasis is upon the joyful task of the Christian to link up spiritual precepts with daily practice—to obtain the grasp on the spiritual forces which makes us conquerors over all that life holds. Personal and group study of this book will lead many readers into a life-giving stream of personal religion. $1.25. Pentecostal Publishing Company.

PERSONALS.

Rev. W. C. Kinsey: "We are evangelistic singers, children's and young people's workers. Mrs. Kinsey is also pianist. We have two camp meetings for next summer but have an open date the fore part of July, 2 to 12, which we would like to slate with some camp. Besides taking charge of the music, we are prepared to take the children's and young people's meetings. We have been in the field about ten years. Address us Richmond, Ind., 450 So. West 2nd St."

I feel led to place the following notice in this paper: I am a song leader and soloist, forty years of age, saved and living in Canaanland little more than a year. I have been in the show business for years singing throughout the country for the devil, but thank God after I was willing to submit he brought me out from among them and he took me into the fold. I have had engagements in a number of churches throughout the country this past year. The Lord was good to me and I am going through in his service testifying and singing to a lost world till Jesus comes, by his help. I shall be pleased to hear from a church who may need an assistant to the pastor; can help with the young people and in the singing, use a typewriter, do radio singing, can sing first tenor, second tenor or baritone in quartette work. Will consider going out with an evangelist. Will consider anybody, any place, if you believe in holiness. If Jesus goes with me I'll go anywhere. He is mine and I am his. His will be done. If anybody is interested will be glad to hear from you. Can refer you to a number of leading evangelists or pastors. Better still, call me for a meeting and if you are disappointed I will be glad to walk back home. God's blessing on each of you who read this is my prayer. Address me: Song Evangelist, care Pentecostal Herald, Louisville, Ky.

USED SHOES AND CLOTHING NEEDED IN THE MOUNTAINS.

There is a great need for used shoes and clothing, especially children's shoes and clothing, in the mountain sections of eastern Kentucky. Even though they are worn we can repair and use them. In our rounds we see many children barefoot or nearly so, and so thinly clad that they must remain around the fireplace in their little cabins, not a few of which have no glass windows and are totally dark if the door is closed to keep out the cold. In spite of some aid received from the National Red Cross, the need for food is also very great in some sections due to the recent drought conditions. "He that hath two coats let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat (or food) let him do likewise." Some cash will be required for wages and materials in connection with the repair of shoes and clothing.

Let us who call ourselves Christians meet this need in the spirit of him who "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister," and let us increase the enjoyment of our own comforts by sharing them with others less fortunate than we. Address all communications either to the Chairman or to the Treasurer of the Martin County Red Cross, Inez, Ky.

Wm. N. Keith,

Full Time Health Officer and Chairman of Red Cross.

CHICAGO CENTRAL DISTRICT CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

District Program for 1931.

In the year of 1931, by the help of God, we are intending to put on the most aggressive evangelistic campaign in the history of our district. We have taken as our slogan the most essential and most important business of the churches "Revivals At Any Cost." As the revival method has always been God's method of promoting the kingdom of Jesus Christ, as well as the Church of the Nazarene's, we are going in to give added emphasis to this. To that end we are starting in the first of the year. Every pastor, every church worker, and every layman over our district is going in to see the gospel carried to more souls and to see more people saved and sanctified, and a more pronounced deepening in our spiritual life among our ministry and laity than of any time in our history. We have already set aside March 15 to April 5 on the District as a time for a District-Wide Revival lasting over four Sundays, and we are expecting a great time in the Holy Ghost. We know that the only thing in the world that is going to bring this about is mighty, intercessory prayer on the part of our preachers and people. By God's help we will pay the price.

Increase in Membership.

We are going to bend heaven and earth to try to increase our membership 25 per cent this year. You know that if we have this old-fashioned revival that that will increase the membership 25 per cent, our Sunday schools 25 per cent, and other matters likewise. So you see the main thing to do is to have the revival.

Missions.

We believe also that we are going to have a new impetus given to our great foreign and home missionary cause. God has helped us greatly along this line during this quadrennium. We have no thought of retrenching. We have no thought of giving less to the billion heathen who never heard of Jesus Christ, three-fourths of whom sleep on the ground and one-third of whom go hungry every night to bed—say we have no thought of retrenching or giving less. And we, by God's help, are going to make the sacrifice and do our best at this end. We are glad to report that in the Thanksgiving offering some of the pastors of some of the largest churches left their salaries go unpaid but they brought up their budgets. Of course you know when a pastor does that God will see that his salary is taken care of.

Home Missions.

We are making every plan to push the great home missionary cause in Illinois, Wisconsin and Chicago. Here in the midst of 11,000,000 people in a pretty close check up the other day on the cities of Illinois we found that there were 600 towns from 500 to 40,000 in which there was no Church of the Nazarene and these people are begging us to come. As fast as we can promote this work we are entering these fields. We are going to buy more and better tents. We are going to enter these great cities and carry the gospel to the starving ten thousands of Illinois, Wisconsin and Chicago.

Herald of Holiness.

We have always been truly convinced and we are also of the deep-seated conviction that nothing promotes the cause of Jesus Christ and the Church of the Nazarene like our general church organ, The Herald of Holiness. We believe first of all that the denomination ought to put on the most aggressive campaign in its history to get 40,000 subscribers to The Herald of Holiness. Chicago Central District will be glad to get any reasonable amount of this number. I am sure we can get 2,500 yearly subscribers and maybe 4,000, and that is a mighty hard job when you undertake to do that. In other words we are going to make 1931 the banner year for The Herald of Holiness on Chicago Central District. And, we say the same for the "Other Sheep," N. Y. P. S., Journal, Preachers' Magazine, and all the other publications of our denomination as well.

Olivet College.

It has been my part and, I believe God's providence, to be connected with Olivet College for nine years. I have always been loyal to the President. I am more convinced today than ever, that the colleges of our denomination will play a very important part in the growth of our church. To that end this coming year I am going to help Brother Willingham and Olivet College more than ever spiritually, financially and officially. We have a great school at Olivet and we have turned out hundreds of workers already to bless the world. I believe in our schools.

Denominational Loyalty.

We may have lots of faults but one we are not guilty of, of knocking anything connected with our denomination. We are 100 per cent for our general church, our general superintendents, general treasurer, general secretary, editor of The Herald of Holiness, manager of the Publishing House, in fact, the entire denomination. We believe in it. After fifteen years we are more convinced than ever that God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost raised up the Church of the Nazarene to help bring a saving gospel to a lost and dying world in the twentieth century.

Personally, the last two years has been a time of heart-searching and digging down in our own personal, Christian experience. Two years ago on New Year's Day in Wilmore, Ky., at my father-in-law's I determined then, more than ever before, to go my full length for God and a lost world, and the Church of the Nazarene. I have been able to read a book a week, and have been wearing my Bible out and my trouser knees get bare. In the midst of perplexities and difficulties I am making some small progress spiritually.

No one in all of our denomination, I believe, has a better spirit of cooperation from his people and pastors than I have, and I want by God's help to spend and be spent for God and his glory. Pray for me, for I really need it. Any one interested in starting a Church of the Nazarene in Illinois, or Wisconsin write me at Danville, Illinois, general delivery.

E. O. Chalfant,

Dist. Supt. Chicago Central Dist. Church of the Nazarene.

ARNOLDS' COMMENTARY

A very practical aid for the busy teacher. It is rich in suggestions and sets forth the lesson in a very pleasing manner. We consider this the most spiritual exposition of the Sunday school lesson. The hints to teachers, illustrations, blackboard exercises, questions, maps, etc., make this popular help a good all-round commentary at a popular price $1.00.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1931

By Amos R. Wells. Fifty-seventh Annual Volume.

To the many who are familiar with "PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES," it would be sufficient to say that the standard of excellence which has characterized the work for more than half a century is fully maintained in the new volume.

The analysis and treatment of the lessons are clear and informing, carrying quotations from great Bible teachers. It is for teachers of all grades and contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help so compiled and tabulated that it can be effectively used. It has maps, pictures, and charts alone worth the price of the book.

This book is invaluable for the study of the Uniform Lessons. Price $2.00.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide recognizes no superior. If you have never used this wonderful commentary, try it for 1931.

No teacher will be unprepared who uses this extraordinary commentary. The treatment of the lesson never becomes dull or uninteresting. The topics are always fresh and appealing.

Many thousands of up-to-date teachers buy two or more of the best commentaries and find it pays. Whatever you do, don't leave out Tarbell's this year. Price $2.00.

The Gist of The Lesson

An excellent commentary by R. A. Torrey. It is a concise, boiled-down commentary for the busy teacher. It takes the text of the lesson, each verse separately, and illuminates it. It gives the teacher many good ideas. Price 55c.

I BELIEVE IN THE SECOND BLESSING.

By The Editor.

I believe in the Second Blessing
As a second, definite work of grace.
It is only with the justified
That this second work takes place.

It is a gracious cleansing
From all one's inbred sin;
It means death to the carnal nature,
When the Holy Ghost comes in.

It nails the Old Man to the cross,
Heeds not his groans and sighs;
It consecrates to Jesus Christ—
It wholly sanctifies.

It may bring you persecution,
It will give you peace and power;
It is a full salvation,
It will bless you every hour.

Thank God, I sought this blessing—
This sanctifying power;
It keeps my soul securely
In temptation's trying hour.

Oh, come and seek this blessing—
This burning up of dross—
This cleansing blood of Jesus
He shed upon the cross.

Christ died to make us holy,
He suffered on the tree;
If we will yield our all to Him,
From sin He'll set us free.

"Soviet students who were coming to this country as industrial observers under the auspices of the Amtorg Trading Corporation were turned back at the border on assertions that all the way over they had been preaching and spreading the gospel of the Communist. They assured everybody that the Soviet was responsible for the disturbances in China and India and would keep up the work until those lands were revolutionized. They even sought to show that they had something to do in connection with the tangles in South America. Somehow or other a Communist can never keep his theories to himself. They will not keep quiet. They are opposed to existing forms of government and they want everybody to know it."

The teachers of evolution in the colleges and universities of this country, along with the modernist preachers, tearing up the Bible, discounting Christ, opposing revivals of religion, have prepared the soil for the sowing of every sort of dangerous and destructive notion of an atheistic, godless host of malcontents who seek to destroy all order and turn the world into a shamble of blood and fire.

Men seem to have forgotten a saying of Christ that should be remembered: "Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out and to be trodden under foot of men."

The salt has lost its savour in Russia. Behold, the trampling of a formal, powerless religion under the feet of Bolshevism. The same thing will happen in this country. We have religious leaders who are extracting all of the salt, all of the saving power out of religion, while the mob is getting its brogans well studded with hobnails for the trampling. It will be fearful trampling! It seems that men will never learn that, when the laws of God are disobeyed and his mercies rejected, his judgments are sure to follow, and they are terrible.

If the religious people of this country insist on decent political leaders they are confronted with a profane demand that "religion must be kept out of politics, or politics must be kept out of religion." In other words, if a man is a Christian he must smother his thoughts, hold his tongue, and vote for any demagogue that a corrupt, godless, political party, seeking power and pelf, may suggest to him without question or objection.

The fact is, it takes large quantities of religious salt to keep politics in the neighborhood of decency, and if any one dare to throw a bit of salt into the political situation today, he is hounded as if he were the vilest traitor; meanwhile, we have one hundred thousand murders in this nation every twelve months, most of the killers going free of punishment. Thirty-odd thousand people are killed with automobiles every year, some two hundred thousand crippled by reckless drivers, while sixty thousand girls go into white slavery each year. Their average life is five years, and then they take the plunge into the dark, while their ranks are filled up and the procession marches on.

If you want to call the Christian people together to sing, to preach, to visit and to pray for a revival, you are told that the day of revivals is past, while hell enlarges itself to receive her deceived, unfortunate, neglected victims. The Eternal Word says so!

There are Thirteen Hundred Million

Next Four Decades.

WHAT WILL BE THEIR COLOR?

CHAPTER II.

Reclosed last week's chapter on the subject under discussion with the statement that the white race has, up to the present time, had leadership among men. Travel around the globe, read history, and at once you find that white men have produced the architecture, the literature, the art, and made the greatest scientific discoveries of the world. They have had the leadership in the progress of civilization; but they are not in good condition to render an account of their stewardship.

The Hebrew race was always a white race. It is one thing to be a bit tanned by the sun, and another thing to be black by nature. I am informed that some Negroes, encouraged by reckless statements of some modern writers, are undertaking to build up a sect claiming to be the lost ten tribes of Israel. They will not meet with success. The shape of the nose is against them. They will find other difficulties in the way which will greatly impede their progress.

All human beings are great; every race has its special gifts; all races have produced some great men; but through the centuries, and up until now, the white race has made, by far, the largest contribution to human progress. We have come to a day of accounting. The white race is about to be weighed in the balance and will be found wanting. It has been wont to enslave the darker races, to seize their lands, to butcher them in war, to impose upon them the opium and liquor traffic, to dictate to, and take advantage of them in trade and, in a general way, to lord it over, rather than uplift, what it has looked upon as inferior races.

Those colored races are coming into their own and they will have a large account for settlement. The human family is a vast procession marching to the grave, but each passing generation leaves to that, following, its ideals, attitudes, prejudices and memories, as well as certain accounts to be settled.

What is the Matter with the World?
No. III.

WOULD you dare take the temperature of Russia? There is a vast region of country with almost inexhaustible, undeveloped resources. There are some one hundred and forty millions of rugged, powerful, emotional people within her boundaries.

For centuries these people have been under the iron yoke of a pompous ecclesiasticism, doing penance, going on pilgrimages, busy with the husks of religious form without a crumb of the Bread of Life. They awake out of a long, deceptive dream and go into hysterical war against God and humanity.

The Russia of today is a new thing under the sun. The world is too small and the nations are too closely connected to isolate Russia. We live in times when ideas are as contagious as disease germs. They spread like a contagion.

The Russian hydrophobia is spreading in this country much more rapidly than many of our people think. The breaking up of the old political parties in this nation affords a field plowed, harrowed and mellow for the sowing of all sorts of dangerous propaganda. There is no lack of extreme socialistic, bolshevistic and communistic seed in this country. Malcontents, eager to sow them, are in abundance. Read the following from the daily press:

NOTES FROM A TRAVELLER'S LOG.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Panama rose to a place in the sun in the days of Theodore Roosevelt when he started the Panama Canal. France failed miserably, and 20,000 workmen were buried in the jungles. When America took hold of things the first thing to be done was to clean up and rid the deadly yellow fever mosquito.

Dr. Gorgas made it possible to dig the Canal by his scientific handling of the health and sanitation problem. Before the Canal Panama City was a place of 25,000 people and little short of a pest hole; now it is a modern city with the best of sanitation and water (under U. S. A. supervision) and the finest paved streets, splendid public buildings, business houses and a population of 65,000 people.

Just now we are engaged in evangelistic meetings in two of the Methodist Spanish-speaking churches of Panama. One of my interpreters was a former student of mine at Taylor University, and our home is with Walter Oliver, another of my Taylor University students who is now in charge of the Methodist Mission School here where he has under him over two hundred young people, furnishing a great field for Christian work and service. In this article I will give glimpses from my diary respecting the work we are doing in this another Central American country.

Dec. 11. Arrived from Cristobal at Panama by evening train. Began revival meetings in Gauchapali Methodist Church. This church is situated down in the congested section of Panama and the noise surrounding the building is almost unbearable. One wonders how preaching can be effective 'mid such tumult, but we carry on, nevertheless, and gave a gospel message forgetting the noise as we preached on. People in these countries live so much 'mid tumult that quiet and seclusion is almost unknown.

Dec. 14, (Sunday). Preached at 10:30 at Union Church Balboa, to American congregation made up of Canal Zone operatives. Mrs. Ridout preached at 7:30 at same church. Revival meeting at night in the Gauchapali Church brought a good crowd. We preached from Acts 2:17, and at the close made our first altar call. Soon the altar was filled with people, mostly members, and had a good spirit of prayer. Probably this was the first altar service held in this church for several years.

Dec. 17. This is a great day in Panama and all over Central and South America because it was the one hundredth anniversary of Simon Bolivar, the Great Liberator, who broke the Spanish fetters which had bound South America and delivered that great land of Spanish despotism. Bolivar has been called the Napoleon of South America, but, with this difference, Napoleon was after power, Bolivar's passion was for freedom.

Bolivar paid the price of greatness as a Liberator that Washington paid when he was maligned, that Lincoln paid when he was assassinated, that Woodrow Wilson paid as the greatest war president America ever had. Bolivar was maligned and persecuted, misunderstood and misinterpreted; he gave his life and money and strength to setting captives free and blazing the paths of Freedom. He received little or no honor during his life but now the whole American Continent sounds his praise.

The main characteristics of this great Liberator was a passion for liberty; undaunted courage and daring in the midst of difficulties; unselfishly, he used his means absolutely for the public good; he refused to

POISONOUS BOOKS.

Dr. John Hall tells an instance of the dangerous influence of bad books.

Dr. Hall was called after midnight to the bedside of a dying man, whom he found in great distress of mind.

The Saviour was presented in his sufficiency and willingness to save them to the uttermost that came unto God by him, and the throne of grace was earnestly entreated in his behalf. Again and again the sufferer rose and knelt in prayer himself.

At length he seemed to form a new resolution. He went to a trunk and taking from it a package of books, gave the books to Dr. Hall, saying, "Burn these books, lest they fall into other hands, for they have brought my soul to the verge of hell."

He received the Doctor's promise and his mental anguish passed away. He died apparently in the faith of Christ.

This incident reminds me of a happening in connection with some revival meetings we held in Asia. A young woman—contract teacher W. F. M. S.—who evidently had no religious experience seemed to get seriously convicted in our afternoon holiness meetings. At one of the meetings, especially, she was deeply moved but did not come forward. That night after going home from the meeting she read one of Dr. Fosdick's most dangerous books in which, in a clever and brilliant manner, Fosdick dealt with many religious matters in the most modern fashion, putting far away the evangelical view of the things of God and thoroughly obscuring the New Testament plan of salvation. The result was the loss of all her conviction. Fosdick settled her in her carnal security. We left her like so many "Contract teacher missionaries" with no vital Christian experience, modernistic, anti-scriptural, worldly!

G. W. Ridout.

I have seen on the streets of Colon and Panama. Our American boys drunk, yes, dead drunk. They tell that when the fleet comes in the situation is sad indeed for the morals of our men. I fear many a boy goes down in the muck and mire of the deadly saloon and cabaret and other unmentionable places.

Here let me put in a suggestion which has come to me with some urge since being here. I wish some good man who is apt at personal work in giving out tracts, gospels, Bibles, etc., and dealing with men personally, I mean some man who has the means to pay his own way, would come down to Panama for the winter instead of going to Florida, and spend his winter doing good. There are thousands of Americans here; not one in fifty I suppose ever goes to church. There are crowds of Army and Navy men here and I suppose some of them would say: "No man cares for my soul." What a field for personal workers! Now a good man who has the gift could come to Panama and live in Panama as cheap as Florida and, instead of spending the winter in idleness, could accomplish great good in a field like this. Let me add this one word of commendation of the Navy Chiefs. Shore leave is only permitted during the day. At six o'clock evenings our Navy boys have all to be back aboard their ships. I have felt like saying concerning that order: What a merciful providence!

Dec. 19. Have been speaking daily at the chapel services of the school. Had a gracious victory in the school today when, at the chapel hour, I spoke to about one hundred young men and women on "What shall I do with Jesus?" Had been holding the chapel services for a week with this objective in mind of bringing them to a decision. Today the Holy Spirit honored the word and work and when I put the question "Who will accept and surrender yourself to Jesus Christ and confess him as Savior?" quite a number of hands went up and after dismissing the chapel, when time was up, we asked all who wanted to take the step to stay with us in an after-meeting, and twenty-six tarried and bowed at the altar to give themselves to Christ. Praise God, the word of God never fails! God's plan of salvation is applicable to all races and peoples, to young and old, and to all conditions.

During the meetings had many altar calls when altar would be filled with people with all kinds of needs, many needing restoration and conversion and some the Spirit's fullness. They had been praying daily the prayer: "O God, for Christ's sake, give me the Holy Spirit," and the time was ripe I thought for a direct message on the Baptism with the Holy Ghost, so I preached tonight from Matt. 3:11. At the close we had many seekers and we trust some finders. Joy is beginning to show itself upon the faces of the people.

Dec. 20. Had an interview with a Spanish-speaking preacher of Panama who has gotten greatly blessed in the meetings. He was brought up a Catholic and strictly by his mother. Never had any doubts about Christ, about sin, about hell, about God. He had learned these things from the Catholic Church and his mother. But he early craved a real heart experience, bought a Bible in a fiesta and began to read it. Soon he fell in with some Protestants and when he came to Panama City made his confession of Christ and finally joined the ministry, and has kept true to his Bible. But sad to relate he had come up against the modernism that American modernistic missionaries brought. They taught things totally contrary to the fundamentals he had been taught. He said, "Better that they would never come than to tear become rich at the expense of country and died a poor man. When dying he said:

"... If my death contributes toward the cessation of factionism and the Union is consolidated, I shall descend to the grave in peace. Then the hoarse voice of the moribund, as though it were an echo from the tomb, was heard to say: 'Yes; to the grave.' ... That is all that my fellow citizens have afforded me but I forgive them. I wish I could take with me the consolation of knowing that they will continue united."

Dec. 18. The papers tell the story of the collision of two steamers in the Canal. The fault was with the Panama Canal Pilot. He left the bridge for a few minutes at a very critical moment; he failed to observe the signals and to use the whistle. Crash! Two big ocean-going steamers tore into each other, fortunately when going at a low speed. Damage $70,000. Canal pays the bill because it was proven their pilot was to blame. It is a risky thing for the pilot to leave the bridge, even for a few minutes! Many a revival meeting has been spoiled just at the critical moment because the preacher or evangelist was negligent at an important moment. This note was in the findings:

"That at the time of the collision, the weather was clear and calm and no unusual currents experienced by either vessel."

Oh, how many tragedies occur in fine weather and in the calm when the soul is off guard. Today our trouble is not storms and tempests, but calm and fine weather! It produces softness, indolence, neglect, death!

Dec. 19. One of the sad sights just outside of the Canal Zone is the horrible saloon and cabaret. They face the American Army and Navy men at every turn as soon as they cross from the Zone to Panamanian territory and in many instances this simply means crossing the street. Yesterday, going from Panama to Balboa, I noticed, just as we passed the line there was one of those wretched dens of drink and iniquity marked "American Saloon." Those who are trying to destroy Prohibition in the U. S. A. living in cities and towns where saloons are unknown, would weaken in their opposition to Prohibition materially if they could see what them away from the gospel essentials which they learned in childhood regarding the Cross, God and sin, heaven and hell." It is tragical, indeed, when a convert from Rome has to guard his soul against this miserable modernism and unbelief which modernistically trained missionaries bring to the mission fields.

Dec. 21. Closing Sunday of the ten days' meeting in the Gauchapali Church at 4:00 P. M. At Sea Wall Church held a believer's meeting attended by missionaries, pastors, teachers and other Christian workers. Spoke on Acts 1:8, showing the need of the Spirit's power in doing the work of God. Money power, educational power, social power are not sufficient. We have a great task confronting us in these Catholic countries and we cannot do the work unless we have the power of the Spirit. At 7:30 preached the closing message at the church where revival has been carried on. Had a good altar service and a number of people confessed Christ as their Savior.

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

By Rev. A. D. Shockley.

CHAPTER XII.

SAVED BY GRACE.

DURING the weeks which followed, Ralph did all he could to bring Jessie into a better state of mind. In this he was seconded by the Queermans most heartily. Bessie spent most of the time when she was off duty at the hospital in talking to Jessie, and in striving to soften her heart toward those who had wronged and deserted her. Mrs. Queerman, by the force of her sympathy and love, laid siege to Jessie's sore heart by day and by night. John Queerman, though busy with the duties of his position, gave much time to the home where so much was at stake. But it took much time and patience and faith to overcome her hardness and bitterness of spirit. That she was softened at last and became remorseful and penitent for her own sin, which she now felt to be too great to be forgiven, was the occasion for devout thankfulness on the part of those who had so longed for her recovery from physical and moral sickness. In her present sane moment, she repeated those self-accusing words that had so distressed Mrs. Queerman to hear even when she knew that they were the visions of a disordered mind, though having ground in fact and experience.

As soon as she was able to sit up and bear the excitement, which the visit of strangers naturally cause an invalid who has been so very ill and weak, the pastor of Bethany Church called and by his wise counsels and tender pleadings brought her to the foot of the cross, where peace and rest are ever found.

She seemed almost ready to believe that she had passed out of the body and had entered into the heavenly rest, so completely had her sense of sin been superseded by the sweet confidence in God's pardoning mercy and love.

In the meantime word had been received from Ralph that Jessie's delirium had passed, and that she was slowly recovering her health. She refused to speak of her past to him, or to entertain a thought of returning with him to her father's house. Her bitterness of soul, in view of what she had experienced of human heartlessness and villany, had apparently frozen her heart and made it quite unresponsive to sympathy and tenderness. Her awakened conscience tormented her with pictures of a desolate hope she had left behind her in leaving Glenview.

But now that she had accepted Christ as her Saviour and King, Jessie Upright became anxious to return to the home she had so heartlessly made desolate—to see the mother whose heart she had broken by her sin. She sought no excuse for the conduct of the past, but characterized it as it deserved—inexcusable iniquity. While she was conscious of having been treated treacherously by the man to whose "soft nothings" she had too willingly listened, she knew that she had invited ruin by neglecting those safeguards to honor, which every young woman ought to possess, and employ maidenly reserve and deportment.

one felt the presence of a sorrow too deep for words, and a penitence as lasting as life. And yet that countenance bespoke a soul at peace with God through the blood of Christ, and a readiness to bear any cross for his sake, who had redeemed her. She gave Mrs. Queerman the story of her life from the first wrong steps to the day, when deserted and alone, she found temporary shelter in the cheap lodgings where Mrs. Queerman found her.

Her one anxiety, after having seen her mother, and obtaining her forgiveness, was to devote her life to the rescue of her sisters who had been lured to bad lives. Having suffered so keenly she was fitted to do earnest work along this line. So greatly did she appreciate the mercy which had been extended to her, that she felt such mercy would not be withheld from any who might be led to seek it. That she might be able to lead some into pure lives, who had been guilty wanderers, she earnestly prayed and fondly hoped. She certainly found her own life made more peaceful by her efforts to help others.

Of her experiences while in pursuit of pleasure and excitement, and the associations connected with her operative life, she spoke unreservedly to Mrs. Queerman as soon as possible after having found peace by believing in Christ. Her story, as nearly in her own language, as we are able to give it will be found in another chapter. We feel justified in omitting some portions. The good sense of the reader will approve such omissions. We dislike to enter into such details, and so materially abridge the narrative.

Bessie Queerman, having obtained a month's leave of absence from her duties at the hospital, decided to return with Ralph and Jessie for a visit in Glenview. She was a source of strength to Jessie in the trying hour of her meeting with her mother, whose health had not yet been so completely restored as to make the least excitement safe. An habitual fellowship with God had given her a wisdom she could not otherwise have acquired. A settled purpose to do the best possible thing under every circumstance had begotten a thoughtfulness and quickness of perception which was very helpful in an emergency.

After all arrangements had been made, and Jessie's belongings packed and expressed, the "good byes" spoken between the young people and friends they were leaving behind; after the earnest prayers had been offered for protection and guidance, and kindly words of encouragement and hope been uttered by Mr. and Mrs. Queerman, the "flyer" bore the young people swiftly along, through valley and plain, over mountains and through canyons, to the distant city of Glenview, where we shall meet them again and follow them as each goes valiantly to the fight against sin, which they propose to fight to the end. ### A Hint to the Wise.

A story is told of a certain pastor who mourned over a member of his congregation once a regular attendant at the prayer service, who for months had not been seen in the "upper room." Unable to stand it longer, at the close of one of the meetings, in which the voice, formerly accustomed to lead in prayer, was sorely missed, the minister went straight to the man's home and found him sitting before the open fire. The absentee, somewhat startled by the intrusion, hastily placed another chair for the visitor and then waited for the expected words of rebuke. Had the rebuke been spoken no one knows what the reply might have been, or what mistaken yet lasting anger might have been kindled. But not a word did the minister say. Taking his seat before the fire, he silently took the tongs and lifting a glowing coal from the midst of its fellows, laid it by itself upon the hearthstone. Remaining painfully silent, he watched the blaze die out. Then the other opened his lips to say: "You need not say a single word, sir. I'll be there next Wednesday night."—Sel.

Holiness—Not Listlessness.

EVANGELIST E. ELLSWORTH SHELHAMER.

Holiness is not nonchalance. It is not that easy, namby-pamby, "just-as-you-say," "anything-to-be-agreeable," disposition that smiles at sin, and magnanimously tolerates it, especially if it is popular, or capable of being turned to account in "building up the church."

There is a great deal of this spurious, spineless kind of holiness that is accepted today. It valorously and vehemently cudgels the dead lion, but takes care not to arouse the ire of the living jackal. It hardly gives a passing consideration to some of the greatest obstacles to the diffusion of scriptural holiness in this country. If it mentions them, the notice thereof reminds one of a swallow barely skimming the surface of a broad-bosomed river, when it should suggest the headlong plunge of a king-fisher after his lurking game.

I have attended holiness camp meetings without hearing one word spoken in condemnation of secret societies, divorce and remarriage, the diabolic fiend of tobacco, or the practice, now so common among professed Christians, of bedecking themselves "in gold and pearls, and costly array." Volumes were said in commendation of the beauty of holiness, and its ennobling influence upon human character, but nothing to demonstrate the incompatibility with it, of that worldliness which the Bible so strongly condemns.

True holiness is not blind. While not odiously obtrusive, it is intelligently observing. It does not gleefully term everything gold that glitters. It tries those who say they are Apostles, and is willing to be tried in turn. It does not accept professions merely because the manners are urbane, and the speech is faultless.

Scriptural holiness implies a holy hatred of sin. It is not that acquiescent, good-nature that big-heartedly overlooks sins it would not itself commit. It offers an unyielding resistance to sin in all its garbs. It stands like Gibraltar against the popular waves of worldliness, even though, like Gibraltar, it be the only such rock. There is no malice in this holy hatred, but an instinctive, settled aversion to sin, no matter how immaculate and sanctimonious may be its appearance. The soul that possesses such holiness cries out with the Psalmist, "I HATE EVERY FALSE WAY."

THE IMPORTANCE OF SELF-EXAMINATION.

Rev. R. Heber Wightman.

Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith. 2 Cor. 13:5.

JESUS Christ is presented in the gospel as the supreme object of our faith, (Rom. 5:1) "Repentance toward God." The gospel is properly called the word of truth, because Christ, the incarnate Son of God, in all his offices as Prophet, Priest, and King is the living embodiment of truth, to be embraced by the rational and intelligent mind. He said—"I am the truth." Nowhere but in the gospel can we find truth; pure, unmixed, divine, reliable truth, and Christ Jesus himself is that truth. And it is the embracement of that truth that is to make us free from error, superstition and sin. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is the instrumentality.

This faith is not simply the assent of the enlightenment of the great historic idea of the gospel, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and the Saviour of the world; multiplied thousands in Christendom can be found who have this faith assent, but continue in perverse and wilful transgression. Their intellectual and historic faith produces no change in their affections, nor reformation in their outward conduct. The faith that apprehends and embraces Christ as a personal Savior, is the faith of the heart, and is called by the Apostle in one place trust. We are taught that "with the heart man believeth unto righteousness," "To believe with the heart is to believe in such manner as to engage the affections and influence the actions." (Dr. McKnight).

The seat of faith, in the sense of trust, is in the heart and not in the head. A man may believe with the head and be a practical worker of iniquity, thus proving that his faith is dead and inoperative. But let him believe with the heart, and his trust involving the affections will receive and embrace Christ, to love and serve him. What is it to trust but to confide and rely upon one who is both able and willing to do us good. How beautiful is the philosophy of faith in the sense of trust. The child in the simplicity of trusting innocence depends upon the promise of father, and confides in him for the fulfillment of the promise. The husband in the fervor of unsuspecting love, confides in the integrity and virtue of his wife, and is happy in the conjugal estate. And thus it is through all the varied relations of social life. Now Christ challenges our trust and reliance for salvation for he is not a "man that he should lie nor the son of man that he should repent." "Trust in the Lord Jesus Christ, for in him is not only everlasting strength, but eternal, unchanging truth."

By a simple act of faith in Christ we are justified, and spiritually renewed in our moral nature. With this trust is inseparably connected peace with God and the hope of heaven. Says St. Peter, "Unto you therefore which believe he is precious. Whom having not seen ye love, in whom though ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory."

A bare intellectual faith generates an intellectual religion as cold and cheerless as an iceberg in the polar seas. There are those who are opposed to all joyous emotion in religion. They deny the direct witness of the Holy Spirit. They would have religion consist in a scriptural and exact observance of the church ritualism, imposing and gorgeous in the outwardness and sacraments of the church in a zealous advocacy of form, while they deny the power of godliness. But is there not a spiritual taste to the soul as there is a natural one? "Oh, taste and see that the Lord is good." If you can taste that which is natural, and your taste be a source of real enjoyment to the palate, may you not taste that which is spiritual and the taste be the source of emotional delight to the mind? If Christ be precious to the soul of the believer, must he not be intellectually conscious of the preciousness of it?

There may be water baptism without the remission of sins, because that baptism may be unaccompanied by evangelical repentance and justifying faith in Christ. He that believeth not with the heart unto righteousness, though he may have been baptized, shall be damned. Does water baptism necessitate the act of faith? May not the ordinance be administered while in the heart of the subject there may be no faith unto righteousness, justification, forgiveness of sins. Says Paul, "Be it known unto you therefore men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins; and by him all that believe are justified."

Here the apostle's language, justification or the forgiveness of sins, is suspended on the condition of faith in Jesus Christ; all that believe in him are pardoned or justified. It is a lamentable truth that there are many in the churches who profess to have faith in the Savior of sinners, who do not experience the blessed influence and gracious results of that faith. Faith in Christ produces peace with God.

But again, the faith of the Bible gives to the genuine believer victory over sin, in bringing every thought of his mind into captivity to the obedience of Christ. The faith spoken of in the text is not a speculative belief in the doctrines of the Bible. It is not the faith of any particular denominational creed. The religion of too many professors consists in the faith of their particular church creed and ritual. They conclude with great self complacency, that if they believe all the articles of religion which their church imposes, and if they go through the performance of its religious ceremony on the Sabbath, that they are true followers of Jesus Christ and are in the possession of the New Testament religion.

But the faith of the Bible is not the faith of church forms, creeds, and ceremonies. The faith of the text is not a bare historical faith in Christianity. How many men there are out of the church making no profession of religion, who have as strong historical faith in Jesus Christ, as the sincere and evangelical believer. But these persons are not religious. They are the children of wrath and the servants of sin, living without God and without hope in the world. We may believe in mind every doctrine of the Scriptures, and at the same time may be in heart and conduct practical infidels. The faith of the heart and the faith of the head are two distinct exercises. The faith of the head that only thinks may exist independent of the heart, that feels and trusts, but it is dead and cannot save. The faith of the heart includes the exercise of intellectual assent, and saves the soul in time and in eternity. The faith which all genuine Christians possess is toward Christ, and consequently is called "the faith."

There is but one faith recognized in all the teachings of the Bible, and that is the faith that believes in Christ with the heart unto righteousness, and justifies the sinner and qualifies him for the company and enjoyment of God in heaven. The Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is the only proper object of this faith. "For as there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, but this name" so there is no other principle that can possibly apprehend and appropriate the great salvation but the principle of faith. "He that believeth on the Son hath life, (that is the life of God in the soul) but he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." The essence of justifying faith is trust in Christ, trust in the infinite atonement which Jesus Christ has made for all sinners. "Our fathers trusted thee," says David. "They trusted thee and thou didst help them."

But it is the heart which is to trust; the affections of the heart must embrace Jesus as able and willing to save. They must repose with confidence upon the promises of God's word, believing in his willingness and ability to grant the great salvation through Jesus Christ without which we are ruined and undone. In the exercise of this faith that trusts God and takes him at his word, the chief of penitent sinners can so please God, as to be received into his spiritual kingdom and constituted a son and heir.

We have remarked that the faith of the gospel is saving faith. From what does it save the penitent believer? It saves (1) from the guilt of sin. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." (Rom. 8:1). Faith saves (2) from the dominion of sin. "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein." (Rom. 6:1, 2). But faith saves (3) from all sin. "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." (1 John 1:7-9.)

eousness is righteous, even as he is righteous. Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." (1 John 3:7-9). Says Paul, "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live." (Gal. 2:20).

How paradoxical are the words of Paul; crucified and yet alive; and in another place as it is expressed, "buried and yet risen." What does the apostle mean? In what sense are we to understand this apparently contradictory language? I am crucified with Christ. What part of Paul was crucified, so that though crucified, he should still be alive? The part that was crucified was what in Scriptures is called the "old man," and the "body of the sins of the flesh" are significant of the vicious appetites and passions of the depraved moral nature with which all men are born into the world. "The carnal mind is enmity against God." This carnal mind is hereditary from our first parents after their sin and fall. "To be carnally minded is death."

What is that death but a separation of the soul from God in the loss of his image and deprivation of communion with him. As our Lord was crucified, put to death on the cross, a propitiary sacrifice for the sins of the world, so Paul was crucified with Christ in the sense that the carnality of his mind, the vile affections of his corrupt, depraved nature were put to death by the power of the Holy Spirit. "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections, and lusts." The flesh with the affections, and lusts, is descriptive of the unregenerate heart, the moral nature depraved and corrupt from the birth. When St. Paul says I am crucified with Christ; he means that the carnal mind with all its vicious appetites and propensities was supernaturally put to death. "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." (Rom. 6:6).

The Greek verb here is "katargethei" and it means—to render null, to abrogate, to cancel, to bring to an end, to destroy, to annihilate. Is it not true, that the man who has had his "old man," all his evil propensities; the "Adamic carnal nature destroyed," is not only justified, but wholly sanctified unto God? "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts"; (Eph. 4:22). Here the strongest meaning of the Greek verb "apothesthai" is meant. A figure from putting off clothes—apekdusamenoi (Col. 3:9) as endusasthai from putting them on. Grammatically, there is no difficulty in thus understanding the aorist participle as synchronous with the present imperative. The aorist would, in fact, express a thing done once for all. But what does Paul mean by the old man? He tells us in Col. 3:8-10, "But now ye also put off all these: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth." "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds, and have put on the new man which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him." Lie not one to another seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; attenduomai, Wholly to put off from one's self ("atto denoting separation from what is put off").

In 1 Thess. 5:23 Paul prayed for justified persons, implying that sanctification is an advanced or matured state which it is the privilege of justified persons earnestly to seek, by faith and prayer. "In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands (spiritual) in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ." (Col. 2:11). Here we have the same old man under the metaphor of circumcision (apekdusis) a putting off, laying aside. This is wholly a New Testament word, and is used only in this one place. It expresses a complete putting off and laying aside, and was probably chosen with reference to the figure of circumcision; the connection requires it to be understood passively, not ye have put off, but was put off from you.

Crucifixion; the body of the sins of the flesh; putting off of the old man; circumcision is not a ceremony, but a profound experience attained unto in entire sanctification of "soul and spirit, and body, and presents us blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Examine yourselves whether ye have dominion over the remains of the carnal mind. Are you able through faith to subdue the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eyes and the pride of life? Shook from the power of darkness do you stand firm and secure? Do you expect to be cleansed from all sin? Are you aiming to attain unto this invaluable blessing?

Examine yourselves whether you are righteous in practice, producing the fruits of the Spirit engaging in good works every day. Do you prove the scriptural and evangelical character of your faith by good works? Are you constraining sinners by your good works to glorify your Father in heaven? How puissant is faith in Christ. Oh, how powerful and irresistible is heaven's lodestone—the cross of Christ all stained with hallowed blood to attract from earth to heaven. What the world needs today is not a philosophy, but a cross. If by Christ crucified as a moral lever we have been prized out of the pit of degradation and ruin into which by original and actual sin our nature has been woefully sunk, and elevated to a position where we can hold audience with Deity and realize his friendship and love, and if by our crucified Lord we are to be raised at last to thrones and crowns and palaces in heaven, we ought to join in the jubilant language of the apostle and exclaim, "Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord. For me to live is Christ; to die is gain."

"A HAPPY NEW YEAR"

REV. JOHN NORBERRY.

MANY will be the cheering salutations, from one friend to another, on the first day of January, 1931, wishing each other a "Happy New Year." Friends from far and near, many of whom are separated by land and by sea, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Lakes to the Gulf, of all classes and grades in society, as well as across the seas, will greet each other with "Happy New Year", on the coming New Year's Day.

Such salutations will come by word of mouth, by letters and cards; also by telegrams, cablegrams, and radios! Thank God for them! Let us all join together, in wishing each other a "Happy New Year!" Let the good wishes be passed on to saints and sinners, to friends and foes, and from them may some of the bitterest foes be made the closest friends! So let it be.

But we fear that thousands who will send such expressions of good cheer, will have no conception of what real, genuine happiness is! Many will do it simply as a "matter of custom," while others will have no other thought in mind, than, that which relates merely to this world and worldly things, such as success in business, increase of fame, and pleasure and wealth, without the greater thought of the spiritual nature of man, that which relates to his eternal happiness in his living to the glory of God in this world, and life eternal in the life to come! Such will overlook what real happiness is, and in what it consists. It is not so much in what one receives as in what he gives, that makes him

"happy." Jesus said, "It is much more blessed (happy) to give than to receive." One may have all this world's goods; and not be happy, for the Savior said that "a man's life consisteth not in the things which he possesses." But, on the other hand, he may not have much of this world's goods, but have the Giver of every good and perfect gift, and thus be supremely happy! David said: "Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose help is in the Lord his God, which made heaven and earth and all therein is." (Psalms 146:5-6). If we have God we have all.

The psalmist said again: "Whom have I in heaven but thee, and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee." (Psalms 73:25.) No wonder the poet cried out,

"*Thou, O Christ, art all I want,
More than all in Thee I find!*"

Real happiness, then, consists in having God with, and reigning in, us. If we have the Blessor, we shall surely have his blessings! Jesus says: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things (food and raiment) shall be added unto you." (Matt. 6:33.)

Paul says: "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come." (1 Timothy 4:8).

We shall give some other Scripture references to show who will have real happiness in the coming year of 1931.

Dr. James Strong, in his Exhaustive Concordance, informs us that the two words which our translators have rendered "blessed" and "happy," in the following Scriptures, are from the same Hebrew and Greek words; hence they are synonymous. Mr. Wesley, in his "Notes on the New Testament," renders the word "blessed" as "happy" in the Beatitudes. The writer shall do the same in the following Scriptures for convenience.

I therefore wish every living soul a "Happy New Year," in the best sense of the term! But who will have true happiness, in the coming year? Let God's Word speak for itself:

"Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help." (Psalms 146:5).

"Happy is he that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." (Psalms 1:1).

"Happy is he whose transgression is forgiven, and whose sin is covered." (Psalms 32:1).

"Happy is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile." (Psalms 32:2).

"Happy is the nation whose God is the Lord, and the people whom he hath chosen for his own inheritance." (Psalms 32:12).

"Happy is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble." (Psalms 41:1).

"Happy are they that dwell in thy house; they will be still praising thee." (Psalms 84:4).

"Happy is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance. In thy name shall they rejoice all the day and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted." (Psalms 89:15, 16).

"Happy are they that keep his testimonies, and that seek him with the whole heart. They also do no iniquity: they walk in his ways." (Psalms 119:2, 3).

"Happy is the man whom God correcteth." (Job 5:17).

"Happy are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." (Matthew 5:5).

"Happy are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled." (Matthew 5:6).

"Happy are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy." (Matthew 5:7).

"Happy are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." (Matthew 5:8).

This and That—Here and There.

THOMAS C. HENDERSON.

BECAUSE he was tired of life but objected to all violent forms of self-destruction, Dr. P. E. Meral, St. Brieuc, France, starved himself to death. After sixty long days without food the end came. Think of the strength of purpose and energy of will which was expended during those sixty days! Had it been turned to some life interest or to some character achievement he would have generated a new interest in life. What a wastage of the most majestic powers of personality! If men would try half as hard to find and do the will of God as they do to go to hell, they would be saints and their lives would end in moral triumph.

In The Christian Advocate, Western Edition, of December 25, 1930, there is a report of a revival recently ended in Dayton, Ohio in which is this significant item of comment: "A unique feature of this remarkable revival has been the use of the penitent altar." Since when has the use of the "penitent altar" become a "unique feature" of a Methodist revival? It is significant, indeed, that to many people in the Methodist Episcopal Church the use of the mourner's bench is a very unusual thing. If the church would get out a mourner's bench and get the Bishops and the District Superintendents and the preachers and all the rest of the folk to bow in sincere penitence before it until the power of Pentecost comes on them it would be unique, but a grand and glorious thing.

Just who is most to blame for so many folk being devoted to the doctrine of Holiness without being holy is not easy to determine. However, the preacher who insistently devotes his energy to proclaiming the doctrinal phases of it without as strongly majoring on the character and conduct values of this Bible truth must bear some of the blame. Holiness as a doctrinal issue will eventually become only a shibboleth if it is not translated into practical life. One of the most difficult and delicate tasks of the preacher of Holiness is to so present the truth in phrases and figures that it fits into actual life. Holiness is not merely a fine ideal. It is of no real use to common men and women unless it can be actual in the most practical of ordinary living. "Holiness folks" must be holy folk or their doctrine will be hopelessly ridiculed by thoughtful observers.

The newspapers are telling many and tragic stories of vice and death in connection with youth, dancing and booze. College youths and even high school students are the actors in some of the most loathsome and deadly escapades. The newspapers give the frankest publicity to tragedies involving some co-ed or high-school girl who is caught in some disgraceful affair with boys and men who are inflamed with booze. The multiplicity of scandals of this sort makes the heart sick. One cannot escape the conclusion that youth is being exposed to moral strain for which they are not prepared, and that youth is sadly breaking down under the strain. All these dreadful affairs are a sad revelation of the breakdown of the American home, too. Our homes are evidently not producing a new generation capable of withstanding the moral conflict which it has to face. This is all saddening, but it is not all loss. The preachers have failed to preach against dancing and smoking and card playing, and so history in the making as it centers in the court-rooms and in the morgues and funerals is preaching to young folks and telling them that the girl who dances and drinks and smokes cigarettes and plays cards is sowing seed which will have a harvest of woe and shame.

A "twister" recently tore through a community with which we are familiar and ruined valuable timber, destroyed crops and totally demolished the house and barns of one farmer. No lives were lost, for the farmer and his family were gone from home at the time of the storm. The house and barns were not only blown down, they were blown away and their foundations left clean and naked. Neighbors who first reached the sight of the destruction were surprised to see the basement of the farmer's house a large and active still. The local police officers had been unable to locate the source of the illicit liquor which had been corrupting the community. But the "twister" exposed it. Too bad, indeed, that the farmer lost his house, barns and stock, but it was not a total loss to the community, since through that destructive wind the origin of much community lawlessness and crime was found. So it is about this shocking publicity given to the shame and crime among certain types of young people; it is a tornado of death, and in its wake are strewn the mangled bodies and souls of a lot of young men and women;

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dries do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

PROHIBITION SAVES MANY LIVES.

The decrease of alcoholic deaths since prohibition is conclusive evidence of a decline in the use of intoxicants, because bootleg and moonshine are more deadly than "good liquor."

The reports of the United States Bureau of Statistics show that the average number of alcoholic deaths per 100,000 population dropped from 5.2 for the eight years before prohibition to 2.8 for the eight years after, a decline of nearly half.

Christopher P. Connolly, in an article in the October number of Religious Education, computes from government figures that prohibition has saved Uncle Sam more lives than he lost in the World War.

but the very shame and revolting effect of it all is bound to excite other young women, especially, to caution. All young folks are being compelled to see that the way of the transgressors is hard, and that the roadway of illicit pleasures with its cigarette, flask, sensuous dance and secret sin is always strewn with wreckage and eternal shame. It is becoming more and more clear that that society which sanctions violations of fine ethics, and of private decency is rotten, regardless of the silence of the pulpit against the popular sins which are damning so many youths.

The most popular tonic for conversation and writing is hard times. The times must be in a bad way or else a lot of talk and writing is consummate nonsense. Really, though, the phrase hard times is only a relative one. A lot of people think that they are in desperate circumstances because they cannot keep on living as extravagantly as they have been doing for a few years past. We have come to believe that luxuries are necessities. Most of my friends—preachers among them, too—carry about in their pocket mechanical pencils which cost a dollar each, or perhaps three dollars. A few years ago these same friends of mine thought a five-cent pencil something of a luxury in the pencil line. Now they dolefully complain of hard times because they cannot keep going on the three-fifty-pencil-level. The trouble is that we think that we just must have so many things which we do not actually need. Hard times, indeed.

If the farmers managed their farms like the preachers run the churches they would be the joke of the generation. The farmer knows that the purpose of his labor is to produce a harvest. We would call him foolish if he spent his money in expensive and duplicate machinery, or if he erected buildings of various kinds for which he had no use as a farmer, or if he employed a large staff of assistants who knew much about everything else but farming, and then used up the time of his staff of workers in conferences, institutes and discussion groups where such subjects as the following were repeatedly discussed: Why do farmers' sons forsake the farm? What are the best methods for cultivating the sense of beauty in the mind of the farmer? What is the matter with Agriculture? Are daisy beds as important as wheat fields? Modernizing the Farm; The Stupidity of our Fathers; What can the Farmers do for the esthetic life of Cockroaches?, etc., etc.; while the farm grew up to weeds and not one bushel of grain was harvested. What consummate folly that would be for the farmer! However, pastors galore are wearing themselves out doing everything else but getting sinners converted to God. They work and write and organize and take surveys and discuss and convene and face grave problems and meet exigencies and run off to this committee meeting and to that solemn retreat, but the church is lifeless and the world of humanity is going to hell. The earnest preacher solemnly works his days through for the support and defense of his denominational program; his choir listlessly sings, "Make me a Blessing to Someone Today!" The worst of this is that we are educating more manly young men not to be soul-winners, but to perpetuate this travesty and call it Christian service.

Why I Believe in Prohibition.

(By Henry Ford)

"I believe in Prohibition because I believe in the new industrial order that America is creating. Booze is as much out of place in that new order as a horse and buggy in down-town Detroit—and a lot more dangerous.

"The horse and buggy order is gone and liquor had to go with it. Society could take chances back of a dashboard that it can't afford to take behind a steering wheel!

"Perhaps," he said, "you don't recall the old hitching post days. Well, a lot of folks seem to have forgotten them. They shouldn't. The streets on Saturday nights were lined with wagons and buggies and the saloons were filled with customers. At closing time a crowd of irresponsible men backed their rigs into the streets, the horses were headed towards home, the reins dropped over the dash and forgotten. The Horses were sober!

"Well, if we want our streets lined again with shops that do that kind of business we shall have to put up our automobiles and go back to the hitching posts. Automobiles won't go straight unless they are driven straight, and they don't know the way home.

"An industrial order that has discarded the reins, dashboards and a team-that-knows-the-way-home can't afford to line its highways with 'regulated liquor shops'—not with a forty-horsepower motor under the toe of the drinking citizen."

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

"UNTO THE UTMOST PART OF THE EARTH."

Dear Friends of The Herald Family:

As we write this letter we find ourselves on board a fast train speeding on through the cold regions of Manchuria. Our car is very cold and we sit pounding away at our typewriter with stiff fingers and a chilly body. Across from us a group of armed Chinese soldiers is lazily watching us with curious faces and amused expressions. They are on board to protect us from bandits who might be lurking along the way with the purpose to rob and pilfer passengers. We have just left Korea where we spent almost four months of intensive evangelistic work.

Today our thoughts turn backward over these many weeks spent in this land of the "Morning Calm" and there is a feeling of sadness as we leave the warm-hearted, lovable people, for they have won a large place in our hearts. There was a heavy lump in our throats as we waved good bye to our good friend and brother, Robert Chung, and he stood with tears in his eyes waving back until his figure faded in the distance. His life and splendid co-operation have meant so much to us during our stay in Korea. It was largely because of his yielded life that God so richly blessed our labors together and enabled us to reap such an abundant harvest. Our prayers shall follow him in the great work he is doing in this needy land.

At this Thanksgiving season our hearts are lifted to God in praise and worship for all his goodness to us during our months in Korea. We thank him for opening wide this door so filled with golden opportunities. We thank him for the health and strength he has given us during these weeks which has made it possible to hold two hundred and sixty services in eighty-four days, or an average of a little better than three services every day. We thank him for the unusual outpourings of his Spirit in our midst in conviction, salvation, and great blessing. We thank him for the definite answers to prayer. We thank him for the splendid co-operation and warm hospitality shown us by the missionaries on the field who have not spared themselves in making our stay successful and blessed. We thank him for the many friends at home who have not failed to remember us in prayer and for all who have contributed to make this trip possible. Our hearts are melted in his presence and words fail us when we consider his goodness to us. Praise his name!

Crowded into these busy weeks have been many varied, novel and precious experiences the memories of which shall long linger with us. As we reflect we find many pictures stamped upon our minds, which no doubt in the days to come will often be recalled. The picturesque mountain ridges divided by many fertile, terraced valleys; the weary women toiling many long hours at the streams pounding away at their dirty clothes with wooden paddles, and the laden jiggy men carrying tremendous loads upon their backs; the strange Korean homes made with straw roofs and mud-covered walls, with their heated stone floors and legless beds devoid of mattresses or springs; the native food made up chiefly of rice and "Kimshi" which some one has said should be eaten only in the open spaces because of its strong odor, (limberger cheese has nothing on this famous dish so relished by the Koreans); the queer costumes, the white dress of both men and women, together with the odd and strange headgear worn by the men; the beggar boys, the demon-possessed people, the lepers, the ancient walls, the ox-carts and many other interesting things have left their indelible impression upon us.

Last, but not least, all those scenes witnessed in the various services we held; the crowds with their hungry souls and eager faces, attentively listening to every song and message; the crowded altars filled with weeping and repentant hearts calling upon God for mercy; the testimonies of joy given by those who had found victory, and the radiant glow upon their faces. As we remember anew all these things again we say Praise God for the power of the gospel, the only hope for Korea.

Pray for us as we begin our work in Northern China with the National Holiness Association.

Yours in His service,

Asbury College Foreign Missionary Team.

TRAVEL LETTER.

Rev. Tilden H. Gaddis.

Dear Herald Family:

In the fair city of Perth among the Scotch highlanders the Lord of battle again fought for us and we found a people who get blessed and respond as freely as a camp meeting crowd in our homeland. Some remarkable cases of victory here; one whole family saved for the first time and many others that had never known the Lord were made happy in salvation. We had one great night when in the Young People's meeting at six o'clock and the regular service following, there were eighty-four different seekers.

The Moser Sisters had a real revival among the children. Going out into the streets with their instruments they played, sang and invited until they gathered a church building full of young people, and how eager they were. All quiet and respectful, they listened and wept as the Old Story of the Cross was told and scores sought the Lord. We feel this is an old people's country, religiously, and the children are neglected, but there is a great field among them. The streets are full of children that do not go to church or Sunday school and we find that parents can be reached through the children. We plan to make these children's meetings an important part of our program for 1932 and believe that thousands of them can be brought together. They have ministered to about 3,000 children already, here in Scotland.

The battle-scarred city of Perth has seen many a religious conflict in the days of the Covenanters who fought through blood to keep free from the yoke of Rome. Today there is as much need of a reformation from formalism and Antinomianism as the old-timers needed one from Popery.

A profitable day spent in Stirling revealed the wonders of the historic castle whose dungeons and lower walls date back to 600 A. D. Prisoners were lowered thirty feet into cells; others were murdered in cold blood and their bodies thrown out the windows. This is a land of castles and prisons and it seems it has been the notables that have occupied both. Across the hill from the castle is the beheading stone where we were reminded of the gruesome gleaming of the headsman's axe. In the wonderful graveyard nearby are monuments to martyrs, one the statue of a girl who, rather than deny the faith, was fastened to a stake at low tide and left for the rising waters to claim her body. The great old battlefield of Bannockburn overlooked by the wonderful monument to the memory of Bruce, reminds us of the bloody battles of these fighting Scots. Scotland suffered heavy losses in the World War and most every home here can exhibit some relics that give mute evidence of what it cost to be loyal to "God and the King," as they put it. We sit around many a fireside and hear the stories of the boys who went but never returned.

We are now at Motherwell, Scotland, a city of 60,000 population, in the Church of the Nazarene and a good beginning. There were twenty-eight at the altar the first Sunday morning and over forty definite victories that day. God was so on the scene they prayed through in the afternoon Sunday school, the evening prayer service and the altar full at night. Other religious bodies are co-operating and with street meetings reaching hundreds of men that seldom go to church, we have a building full of needy souls to minister to. With much conviction on the people it appears this will be our best campaign, so far, and it seems each has been better than the last. In his Name we press on with confidence.

HYATTSTOWN, MARYLAND.

December 1st to 14th, Evangelist J. R. Parker, Wilmore, Ky., held a union meeting for E. W. Jordan, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, and F. R. Barnes, pastor of the M. E. Church. The old folks who remember back for half a century or more, tell us that it has been forty-eight years since a great revival came to Hyattstown. This was in every sense a great revival. A great gospel, God's power of salvation, preached by a man full of the Holy Ghost to crowds that taxed the church building beyond capacity, many being turned away. Sinners pushed and elbowed out of these crowds to get to an altar that was often so full that the front row of seats had to be used as an altar. These were helped in instruction and prayer by local Christian workers who themselves had the Spirit within and were able to instruct and pray till the Lord spoke pardon and peace. During the meeting one hundred seekers came to the altar and found satisfaction in pardon or sanctifying grace, or both. Some of these persons were already members of the local churches, others came from neighboring churches. More than half a dozen families were helped in their family life by getting matters settled with God at the altar.

The meeting was a revelation to the country-side. As soon as folks began to get saved others who were hungry and in need became obsessed with but one desire—to get right with God and do it at once. Groanings of broken hearts and tears of repentance were changed to cries of victory and tears of joy. Twice since the meeting closed testimony meeting has been attended by a large majority of those saved in the meeting and they have spoken in testimony of salvation. Some have said, "My home has been different than ever before." Another, "Since the Lord sanctified me I have gotten rid of my cigarettes and plug of chewing tobacco." Again, "I thought I was a pretty good Christian, but the Lord showed me I had to be cleaned up." From an old man, "I have known Jesus as a partner for fifty-one years but now I know him fully as my Savior," and from the same, "the Lord gave me a good soaking and I have been running over ever since." Many others testified to the illuminating way in which Brother Parker preached the Gospel of full salvation. Naturally enough, where there had not been a good revival for more than a generation (but some half-way ones) there was a great deal of talk in opposition, in the town and right in the churches. In many instances those who were the chief opposers of the meeting became the leading recipients of the grace of God through the meeting. During the second week four afternoon meetings were held. These were for the purpose of bringing the message of sanctification as a definite work of grace following that of justification. The attendance averaged forty at the afternoon meetings. The messages were brought in simplicity and effectiveness. Definite consecrations were made and certain results were obtained, as witnessed to by hearts set free and lives changed. Whereas we are all glad.

Fred R. Barnes.

CAMPAIGNING ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

A brief survey of the past year's evangelistic work includes eighteen revival meetings at the following points—Sharon, Pa., East Berlin, Conn., Lynn Mass., Bellaire, Ohio, New Boston, Ohio, Springfield, Mo., Richmond Dale, Ohio, Cumberland, Ky., Van Buren, Ark., Heber Springs, Ark., Silver Heights, Ind., Bentleyville, Pa., Lookout, Ohio, Germantown, Ky., Terrill's Creek, Ky., Portland, Ore., San Francisco, Calif., and Tillamook, Ore. This itinerary has taken us into ten states of the Union for evangelistic services. By these presents know all men that we are still in the evangelistic field fighting the good fight of faith.

Our first meeting for the New Year will be held at Santa Anna, Calif., with my former Indiana friend, Rev. U. E. Harding, who has been in the state of California for the past few years.

The West is a great country. California has a wonderful winter climate. While the East is covered with snow and ice and swept by chilly breezes the sun shines bright and the flowers bloom in beauty in the far-famed regions of Southern California. We have met a number of people out here from my native state of old Kentucky. Let us launch into the New Year with the determination to press the battle for the salvation of souls and the fundamentals of the Christian faith.

Beyond the shadow of a doubt it is high time for all the Christian people throughout the land to line up anew for the Eighteenth Amendment of the American Constitution. The wets are fighting like Trojans to defeat prohibition and to give the several states the right to manufacture and sell intoxicating drinks. If there ever was a time that we needed to rally and to fight for the dry cause it is now. Prayer is the key to success in the Christian's continuous warfare for the cause of right against wrong. We earnestly solicit the prayers of all the saints. Please do not forget to pray for the missionary Tabernacle in the mountains of Kentucky. Our home address is Wilmore, Ky. Our western address is Pasadena, Calif., in care of the Pasadena College.

Yours in Christ,

Andrew Johnson.

DOING THE WORK OF AN EVANGELIST.

To the readers of The Herald, greeting in the Name of him who loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood.

I am now giving full time to evangelistic work. My slate for 1931 embraces an engagement for a brief period of Sermon-Lectures at Taylor University. For twenty years I have given my summers to camp meetings. The year 1930 was to me a season of grace and blessing with many open doors for preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ. Several weeks with Dr. C. W. Butler in the National Conventions; engagements with Training Schools, Colleges, Camp Meetings and churches gave me a varied and thrilling itinerary. As I write, I recall many an altar scene of victory and salvation, and many an hour of blessed fellowship with the people and with my co-laborers—my brethren in the ministry.

My work for the New Year opens with a 15-day campaign with Mt. Vernon Avenue M. E. Church, Columbus, Ohio, for Jan. 4-18, 1931. I praise God for every opening for the preaching of Christ to the end that men may believe on him unto everlasting life, and I am especially grateful for every opportunity for evangelistic ministries in our churches. The evangelization of the world depends so largely upon the measure of God's grace and blessing that rests upon the church, and a New Testament evangelism, for the perfecting of the saints as well as for the salvation of the lost, is one of the means ordained of God for the salvation of men.

Faithfully yours,

John F. Owen.

What Think Ye Of Christ? Whose Son Is He?

The above is the title of a very interesting booklet from the pen of H. C. Morrison, editor of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, in which he presents a strong argument for the virgin birth and deity of our Lord Jesus. Literature of this kind should be largely circulated; much skeptical literature is going the rounds and this ought to be helpful to young people, preachers, Sunday school teachers and religious workers. We bespeak for it a wide reading. The booklet is gotten up in very neat and attractive form and may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for 15 cents, 7 for $1.00, $10.00 per 100.

As the generations pass these accounts pile up. The colored peoples of the earth are beginning to insist on a settlement. We have been taught to call present conditions "a state of unrest." It exists in India, Egypt, Africa, China, and you may say, Japan. There is a widespread and deep feeling that the white man, because of his scientific knowledge, and his possession of superior implements of war, has taken advantage of his weaker fellowbeings, and that there must be a time of squaring of accounts.

The World War was a white man's war. Its losses were white men's losses. The burdens it left to be borne are resting upon the shoulders of white men. The hatred it created, intensified and left to generate strife and more war are among white men. The tremendous inventions now going on in the way of aircraft, long range guns, under sea fighting craft, poison gas, electric flash destruction, are all inventions of white men for the destruction of white men. One wonders if the white race is set on destroying itself.

Come with me into some further thought on this subject next week.

Three Thousand Idle Preachers.

No. II.

SO you brethren believe there is a hell, and that the people are falling into it by hundreds of thousands, and can you sit about in idleness? Possibly God is permitting you to be idle in order to start something. It is evident that something ought to be started, for the salvation of sinners seems to have stopped. The regeneration of a human soul seems to be a rare thing in many of the churches; in fact, it is unknown in many churches.

Many of you idle men have a gospel message, a saving gospel message; that may be one reason why you are idle. Go out and get the dust of the road on your feet, walk and preach. You will get a hearing. The first six months I preached I walked the circuit and got to church on time. My whole body seemed full of vigor, and my feet seem-

IF JESUS SHOULD COME TO JERUSALEM?

Dr. Morrison, in addition to his other interesting matter for The Pentecostal Herald, will have some suggestive and thought-provoking articles on the above subject during the coming year. It will be run in a series of several chapters. Our readers will be looking eagerly for this series and we trust will endeavor to secure some new readers by the time they begin. The world is moving rapidly, and what the future holds would be difficult to prognosticate. It may be The Herald will be the John the Baptist to help prepare the way for whatever may come. ed glad to carry me along. The eagerness to preach which made me glad to walk to the place of preaching, helped me to preach with joy and unction.

I have preached quite a bit in the open air, and my mind has never acted better, or my heart felt warmer than when preaching out of doors. Much of the preaching of our Lord was out in the open. John Wesley was a great out-of-doors preacher. This country is in great need of thousands of out-door sermons. Millions of people are not going to church; it may be God wants you to go out with a message for them, telling them that Christ died for them. Go out and raise a gospel whoop. Shout, and laugh, and cry. Preach about the sins of men, the love of God, the sacrifice of Christ and the awful danger of falling into hell. Say a lot about sin, the rejection of Christ, death, judgment day and the quenchless fires of hell. In this new evangel you should be much in prayer. You should have a mighty baptism with the Holy Ghost, a power from on high that would give you mastery over men and devils. If you will leap into this you will win a host of souls, and who knows, but you might start a wave of revival fire that would bring a new spiritual era in the nation.

God seems to love to bless small beginnings. Methodism had great power when it was kicked about and mobbed out of doors. If you will preach the gospel, not abusing the church or anything or anybody, but preach Jesus Christ mighty to save, you will soon have a cover over your head and a place to preach. What a startling thing, and what a blessing it would be, if the three thousand idle preachers in this country should take to the roads and streets the coming spring and go to preaching.

More to follow.

A Most Interesting Letter.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

RECENTLY, the letter which I am giving below, was received from one of our fine Asburians who, with another graduate, Miss Guyer, is working among the neglected ones in the Dark Continent, which Livingstone called "The open sore of the World."

I wish each one who reads this would do what I did, breathe a prayer to our heavenly Father to protect these girls and give them the means necessary to carry forward their work. Some would call this "burying their lives," but God has placed a deeper meaning to these sacrificing young women than human sight can appreciate. It is said that "except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone," but if it die it will be multiplied many fold.

Personally, I would rather have a daughter or son of mine giving their lives in this way to the rescue of those who have never heard of their Christ, than to have them in the most palatial home, with all the luxuries which money can afford, and be out of the will of God. Love knows no sacrifice, so in giving their lives to help others, they are obeying the promptings of that divine love which is shed abroad in the heart when one is born again, made new creatures in Christ Jesus. Truly it is "Love divine, all love excellent" that acts through human channels to the seeking of the lost on the mountains of sin. Pray for the girls, and if the Lord would have you send some of your tithe to them, see their address at the top of their letter. You will notice this was intended for a Christmas Greeting, but coming from Africa it is one month late, but I give it just as it came to me.

Oro via Ilorin Nigeria W. Africa.

Christmas Greetings:

"It came upon a midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
From angels bending near the earth
To touch their harps of gold;

"Peace on the earth, good-will to men,
From heaven's all-gracious King,
The world in solemn stillness lay,
To hear the angels sing."

At the blessed Christmas season, perhaps the words that ring oftenest in Christian hearts are those sung by the angels on the night of our Savior's birth, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will toward men." At Christmas time the word "peace" seems very precious to us. Only the truly Christian heart knows that deep, settled peace, which God alone gives. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Not only do we have peace with God, but as Paul tells us we may have the very "peace of God" in our own hearts. Think of it! "The peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." Phil. 4:6. By faith in Christ we have peace with God, by standing fast in the Lord and giving ourselves wholly to him, we have the very peace of God in these temples of clay." The God of peace shall be with you." Phil. 4:9.

These words of peace keep ringing in my heart and yet I am in a land where on every side, I see restlessness, fear, superstition, ignorance, suffering and sin. "But the wicked are like the troubled sea—there is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." Isa. 57:20, 21.

When a man here in Oro is in trouble he goes to the heathen priest. This priest shakes a few white shells about or uses some other form of divination to find out what the spirits wish the man to do. Perhaps the priest will say the spirits want a goat or a pig. If so the man will kill the animal, pour the blood over the idols and cover them. The best part of the animal will most likely go to the priest, although the man eats the heart and liver. The priest also uses his charms to find out what else should be given him for his service. The native greatly fears bad dreams, and this is one thing that sends him trembling to a priest. Not long since, it was very common to offer human sacrifices to the idols and even now we are told it is done secretly in Oro.

I am alone here now as my companion, Miss Guyer, has gone up-country for a much needed rest in the cooler, plateau region, where our Mission has a Rest Home. She hated to leave the work, but realized it was for the best. Jesus himself said to his disciples, "Come ye, apart and rest awhile." Pray for her that the Lord may strengthen her during these months of rest.

There was no one to stay with me as workers are scarce in the Master's vineyard. I have been here nearly a year and my knowledge of the language is of course very limited. This makes the task harder. The language problem is very great and I do covet your prayers along this line. This is called one of the very hardest of languages in Africa, because of intonation.

Klaidu is a most faithful native helper here. He is instant in season and out of season, preaching the Word. He has a calm and peaceful manner and a most restful countenance. The bonds that once held him in heathen unrest have been loosed and his life is a striking testimony to what Christ can do for a black, uncivilized pagan.

In addition to the ten girls which I have under my care now, I also have two very ill children at present, one burning with fever and the other a little boy of about nine years, racked with intense pain, from rheumatism. Sleeping on the cool, damp, mud floors and never getting the right kind of food, often causes small children here to suffer from the worst types of rheumatism. This boy had no one to care for him at home. One girl said to me, "His mother is dead and in our country it is hard for a child to live when no one loves him. If he is sick they let him die."

Our little girls' hearts are becoming more tender to the gospel. The smallest one came and told me the other day that she loved Jesus. She told me in a sly little way and her face was lighted up with a joyful radiance. Before Miss Guyer left she gave each of the older girls a Bible in their own language. They are able to read a little now. I have never seen children in my life so delighted with a gift of any kind. This one gift of a Bible made them happier than any child in America is with his loaded Christmas tree at this happy season.

Another thing I wish you to pray for is for money to put up adequate buildings. I am sure our crowded conditions were hard on Miss Guyer's nervous and physical constitution. It is not easy to teach day after day in a small, hot over-crowded room. We have $500 on hand, but our Field Director says this will not be enough for both dormitories and school building. Besides we need a kitchen and storehouse. It will take at least $500 more. We were disappointed to hear this, but we believe in prayer and as the dry season has now begun and building time is here, let us pray that the need be supplied soon.

Once more as we read the old, old Christmas story let us ponder the words of the angel, "Fear not, for, behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." Have all people heard these tidings? No. Many are going on in lives of unrest, fear and darkness, in the shadow of death and yet Christ came "To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide their feet in the way of peace." If this be true, then he surely came for the African. Who will help by prayer or by coming to guide the feet of these benighted people in the "way of peace?"

There is only one true way of peace and it has been found to work among the lowest, most debased people. That way is called the "new and living way" which Jesus has consecrated for us by his own precious blood. We have a great privilege in telling these people that their sacrifices of the blood of goats and pigs can avail them nothing. Jesus has offered one sacrifice for sins forever. He has left this message in the world and has sent the Holy Spirit to carry it home to the hearts of those willing to receive it. It is for us to tell it to the ends of this old weary earth.

"And this gospel shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations: and then shall the end come." Matt. 24:14. In Revelation we read that some shall be redeemed out of "every kindred and tongue, and people and nation." Rev. 5:9.

When the gospel has been preached in all the world we are plainly told the end will come, not when everybody in the world believes, for we know many willingly reject the gospel.

It has been nearly 2,000 years since that night when the angels sang of his first coming as a babe in Bethlehem, yet in all this time his people have not entirely fulfilled his parting command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Mark 16:15.

When he comes the second time as a King to reign, then will peace truly cover all the earth and we will realize the fulfillment of the last stanza of that old Christmas carol, which I have often sung thoughtlessly:

"For lo! the days are hastening on,
By prophet-bards foretold,
When with the ever-circling years
Comes round the age of gold!
When peace shall over all the earth
Its final splendors fling,
And the whole world send back the song
Which now the angels sing!"
Wishing all of you a happy Christmas, I am,
Yours in his love,
Josephine Bulifant.

The Lakeland Holiness Camp Meeting.

The time of the Holiness Camp Meeting at Lakeland, Fla., is drawing near. Make your arrangements to attend this meeting. We are in times of great spiritual dearth, when there is great need that God's children get together and cry mightily to him for an outpouring of the Holy Ghost. Remember the date, February 12 to 22. For information, write to Rev. H. H. McAfee, Lakeland, Fla. Attend this camp, if possible. If you cannot go, pray God to bless the meeting in the conversion of sinners, the reclamation of backsliders and the sanctification of believers. Oh, for a mighty manifestation of the power of God among men!

Your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

Just to Remind You!

Have you ordered your Arnold's Sunday School Commentary for 1931? If not, do not delay, for time is passing and you should have it for the splendid lessons it gives and the comments that are so invaluable and helpful. I do not hesitate to recommend this Commentary on the Sunday School Lessons as I have used it so long that I am convinced that it has no equal in giving a concise, practical, illuminating and helpful understanding of the lessons. Its price is within reach of all, only $1.00. To use this book once, you will always know what to get when the next year comes around.

Yours, wishing to help,
MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

RELIGION AND PROSPERITY.

REV. H. E. WILLIAMSON.

ANY views are being advanced regarding the cause of the "hard times" that are upon us. One says, "Overproduction," another "Tariff," another "War debts," etc., etc. Roger Babson, who commands the respect of the business world, and with good reason, says the Sunday School Times, for few men in our day have studied, analyzed and interpreted business facts and conditions as he has, speaking before the Board of Control of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A., recently said: "Business depressions are caused by dissipation, dishonesty and disobedience to God's will, a general collapse of moral character. Statistics show this plainly. They also show how business depressions are cured. They are cured by moral awakening, spiritual revival and the rehabilitation of righteousness."

Both sacred and profane history unite in their testimony that hard times follow periods of moral decadence and lack of vital religion. Babylon, Greece and Rome fell because of their sins. Morrey in his, "Outlines of Roman History," says, "The decay of religion and morality among the Roman people was a fundamental cause of their weakness and ruin."

Old Israel in Bible times suffered times of depression, famine, pestilence and trouble and Scripture always points out their sin as the cause. When they repented, asked for forgiveness and turned away from their sins God forgave them and renewed their prosperity and blessed them in material ways.

God still rules the world. Man is dependent on him for daily bread. God controls the seasons, blesses crops and provides for all of man's needs. He sometimes withholds the material blessings when man disobeys and becomes independent until he comes back and acknowledges his Creator.

If sin has ruined other nations will it not ruin us today? Look how we have sinned here in this land of gospel light and opportunity. Yes, sin is written in big, burning letters across our sky. The masses have forgotten God, rejected his Son and neglected his house of worship. About seventy millions of the population of the United States are not identified with any church. More than twenty-seven millions of our youth are not receiving any religious instruction, either Catholic, Jewish or Protestant. What will the coming generation be, growing up without the restraining influences of religion?

The sins of ingratitude, indifference and extravagance have characterized us far too long. Sabbath desecration has become alarming in its proportions, so much so that many members of our churches think nothing of saying, "Goodbye, pastor, goodbye house of God, we are going visiting or joy riding this Sunday." No, they are not that polite about it, but openly and defiantly desecrate the Lord's day.

The sins of our political life are multiplying. Bribery and corruption are rampant, courts are corrupted, jurors perjure themselves in many instances, and justice mis-carries, until many good people have lost faith in the government. Office seekers buy their way into office and then violate their sacred oath of office when elected.

Dishonesty, greed and lust have so permeated our social life that society is rotten. Immorality, vice and crime are on the increase in spite of all that good men can do. Adultery resulting in the breaking up of many homes, grows apace. Whole cities are in the grip of the underworld until decent men have thrown up their hands. Lawlessness stalks abroad in daylight, robbing banks, killing innocent people, kidnapping children, and violating every law of God and man.

What is to be done in so desperate a situation? Only one thing, and that is for men to repent of sin, confess it, forsake it and turn to God with purpose to serve him and live righteously. The nation needs a thousand "John the Baptists" to call men in every walk of life to repentance. God warned old Nineveh through Jonah's preaching, and she repented and judgment was averted and life was prolonged. Oh, that God would pour upon his people a spirit of prayer for conviction for sin to seize the wicked and bring them to repentance. May God grant us a nation-wide, yea, a world-wide revival!

"HAPPY NEW YEAR."

"Happy are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." (Matthew 5:9).

"Happy are they which are persecuted for righteousness sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5:10).

"Happy are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake: Rejoice and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven." (Matt. 5:11).

"Happy are ye when men shall hate you, and shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of Man's sake. Rejoice in that day, and leap for joy: for behold, your reward is great in heaven." (Luke 6:22, 23).

"Happy are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." (Luke 12:37).

"Happy are they which have not seen, and yet have believed." (John 20:29).

"Happy is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried he shall receive a crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." (James 1:12).

"Happy are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb." (Rev. 19:9).

"Happy are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth: they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." (Rev. 14:13).

"Happy and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection. On such the second death hath no power: but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." (Rev. 20:6).

"Happy are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." (Rev. 22:14).

"Keep on believing."

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

GRACE AND THE DANCING SCHOOL.

A True Story.

Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

Little seven-year-old Grace ran to her mother and cried, "Mamma, I'm going to dancing school!"

"Are you darling?" Her mother always called her darling. "Who will make your dresses?"

"You will, mamma."

"No, darling, Jesus would never let mamma make dresses for a little girl to go to dancing school."

"Martha Pain's mother will make my dresses when she makes hers."

"All right, darling, if you want to go and be Mrs. Pain's little girl."

The child packed her doll clothes and holding her doll in her arms said, "If I were your real mamma and you were my real little girl I would make your dresses to go to dancing school, I would."

Her father came in and she said, "Papa, I am going to dancing school."

"Where will you get the money?"

"You will give it to me," she said coaxingly, climbing into his lap and hugging him.

"Oh, no, Gracie, all my money belongs to Jesus and he would never let me spend it to send a little girl to dancing school."

Then her mother said, "Darling, if Jesus will go with you to dancing school, mamma will let you go."

"Oh, Jesus will go with me to dancing school. I shall ask him tonight when we pray. But, mamma, I'm not going to ask him out loud."

"All right, darling."

At bedtime, kneeling beside her mother, she said her little prayer and then she was silent several minutes. Then she sighed and sobbed and sobbed. Jumping up she threw herself into her mother's arms, the big tears rolling down her cheeks as she said, "Oh, mamma, hold me tight. Jesus won't go with me to dancing school. Oh, I don't want to go to dancing school. Hold me tight, mamma! Hold me tight!"

Her mother held her close and wiped away her tears and comforted her until she was her own bright, happy little Grace again.

HOW A LITTLE GIRL HELPED.

Mrs. Geneva Mendenhall.

At one time there lived in Syria a great General whose name was Naaman. He stood high in the favor of the king, and was brave in battle. But all of his wealth and power meant little to him because he had a terrible disease which is called leprosy. A leper's skin turns deathly white and little by little the body decays and falls away. No one knows a cure for leprosy and the only end is slow and horrible death.

Now there lived in Naaman's household a little Jewish slave girl who had been stolen from her home in Israel and sold to the Syrians for a servant. But this little girl had a kind heart. She greatly loved her Syrian mistress and felt very sorry for her master.

One day the little girl told her mistress of the great prophet who lived among her people in Samaria, and how she was sure he could cure the General's leprosy. When Naaman heard of this wonderful man he went to the king with the story. And because the king greatly loved Naaman, and desired to have the disease cured, he sent Naaman in a chariot with a train of servants and soldiers, and gifts of gold and silver, and beautiful robes, and he wrote a letter to the king of Israel asking him to have his great General's leprosy cured.

But the king of Israel knew nothing of the Lord's prophet who lived in Samaria, and he became very much frightened, lest by failing to cure the General's leprosy, he should make the king of Syria angry.

At last the prophet heard of the king's trouble and he sent a message to the king saying, "Let the man come to me, and he shall know that there is a prophet of the Lord in Israel."

When the great General arrived in Samaria, the prophet sent his servant out to tell him to go and wash in the river Jordan seven times. This hurt Naaman's pride and made him very angry so he wheeled his chariot about and started home where, he said, they had just as good rivers as the Jordan, anyway.

But one of his servants reasoned with him, and as his anger cooled, finally persuaded him to drive down the mountains to the river Jordan. He waded out into the water and when he had washed himself seven times, he came out on the sand pure and clean. And he was a leper no more. The first thing he did was to go back to the prophet's house and beg him to accept the presents he had brought from Syria with him. But the true prophet never worked for pay and this one answered, "I will receive nothing."

Then Naaman asked to carry home enough of the soil of the land of Samaria to build an altar to the prophet's God whom he wished to worship in his own country.

After the prophet told him to go in peace, Naaman went away toward his own land. But Gehazi, the prophet's servant, was filled with greed, and he ran after the rich General and asked him for a present, pretending that the prophet had sent him. Of course Naaman was glad to give him the two bags of silver and the rich garments for which he asked.

But after Gehazi hid his gifts and tried to tell the prophet that he did not have them, the prophet said, "Because you have done this wickedness, the leprosy of Naaman shall come upon you." And Gehazi walked out from the prophet a leper, with his skin as white as snow.

Questions.

1. Who was this great prophet?
2. Why did Naaman not wish to wash in the Jordan?
3. Do you think that Naaman would ever have been cured except for the faith of the little slave girl?

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a Tennessee boy to join your happy band of boys and girls. I am eleven years old and in the fourth grade. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. Father is my pastor. I belong to the M. E. Church. This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten very much. I hope to see my letter in print. Joe Sauceman. Rt. 2, Cosby, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Mississippi boy join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I have light brown hair and brown eyes. I am five feet, nine inches high. I will be thirteen September 8. Have I a twin? If so, write. I have four brothers and one sister. I go to Sunday school every Sunday possible. I like our Sunday school class because my aunt is my teacher. We have a Junior League every Sunday afternoon. I will answer all letters received. Try to guess my middle name. It begins with L and ends with E, and has four letters in it. Samuel Fairchild. Box 316, Hazelhurst, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How I would like to join your band of boys and girls. I am about four feet, six inches. I have light hair and blue eyes. I live in Maryland. My first name begins with H and ends with N; it has five letters. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. H. A. Preston. Aberdeen, Md.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I live in Illinois in the small village of Cypress. My birthday is February 23. I might have a twin, if so, please write me. I have a little sister eight months old. Her birthday is August 24th. If she has a twin also write. I have a little brother whose birthday is Jan. 4th. We all go to the Junior League every Wednesday evening. I go to the Methodist Church all the time. Our pastor is F. W. Schwarlose. Our other pastor was L. F. Vise. I hope Mr. Waste Basket is gone rabbit hunting. If anyone is my twin please write. Mary Jo George. Cypress, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl from Illinois join your happy band of boys and girls? I am seven years old, and in the second grade. I have a little brother smaller than I. He is two years old. His name is Jack Ray. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with G and ends with E, and has four letters in it. I go to the Methodist Church, and belong to the Junior League. I hope Mr. W. B. has gone hickory nut hunting, for I hope to see my letter in print. Peggy G. Lentz. Cypress, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years old. I have dark brown eyes and black hair. I have light complexion. My grandmother sent the paper to me. I certainly did enjoy it. I am in the fourth grade at school. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I sure enjoy reading the boys and girls' letters. I guess it keeps you busy reading the letters. I have two brothers and five sisters. My first name is Iva and my middle name starts with L and my last name starts with P. I hope you can guess it. Iva L. P.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Wichita girl join your happy band of boys and girls. This is my first letter to The Herald. I am eight years old. I am in the third grade at school. I have a little brother two years old. My schoolteacher's name is Miss Newell. My Daddy is a Methodist preacher at the Woodland Church. I am a little Christian girl. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I love Jesus because he first loved me. My grandma takes The Herald and I enjoy page ten. I hope to see this in print. Ruth Paulin. 2036 Hydraulic, Wichita, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you spare a little corner in the 10th page and let an Illinois girl join your band of boys and girls? I am a girl of twelve. My birthday is July 30th. I have light brown hair and have fair complexion. I go to the M. E. Church every Sunday possible. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I belong to the Junior League. I also have a twin brother named Harold. My smaller sister is ten years old. Have I a twin? If so, I would like to hear from them and will answer every letter I receive. I hope Mr. Waste Basket has gone quail hunting so my letter may be printed. Helen Mescher. Cypress, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a girl from the prairies; please let me in; it is raining on me. Thank you. Wonder if I have a twin in the large circle of boys and girls? I was fifteen years of age September 11. I go to Greensboro High School; am in the ninth grade. I have four teachers and like them fine. We take The Herald and do enjoy reading page ten; also the continued stories. How many of you cousins have read the following books: "Life of Bud Robinson," "Beautiful Girlhood," and "Pilgrim's Progress"? I have read some others, which were published by The Pentecostal Pub. Co., but I like these best. Ruby Swan Ashworth. Rt. 3, Greensboro, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little girl in for a few moments from up here in the North country? I am fourteen years old. My birthday is Jan. 21. I am in second year High School. I also play basket ball. Have I a twin? If so, please write. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I never heard of your paper before, until Mr. J. R. Parker of Wilmore, Ky., was holding revival meetings in our church in October; he gave us a copy, then my Dear Cousins: The more I read The Pentecostal Herald the better I like it, that's why I am coming again. I hope you are enjoying your lives in a way that you would like to be living if Christ should come. He has an all-seeing eye and knows every deed that you do. There is nothing hid that shall not be brought to the light, so be careful what you do. The Bible teaches us that the last days will be worse. People are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. If you resist the devil, you'd get in closer touch with God. You can't ride the same horse in two directions at the same time; neither can you serve the devil through the week and God on Sunday. The time to make a start to serve God is now; tomorrow may be too late. If you read about "The rich man and Lazarus" you will get a glimpse of heaven and hell. You can't get a return ticket from hell any more than you can get a roundtrip to heaven. When you get to heaven you will find plenty of your friends there. Sinners don't think you will be lonesome in heaven, as sinners will never get there. If people had everything in this life they wanted, hell would have to be enlarged. God hates a proud look. A happy home is the nearest thing to heaven. We can have such homes if all members will do their part. God loves us and will lead us into pure happiness. He gave us knowledge to know good from evil, and "He that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is a sin."

FERGERSON.

Mrs. Lester Fergerson, widow of James N. Fergerson, and familiarly known as "Aunt Lessie," died yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Burns, a short distance south of route 15, west of Mt. Vernon.

Mrs. Fergerson was in her 90th year, having been born July 27, 1841. She was a native of Jefferson county, and born within half a mile of where she died.

She was a daughter of the late Rhodam Allen, a pioneer minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Jefferson county. She was affiliated with some branch of the Methodist Church throughout her life of more than 89 years, being first connected with the West Salem M. E. Church, and at the time of her death, with the Free Methodist Church of Mt. Vernon.

She was ever a loyal and consecrated Christian, and took great interest in the Church and all it stood for, in the active years of her life, and retained this interest in the years of ill health which preceded her death.

Mrs. Fergerson had been confined to her room at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James W. Burns, where she made her home for some years.

Her husband, James N. Fergerson, in his day a prominent farmer and churchman, preceded her in death several years.

She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. James N. Fergerson, and was preceded in death by three sons, Fred, many years ago, and Harry some years later. The Rev. Eddie Fergerson, a very successful evangelist, was the last of her sons to die.

Ten grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren survive.

Funeral services were held at West Salem M. E. Church, and burial in the cemetery adjoining.

GIBBS.

Some weeks ago, one of our number, Mrs. Roxie Ann Gibbs, slipped away from us to try the great beyond, a vale which only death can pierce. As her friends lovingly think of her, we all but wish she might give us a hint of the reality of that realm. We feel that whatever the joys of heaven may mean, they are hers today.

Her going has meant much to us all. In our Sunday school class especially, her loyalty and encouragement were always so marked. A splendid student of the Bible, a study which was always her delight. She knew whom she believed. When convinced a thing was right she always had the courage of her convictions.

Even though we have been saddened by her going, we feel that heaven is a little nearer and dearer for, after all, she is just up stairs. So soon we, too, will pass that way. We sorrow not as those who have no hope. We are trying to rejoice in her gain. It is ever thus in life. One's sorrow is another's joy. We all feel sure that she lived as the poet said; that when the call came, she approached her grave as one who wraps the draperies of his couch about him, and lies down to pleasant slumber—a life like hers. Such a benediction.

Mrs. Gibbs joined the church in early youth and lived a consistent member of the Methodist Church, entering into the experience of sanctification many years ago. She died happy in the faith.

Besides her many sorrowing friends she is survived by her husband, N. C. Gibbs, Pleasant Hill, La., one daughter, Mrs. C. C. Hardee, Shreveport, La., and five sons, L. V. and James Gibbs of Shreveport, La., W. P. and S. O. Gibbs, of Vincent, Ark., and R. R. Gibbs, Greenville, Miss.

WAUTAUGA, KENTUCKY.

I want to thank those who responded to the appeal made in The Pentecostal Herald for us some time ago. We appreciate all the people have done, as we have been going through a real test. The last night of October I was paralyzed on my left side and have not been able to walk since. My left arm is helpless, as is my left leg. I want the readers of The Herald to pray that God may restore me to health. Any help that you may give us will be gratefully received. My address is Wautauga, Ky.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. W. A. B.: "A mother asks the prayers of The Herald family for her home that is almost broken up."

A Herald reader requests prayer for her healing, and that she may be baptized with the Holy Spirit.

FOR 1931.

By C. C. Featherstone

I will endeavor to be fair in my judgment of others; always giving to them the benefit of the doubt.

I will strive to be kinder to everybody with whom I come in contact, especially to the humble and lowly.

I will endeavor to think no evil and do no evil.

I will try to remember at all times, how frail and weak I am, but will bear in mind that "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

I will endeavor to bear with brave spirit the trials and burdens which come my way, remembering that they will, if borne in the right spirit, work for me "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

I will endeavor to cultivate more and more the cheerful, optimistic, spirit, remembering that the pessimistic spirit is detrimental to health, annoying to my friends and displeasing to my Heavenly Father.

I will endeavor with the help of God to rid myself of envy, jealousy and covetousness.

I will endeavor to so live every day that when night comes and I lay me down to sleep I will be at peace with God and men.

In a word, for the New Year, I will earnestly strive in all respects to be a true follower of Jesus Christ. And may he give me grace, strength and courage to carry out these resolutions.

GLEANINGS FROM EVANGELISTIC FIELD.

On Oct. 12 to Nov. 2, Evangelist L. S. Hoover held a revival here at Bedford, Ind., in the Free Methodist Church. It was the best revival the church has seen for some time. Much of the presence of the Lord was with us from the first of the meeting. Fine crowds were in attendance from the first. Brother Hoover's messages were of the old-time type that brought conviction and a goodly number found their way to the altar of prayer. The truth that Brother Hoover preaches is what every church needs in these days of false religion and delusions everywhere. He was fearless in presenting messages that stirred people to search their hearts and bring them to earnestly seek the Lord. We heartily recommend him to any church who is in need of help. Quite a number found pardon and purity and several joined the church. This is the second revival that Brother Hoover has held in this church.

F. W. Johnson, Pastor.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson V.—February 1, 1931.

Subject.—Jesus the Great Physician. Luke 4:38-44; 5:12-16.

Golden Text.—Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows. Isaiah 53:4.

Time.—About A. D. 28.

Places.—Capernaum and other towns in Galilee.

Introduction.—The lesson is so finely located by Arnold's Notes, that I take the liberty of quoting therefrom. "Following the baptism and temptation of Jesus and the wedding in Cana of Galilee, Jesus spent several months in what is called his first great Judean ministry. In December, A. D. 27, he returned to Galilee by way of Samaria. In March, A. D. 28, he returned to Jerusalem to the Passover, and in April returned to Galilee which marks the beginning of the great Galilean ministry. After his rejection at Nazareth he went to Capernaum, preaching and teaching through the summer and autumn in and around Capernaum and the country bordering the Sea of Galilee."

Right well do we term Jesus "The Great Physician." No disease was too severe for him to cure. Leprosy departed at the touch of his hand. Fever subsided at his command. When he spoke withered arms grew strong, and blinded eyes were opened; backs were made straight, and paralyzed limbs came back into usefulness. Insane persons, so made by indwelling unclean spirits, were made sane by driving out the demons with a word. He was not only "The Great Physician": He was "The Good Physician."

It is interesting to have Dr. Luke's opinion of the miraculous healings performed by our Lord. I do not for a moment suppose that Luke's knowledge of medicine was either very extensive or very accurate as compared with the learning of an expert physician of the present time. While he could not be classed as a scientific physician, he did know something about the subject beyond what the layman of his day knew. While Luke does write with fine accuracy, too much stress has been placed upon what some are pleased to call his scientific training. But his telling without prejudice of the miraculous healings by our Lord is worthy of the highest confidence, especially so, as they were in direct contradiction to the administration of drugs. One might object to the record made of these healings by Matthew and Mark on the ground that they were incompetent to judge of the work done; but I do not think such a charge can be made against Luke. He was possibly the most competent witness then living.

In a limited sense divine healing is in the atonement, though not in the same full sense as salvation from sin. Every one who genuinely repents and trusts in the merit of the blood of Jesus Christ is saved instantly. There are no exceptions. That is vouchsafed for by John 3:16, and many other passages. But it cannot be shown that every one who meets the conditions for divine healing, as we understand them, is healed. No doubt some are, but many others die. The time comes when all must die. It is easy to run wild on the subject of divine healing. Thousands have been made to profess healing, who never had a touch from God in all their afflictions. After long and careful investigation, I am satisfied that most cases of so-called divine healing have been humbugs. Some have been honestly mistaken, and some have been dishonestly mistaken. After all, about four-fifths of human afflictions are mentally produced, and can be mentally cured. It is fearful for one to die of a disease he never had; but that is the lot of a large part of the human race. Too much stress has been put upon Matthew 8:17. Jesus did that when he was upon the earth; and I have a conviction growing out of his own words in John 14:12, that he intended that his Church should have power to continue to heal the sick; but nothing is more certain than the fact that she has lost that power. Were she to return to the high standard of the New Testament, that gift might come back to her.

There is a marked difference between the healings of Jesus and those of modern cults. When he spoke the word the sick became well and strong at once. That was also true of the sick people whom the apostles healed in his name. But I notice that in the work of modern healers (?) there is great need of the time element to restore the sick to normal health. This latter element, somehow, disturbs my faith in the genuineness of the work. If we are going to attempt such work, it will pay to live very close to God, and to keep very humble before him. Self must die clear out.

Comments on the Lesson.

Just previous to our lesson Jesus was teaching on the Sabbath day in the synagogue in Capernaum, and with great authority and power, when a demon-possessed man cried out in deep anguish, and called him the "Holy One of God." Jesus rebuked the demon, and drove him out of the man to the astonishment of the assembled multitude. This brings us to our lesson.

38. He arose out of the synagogue.—The Greek says: "Having arisen from the synagogue"; that is having risen from his seat in the synagogue. Entered into Simon's house.—Simon Peter lived in Capernaum; and Jesus spent much time in his home. Simon's wife's mother.—That leads me to say that a mother-in-law in a man's home may be a great blessing, or a great curse. If she will shine for Jesus, and let the young people manage their own affairs, she can be the former; but if she tries to control the home and the grandchildren, the sooner she finds another place of residence the better for all parties concerned. I write this because I have seen both kinds. I write it to commend the one, and to rebuke the other. They are both needy. A great fever.—That was a common disease around the Sea of Galilee—too many mosquitoes.

39. He . . . rebuked the fever; and it left her.—Note how quickly the work was done; and the healing was complete, for she arose immediately and ministered unto them.

40. He laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.—I am told that some of our modern would-be healers are very careful to select special cases for their operations; but the Master healed all who came with faith, and even healed some on the faith of others.

41. Devils.—This word should be demons; there is but one Devil. Thou art the Christ of God.—These demons seemed to have more sense than some men. Suffered them not to speak.—Jesus does not want the testimony of demons, or of bad men; albeit, he rejoices in the testimony of saints.

42. A desert place.—I suppose he spent the night in Peter's home, but went out very early in the morning to this desert place, possibly for prayer, as he had a custom of doing that sort of thing. He would escape the multitude for communion with his Father; but the multitude followed him. His power to heal their sicknesses was too good to be lost; so they begged him to stay longer with them.

43. I must preach the kingdom of God in other cities also.—He must be busy in spreading the good news. What a gracious example for us little men to pattern after. Wesley had the idea when he said, "The world is my parish."

44. He preached in the synagogues of Galilee.—That was an extensive ministry. The Jews gathered in their synagogues on their Sabbaths; and the custom of the day gave him ample opportunity to address them on the subject of the kingdom of God—salvation from sin.

There falls between the two parts of our lesson the wonderful miracle of the big draught of fish, that seems to have forever called Simon Peter and the two brothers, James and John, away from their secular life to become constant followers of the Lord. That immense netful of fish was a type of the multitudes of men whom they would win for Jesus Christ.

5:12. A certain city.—The record does not tell us what city. It was somewhere in Galilee. A man full of leprosy.—The language indicates that he had a severe case of it. Oriental fashion, the poor fellow fell down upon his face. If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.—It is ever thus. Men are willing to believe in God's power to save, but doubt his willingness. But to doubt God is to call him a liar. That is a terrible sin.

13. Touched him.—That was clear beyond the conduct of any Jew of his day; for lepers were "untouchables." I will be thou clean.—Gracious words to a dying outcast; but they have been spoken millions of times to miserable sinners; and, like the poor man's leprosy, their sins were all washed away.

14. Charged him to tell no man.—I can find no reason why the Master so often attempted to keep those whom he healed from telling it, unless it was an effort to keep the multitudes from thronging him. Although the man was already healed of his leprosy, the Master would have him make the offering commanded through Moses, for a testimony to the Jewish rulers. Some of our little Modernists would rob Moses of the authorship of the Pentateuch; but every time they attempt it they call Jesus Christ a liar. He gave Moses credit for writing it. Such brazen impudence in the face of the world's Redeemer is astounding. It means that some men are inspired by their master, the Devil, to do what decent men will never dare to do.

15. So much the more went there a fame abroad of him.—If I am not mistaken, that was perfectly natural. How could that healed man keep his mouth shut. He had more than he could keep. How can a saved man keep quiet about it. Why, it is all I can do to keep from yelling hallelujah while I am writing these notes about such a glorious Saviour who has redeemed me from sin. Glory!

16. The Master was tired, "withdrew himself into the wilderness (desert), and prayed." Learn the blessed lesson. When life's cares and toils grow too heavy, go apart with the dear Lord, and pray, and rest awhile. He will renew your strength and give grace for another battle. I have found it so during these many years of toil. Not one time has he ever failed me.

EVANGELISTIC REPORT. WILMORE, KENTUCKY.

As has been our custom, we met for a program that occupied the evening. There was only fair attendance as many of the evangelists were not in town, due to engagements.

The following subjects were discussed: Evangelism in Relation to the growth of the Church; Does the type of Evangelist affect the convert as to Stability and Perseverance; The General Objections to Evangelists, and What can be done to bring Mass Evangelism back into favor, especially by the evangelist.

Out of the above list of subjects some good and worthwhile things were said. The church moves as the evangelistic spirit is kept alive.

THE OLD ROCKING CHAIR.

There comes to my memory

Tonight as I'm dreaming,

With pleasures so rare;

But of all the dear scenes

That hover around it,

Is the one of my mother

In her old rocking chair.

I can see the old nursery

Where little feet pattered,

The old rambling hall

With the high winding stair;

We loved them all dearly,

But our hearts seemed to cluster

Around that dear mother

And her old rocking chair.

I'd like to sit near her

When night shades are falling

And hear the old hymns

She sang, as of yore;

The old Bible stories she taught

And we listened

Until the old sandman

Would knock at our door.

Sometimes when I weary

Of life with its burdens

I want to go back

With all of my care,

And kneel once again

At the knee of that mother

Who's waiting for me

In her old rocking chair.

Written by Nannie Belle McRae.

A GOOD MAN GONE.

A letter from Mrs. G. S. Pollock tells us of the recent home-going of her dear husband on December 8 at 3:20 P. M. She writes as follows:

"It is out of my deepest heart sorrow I send you word of my precious husband's death Monday, Dec. 8, at 3:20. For six months he has been a great sufferer from hardening of the arteries of the heart—too early in life. Every other organ in good condition. The trouble began two and a half years ago, but he was able to finish his second year in the pastorate in Freedom, Pa., in our own conference. He finished his thirtieth year, answering to that roll call, then asked for a conference evangelist relation again, so when he was able he could do the work which he loved so well. We came out here to this beautiful town, Zelenople, Pa., for his sake. He has gone down rapidly since conference. The end had to come now, it seems. God did not remove the thorn—his illness—in my life. He took my darling, but his grace has been sufficient. He is resting here in the beautiful cemetery just on the edge of this town where I will make my home for a time, at least.

"Brother Pollock was a member of the Pittsburgh Conference for thirty years, last Conference. He was known among his brethren as a true preacher or minister of the Word. In all my travels I've seldom found any one with a richer store of heart and mind of the Word of God. Seldom was a passage of scripture quoted that he could not locate it, chapter and verse. He was identified with the Holiness Movement in West Pennsylvania all through the years of his ministry. While a sweet singer of the gospel—that was only secondary—the work he so loved was his ministry of the Word. Nine years he was one of our Conference Evangelists, preaching and singing over many different states. His district superintendent said to me since his going, 'Grant lived to show us preachers how to live.' Those who knew him best loved him most. He was a daily student of God's word—had been since his conversion at the age of sixteen—sanctified at seventeen. He simply 'ate' the Word. He wore his life out for others. After a companionship of over twenty-nine years, I know these facts. Twenty-nine years of blissful fellowship walking together with God! He still lives. His dying words were 'Amen to His will.' Many times during his long hours of suffering he would say, 'Oh, how I love him! Jesus, I do love you.'

"The funeral service was held in the M. E. Church here, being attended by a large body of ministerial brethren. It was more like a coronation service. Souls were blessed."

I am sure the hundreds of our readers who knew and loved Brother Pollock and his dear wife will pray for her in this hour of trial, that God may put beneath her the everlasting arms of his compassionate grace and mercy, that the same God who sustained Brother Pollock in his suffering may comfort her, and bring her through a refined vessel sanctified and meet for the Master's use. They had journeyed together for twenty-nine and a half years and it will be difficult to become adjusted to the lonely walk by herself. "The Marvelous Grace" they so sweetly sang together will not fail her at this time of stress and strain. Peace be to his memory, and the grace of God be with our dear sister.

Mrs. H. C. Morrison.

W. C. Purdy: "I get great good from your paper. I believe in the kind of gospel which you preach, and which The Herald advocates. I believe in Christ as my personal Saviour, in a life of holiness and absolute trust in Christ. I believe in the Bible as one's guide, and by God's grace expect to bring my life in absolute harmony with the teachings of Christ."

Rev. C. R. Crowe: "I am ready to assist in visiting the sick, or preaching, or be of any service possible. Recently, I visited a boy in St. Joseph's Hospital who was suffering from an accident; also Mrs. R. F. Willett, of Morganfield. Sister Willett has a natural smile, but added to this is the grace of God in her soul. This combination made me feel that I had been benefited by my visit, as much, or more, than she was. I have visited D. M. Duncan, of Brandenburg, Ky., at St. Anthony's Hospital. He was suffering from a dislocated limb. I have preached for Brother Miller, also for Rev. J. L. Piercy, of Louisville. I am in good health, both of mind and body, and ready to assist my brethren in any way I am needed. Address me, 2725 Victor Place, this city."

He is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us. Ephesians 3:20.

ARNOLDS' COMMENTARY

A very practical aid for the busy teacher. It is rich in suggestions and sets forth the lesson in a very pleasing manner. We consider this the most spiritual exposition of the Sunday school lesson.
The hints to teachers, illustrations, blackboard exercises, questions, maps, etc., make this popular help a good all-round commentary at a popular price $1.00.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1931

By Amos R. Wells. Fifty-seventh Annual Volume.

To the many who are familiar with "PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES," it would be sufficient to say that the standard of excellence which has characterized the work for more than half a century is fully maintained in the new volume.

The analysis and treatment of the lessons are clear and informing, carrying quotations from great Bible teachers. It is for teachers of all grades and contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help so compiled and tabulated that it can be effectively used. It has maps, pictures, and charts alone worth the price of the book.

This book is invaluable for the study of the Uniform Lessons. Price $2.00.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide recognizes no superior. If you have never used this wonderful commentary, try it for 1931.

No teacher will be unprepared who uses this extraordinary commentary. The treatment of the lesson never becomes dull or uninteresting. The topics are always fresh and appealing.

Many thousands of up-to-date teachers buy two or more of the best commentaries and find it pays. Whatever you do, don't leave out Tarbell's this year. Price $2.00.

The Gist of the Lesson

An excellent commentary by R. A. Torrey. It is a concise, boiled-down commentary for the busy teacher. It takes the text of the lesson, each verse separately, and illuminates it. It gives the teacher many good ideas. Price 35c.

THE POWER OF SIN.

By The Editor.

THEREFORE if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire." (Matt. 18:8, 9).

In the above scripture our Master uses some very strong figures of speech. We understand that the foot, the hand, the eye, are in a sense not agents, but machines. There is a wide difference between an active, intelligent agent, capable of thinking, reasoning, choosing, and acting independently, and a mere machine with no conscious power, and no capacity for independent action. Man is an agent, capable of action, but a mere piece of mechanism, such as a reaper, threshing, or loom, is a machine which must be operated by an agent.

The agent can sin; the machine is incapable of sinning. Man might pitch his enemy in front of a moving machine and thus destroy his life; or he might shoot him through the heart with a pistol, but in such case the man is the agent, the pistol is the instrument. The instrument is innocent, the man is guilty. The foot, the hand, the eye, are the instruments through which man, the agent, works. They are important instruments and the loss of one of them is a great disadvantage, and the loss of all of them is a calamity.

When Christ said, "If thy foot, or hand, or eye, offend thee," he did not mean to teach us that under any circumstances we should maim or hurt our bodies; but he did teach us that, as great a calamity as this would be, it were far better to be thus maimed in body than that our soul should be cast into hell. He did not mean to teach us that there are cripples in heaven, but he would impress upon us the thought that it were better to go through eternity in heaven with an eyeless socket, an empty sleeve, or hopping upon a crutch, than that one should spend eternity in hell.

Sin gets a fearful hold upon human beings. Its roots imbed themselves in the heart, and the poisonous growth spreads itself through all the life, sapping and blighting the soul. Sinful practices so warp the character, affect the muscles, nerves and brain, that they become a part of the man. His avarice, his appetite for drink, tobacco, lust, and hatred become a part of them; he feels that he could not part with them. To sever them, it seems to him, would be as painful as the severing of a member of his body.

In these words our Lord is showing us the fearful power of sin, the tenacious hold it may get upon one, and the awful certainty that, if it is not cut away and parted from,

YES I KNOW—BUT YOU SEE—AND YOU MIGHT.

Yes I Know

I noticed that you glanced at the blind beggar sitting on the street, cap in hand, with a few pencils. You glanced, then lifted up your head, gave your nose an upward tilt, and held on to your nickel, justifying yourself that, some years ago you read of a beggar who sat on the streets of New York City, holding out a tin cup, but when he died it was found that he had hidden away thousands of dollars. You always remember this when you see a beggar, and pass by on the other side. Your memory is remarkable! It is a great comfort to you to remember this rich beggar, and hold on to your coin.

But You See

The newspaper story may have been a lie. I remember once a long while ago I saw a statement in a newspaper that, on investigation, turned out to be untrue. You seem to have forgotten one, Lazarus, lean, sore, yes, full of sores, dogs all about. It did not turn out that he was worth thousands in money. But under his rags there was a heart of faith, warm with love and his triumphant soul slipped out of his starved body and flew up to Paradise. See! Forget that rich New York beggar, think of Lazarus, and drop something into the beggar's cap.

And You Might

Pass by on the other side until your heart becomes hard, and you came to hate the poor and lose out of your heart the love of God and humanity, save up your money, die and go to hell. Think of this! Warm up, and loosen up. Love, pity and delight to help every one you can, all you can. H. C. Morrison.

it will, in the end, plunge one into hell. Sin, its fearful hold, the possibility of separation from it, and the fearful results of holding on to it, are here set forth in most startling language. There are sinners who scarcely know why they are such. They rarely, if ever, come under the influence of the gospel, or think of their soul's eternal interests. If you should ask them why they are sinners they could not answer you. But there are sinners who are constantly coming in contact with the gospel, who know what they should do, but they hesitate. There is some dearly beloved sin that holds them.

Then there are church members who are living in conditions that have but little stimulating effect upon the spiritual life. They realize they are not what they should be, but it gives them little concern. The literature they read, the sermons they hear, and the people with whom they associate, do not stimulate them to think of, and desire a better and higher spiritual life. Their condition is pitiable and dangerous in the extreme. But there are those who know themselves to be Christians, and who are very much dissatisfied with their spiritual state. They see sanctification in the Scriptures, in religious literature, in the lives of their acquaintances; they hear it in sermons, they feel a deep desire for it in their hearts, but somehow they do not obtain the experience. There is some foot, some social hand, some tender eye with which they are unwilling to part. It would be a criminal act to steal a thousand dollars; but it would not be wicked to earn it, or to obtain it for its value in trade; you are obsessed with it; you desire to be wholly sanctified, and that thousand dollars must be laid on the altar of consecration. Ah! Reader, have I touched your eye? Remember our God is a loving, patient Father. He comes often and waits long, but to those who hold back because of something too dear to give up, there will come a time when it will be too late. The peace and light will be gone, and the heart left dark and desolate. Now is the day of salvation!

What is the Matter with the World?

CHAPTER IV.

TAKE, for instance, these United States! What is the big trouble in this country? The question is easily answered. Idle wage earners, men with large families to support, without work. If every able-bodied man in this nation who wants work could get a job tomorrow at wages sufficient to support his family, the present puzzling problem would be nine-tenths solved.

Immediately millions of dollars would be paid in wages every Saturday at noon, and would be in circulation, most of it being spent the same day by bedtime. Trade would pick up, vacant houses would be rented and business take an upward trend.

About two millions of young people become of age every twelve months; that means marriage; in this nation that calls for homes. Directly, a great building program would be bound to come; that would mean furniture, carpets cooking ranges, tableware, refrigerators—everything that goes into buildings, furnishing homes and housekeeping. Business would hum throughout the nation.

Well, what prevents all of this? Easy to answer: Millions of foreigners that ought not to have been permitted to come into this country. A good many years ago, by some means, a few statesmen happened to get into the two Houses of Representatives at Washington; they saw the danger of over population by immigration, and appointed a Commission to make a careful survey of the whole matter of immigration and employment; the Commission returned and reported to Congress, and at once a bill was passed limiting immigration. Mr. Wilson was President at the time and vetoed the bill; a most unfortunate act.

I had watched the matter with interest. In my travels I had noticed the East, West, and industrial centers were filling up with foreigners, which meant cheap labor on their part and idleness of native-born labor.

The big industries were opposed to limiting immigration, which meant cheap labor. The Catholic Church opposed limiting immi-

NOTES FROM THE TROPICS ON VARIOUS TOPICS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I am writing this in Panama and as I look out the windows of the Mission House I am seeing the vast expanse of the Atlantic Ocean. At night the ocean waves sing me to sleep, in the mornings they seem to sing God's praise. Sometimes as I look out the tides have carried the waters out to sea and the beach and rocks and shoals are bare and the sight is not alluring, but in due time the tides come back and the waters sweep in and everything is changed. A certain writer has said:

"Like tides in a crescent sea beach,
When the moon is new and thin,
Into our hearts high yearnings
Come welling and surging in,
Come from the mystic ocean,
Whose rim no foot has trod;
Of some of us call it longing,
And others call it God."

David had these longings when he said, in Psalm 42: "As the hart panteth after the waterbrooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God."

It is a sad thing for the soul when things dry up and everything is parched and still and dead and there is no stirring of soul, no emotion. I have met men who have been in the ministry for years, some of them missionaries, and they were all dried up, not a stir nor a ripple, prayers dry, sermons dry, service dry—everything dry and dead. How came it that they dried up? Where and when did they lose their fervor and fire? How is it that the tides have gone out and the beach is dry and the shores are littered with the refuse of the sea and no tides come back to make things beautiful and full and glad?

II.

Jowett, that great and mighty preacher of a pure gospel, wrote one day: "When moral passion cools, moral ideals fade or we see only what is near, we become near-sighted, weak-sighted, blind to the things that are afar off. We love the vision of the ideal, the heavenly, the eternal. We see only what is near, the earthly and the temporal. When the passion for perfection becomes lukewarm and cold, we become more concerned with postures than with depositions, with temporalities more than with spiritualities, with a good living more than a good life. We are blind to the heavenly and the divine. We become dominated by the earthly and the heavenly becomes as an impotent fiction, lost somewhere in the encircling mists."

To avoid drying up we need to keep up a constant spirit of prayer; and we need to live within the meaning of those words of Wesley:

"Come, Holy Ghost, all quickening fire!
My consecrated heart inspire,
Sprinkled with the atoning blood;
Still to my soul thyself reveal,
Thy mighty working may I feel,
And know that I am one with God."

III.

The Tropics are places of contrast. Here may be found beauty and ugliness, sweetness and bitterness, extreme wealth, extreme poverty, sunshine and shadow, health and disease. Here in the Central American tropics may be found the greatest burden-bearers of the world. A missionary told me about meeting an Indian and he was carrying upon his shoulder a big, heavy stone. She asked him why he carried such a useless burden, he replied: "Oh, I am so in the habit of carrying loads that I do not want to lose my power to carry and to sweat."

The world is full of folks who are carrying useless burdens—worries, fears, doubts, etc. They are never free from burdens. They know nothing about casting their burdens upon the Lord. They know nothing of the sweetness of that promise: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." Matt. 11:28-30.

In Guatemala they have a great variety of birds. I heard a bird sing a new note one day. I never before heard anything quite like it. Its one note seemed to be, "Victory." I listened intently and that seemed to be its song: "Victory." Now I believe that little bird lived a life of complete victory and liberty. Its home is in the tropics where sunshine and summer are all the year round. It knows no winter; it does not have to migrate when fall comes, flowers and fruits abound.

In Guatemala they have on their national emblem a beautiful bird with long green tail which they call the Guetzal. The singular thing about this bird is that it refuses to be a captive; it cannot live in captivity. It must be free. Confine it and it dies. So the soul was made for spiritual liberty and freedom. Enslave it and its powers wilt and die. Salvation comes to set us free from the thrall of sin and the enslavement of Satan. Salvation set Martin Luther free and we had the Reformation. Salvation set Bunyan free and we have Pilgrim's Progress. Salvation set John Newton free and we have "Amazing Grace." Salvation set Charles Wesley free and we have "Jesus, Lover of my Soul."

IV.

When we were in China we held a series of meetings up the Yangste in the city of Nanchang. Rev. W. E. Schubert is one of the Methodist missionaries there who holds with tenacity to the old lines of prayer, evangelization and full salvation. His ministry is a vital one and his influence for the gospel is both extensive and intensive. He is constantly on the watch tower looking prayerfully for every movement that means the extension of God's kingdom in China. I clip the following from one of the Advocates:

"A paragraph concerning President Chiang Kai-shek, of China, in a recent letter from the Rev. William E. Schubert, Methodist missionary in Nanchang, is of more than passing interest in view of the president's recent baptism as a Christian. Writes Mr. Schubert:

"Mr. Carter, the Negro evangelist, made a great impression on Chinese national officials by the healing through prayer of a high official's daughter who had been given up by the doctors. While Mr. Carter was there, President Chiang Kai-shek came in to inquire about the little girl's condition. Mr. Carter began exhorting him to repent. Madame Chiang is reported to have said, 'You must not talk that way to my husband; he is the president of China,' and Carter replied, 'In the sight of God, he is a sinner like any other man.' There are great possibilities for good or evil in Nanking, with possible world influences, depending upon whether someone gets the burden and prays it through."

We have worked with Mr. Carter, the Negro evangelist, in Shanghai. He has been greatly used in various parts of China because it is well to remember the color line does not affect things in the Orient like it does in the West. The baptism of the President of China, Chiang Kai-shek, is a significant event. His mother-in-law is a devout Christian and a Methodist. We met her when in China. The pastor, Rev. Z. T. Kaung, who baptized the President, is a minister of the M. E. Church, South, has been a delegate to the General Conference in the U. S. A., and received the D. D. degree from Asbury College. China has been cursed with Communism. Let us hope that President Chiang Kai-shek may be used of God to further the work of the gospel among China's millions. It seems a pity that the President and Marshal Feng cannot get together. If those two leaders could be united for China's welfare and in the common gospel it would be one of the greatest blessings that could come to China in this needy hour.

V.

Years ago Kimura of Japan met Moody in California. Moody said to him, "Have you any money? He replied that he had 35 cents. "How do you expect to get to Chicago on 35 cents?" His reply was, "How do you interpret Phil. 4:19?" They parted. The Lord supplied the need and Kimura went to Chicago and had two years training there. When about to return to Japan he got as far as St. Louis. He was to speak at a missionary meeting; he was one of three. When the first two had spoken there was only one minute left for Kimura. In that one minute he said, "My name is Kimura, I am from Japan. I have no mission board or fence behind me, only Almighty God. Remember me in your prayers." As he was going out an old lady slipped something in his pocket. It was more than enough to take him to Japan.

This was heroic faith, and it takes heroic faith to bring things to pass in the kingdom of God. Trouble with so many people now engaged in Christian work, it is money and more money. I have met Oriental graduates of our American schools over in the mission fields who insisted that they should have the same salaries paid them as the Americans received and should be given their furloughs also. In my experience of many years dealing with foreign students I have suffered many disappointments. They would train in this country at the expense of our churches and colleges and then after many years in America go back unwillingly to their home land and fail to bring the fruitage that was expected of them. I have recently met a Latin American—graduate of three of our church schools, finest education, finest training at the expense of good people in the U. S. A., and today that man is a backslider; he doesn't believe in the Bible way of salvation, he is not preaching nor doing anything for God's kingdom—lost out in his soul.

The fact is that no man or woman should be sent to the mission fields who is not deeply and intensely spiritual, and who does not know God in the power of the Holy Ghost. In other words, the foreign missionary needs to be sanctified and needs to die out completely—be dead to the world, to money, to applause, to sin. Such missionaries as Hudson Taylor, William Taylor, George Bowen, etc., wrought so much for the kingdom because they were dead to the world and alive to God.

VI.

Savonarola paid the price of a real consecration. He, the son of a wealthy father, bade farewell to the luxury and ease and pleasure that could be his. He wrote his father: "That the misery of the world and the iniquities of men had driven him to that step of complete abandoning to God and his cause. He became a Dominican Monk. For some years he was a wandering preacher without much effect, but when he came to Florence impetuous eloquence took possession of him. With consuming ardor he denounced the sins of Florence, called men to repent. Crowds would wait through long winter mornings to get into the Cathedral as soon as the doors were opened. They wanted to hear that great man preach repentance. They confessed their sins, burned up their idols and wicked books and gave themselves to God.

Would God that some Savonarola might arise to call the multitudes to repentance in our day. The kind of sermons preached to-day in the average pulpit seem to "toy with terrors before which our fathers shrank aghast." Most preachers "do not like the stern, bare, jagged words which our fathers used in their description of sin, and so we are very busy filing and smoothing the sharp edges and deluting their somewhat loud and glaring color. . . . Is the yearning for more exquisite culture and growth or is it the evidence of partial benumbment?"

CHAPTER XIII.

THE STORY OF MY FALL.

I HAD thought that no human being should ever hear from my lips the story of my temptation and fall—of the wretched life I have lived since quitting the home of my childhood. But I feel that I owe you my life itself, and that it is your right to know every secret of my heart.

"With much of my early life you are already acquainted. You know how carefully and luxuriously I was brought up from infancy. You may not know, however, how impatient of restraint nor how my inclinations led me in wrong paths. I loved my mother tenderly, and if she alone had sought to direct me I might have been more responsive to her leading. While she possessed firmness in the government of her children, she was not insensible of the limitations of childish wisdom and thoughtfulness, and was therefore kind even when administering rebuke, or punishing for some infraction of maternal law.

"For my father I never entertained any sentiment of affection. While I feared his displeasure, I never grieved that I incurred it except for the sting of the lash which he sternly wielded. While writhing under the punishment inflicted by him, I have often cursed him in my heart. Was this an illustration of that spirit of Christ which every one must possess who belonged to him?

"He never sought to lead me to see the wrong I had done, nor the end which might be expected to follow, except by making me feel the weight of his hand in chastisement. A single reproof, tenderly given, might have changed my feeling toward him, and so have influenced my whole life. But I do not recall a single instance in which justice was mercifully dealt out—no sign of tenderness for the child or regret that it was necessary to punish that child.

"It is not, perhaps to be wondered at that my father's wishes as to my conduct had little influence with me. In fact, I took some satisfaction in doing the things he forbade me to do when I could do so without being found out. It seemed at times as if it were a commendable thing to disobey such arbitrary commands and so merciless a judge.

"When those reading rooms first opened in the city, I became interested in them from the fact that an opportunity was thus afforded me of meeting a class of young girls with whom I had become intimate at school—girls who enjoyed a romp and good time in spite of the oft-repeated caution of anxious parents not to become 'loud' or 'unladylike'. It is astonishing how quickly a knowledge of things that are evil and therefore hurtful to girlhood is acquired by girls and boys! Doubtless there is always some older one who is willing to impart the soul-destroying information, one who cares nothing for the effect the information may have upon the young girl's life and character. In my case, my first lesson was given by a girl of my own age whose brother, three or four years older, prompted her at first, and later, made other revelations of his own account.

"I knew much of the secret history of those places before I visited them myself. I think my mother must have felt misgivings as to the propriety of letting young girls spend whole afternoons in such public, though quiet places, as she, for a long time insisted that I should never remain above an hour at any time. However, as time passed and I appeared perfectly indifferent to the attractions the places seemed to possess for the majority of young girls and boys, she lost her anxiety and willingly allowed me unlimited opportunity to amuse myself as I pleased.

"I do not think I had any inherent tendency to a vicious life. I was shocked and covered with confusion when my girl friend confided to me the story of her evil associations and immodest behavior. For a time I shunned her and tried to put out of my mind the shameful story she had told me. But as first one and then another of my girl friends disclosed their knowledge of lewd things, I lost something of my horror of such things and gradually came to take it as a matter of course, and believed that lewdness was prevalent characteristic of young and old. My peculiar temperament led me into active participation in anything that engaged my mind, and I was not long in getting to the very bottom of every inquiry to be found in every large city. I began early to acquire the art of deception which ultimately enabled me to mislead my friends in the most heartless manner.

"But it must not be supposed that I could forget the instructions my mother had given me, or that conscience did not assert itself at times and render me wildly miserable. But God has permitted every one to choose between good and evil, and while he has not failed to forewarn of the deadly results of sin, he will not coerce the will of any. Conscience may trouble for a time, but sin deadens the sensibilities and in the end, the voice of conscience unheard, because so long unheeded.

"I possessed no appetite for stimulants, but rather an aversion. My first taste of the perfectly harmless refreshments of the reading room annex left a disagreeable remembrance. While there followed a momentary exhilaration, it was followed by hours of depression for which I could not then account. But I remember now that during those hours of depression I had a peculiar longing for another sip of the seductive wine. An interval of several days intervened before I visited the place again, during which time I was conscious of a vague uneasiness and apprehension. Whether this was the effect of the drugged wine or the effort of conscience to make itself heard, I will not say. It is enough to say that I went the second time, and that I partook more freely of the refreshments set before me. But why recount the various steps in my downward career? Why revive the bitter memory of the following years until you found me deserted and at death's door?

"It may be sufficient to say that the brother of the girl friend before mentioned was the first boy, or young man, to know of my visits to the 'Ladies Room,' and the effects of the refreshments upon me. But he was too worldly wise to take immediate advantage of the knowledge to carry out the purpose he long had in mind. He contented himself with frequent allusions to the character of the place and with making lewd remarks in my hearing. But all these things had their influence upon my character and made me a vile woman at last.

"I will not weary you with the recital of all the incidents connected with this year of my life. It will be enough to say that I fell into grievous sin and lost that purity which is a woman's crown of glory.

"My passion for the opera led to places and plays which no pure woman can go without shame and confusion. Step by step I took the downward way though hiding my shame from my friends who loved me, seeming to be interested in higher and holier things. I undertook religious work more in order the more effectively to deceive those who would have helped me to lead a pure, helpful life.

"The fear of detection, if I remained in Glenview, led me to fly from my home after breaking the hearts of those I should leave behind me. I had fallen in with an agent of an opera company, who was looking for a suitable person to take the place of one of the leading ladies who was to leave the company shortly. Having heard me sing, he offered me a chance to fit myself for the place. I must, however, begin lower down and work up to it, as he put it. I decided to do so and left my home for San Francisco, in the manner you already know.

"At Denver, Colorado, I fell in with one Herbert Dalton, a member of a theatrical company which was just closing an engagement at the Tabor Grand. He followed me to San Francisco and became my most intimate friend.

"I entered upon my work with enthusiasm and soon took the important part assigned me to the satisfaction of the company. As the severe strain of preparation for the parts assigned me, the late hours, and general dissipation began to injure my health, I began to have thoughts of the coming time, when with broken health, I should be compelled to stop. Where should I go? What should I do? There seemed but a single avenue open to me—that of marriage with Herbert Dalton, whose fine business ability would enable him to secure employment readily at a salary that would insure us a good living. I fondly dreamed that after having drunk to satiety of the cup of worldly pleasure I could easily escape the penalty for my sins and become a 'respectable' member of society.

"Gradually, and with all a woman's wiles, I brought, as I thought, Herbert to my way of thinking, and we were married. I ought to have said that some months previously, Herbert had introduced the Rev. Frank Mason, as a college friend of his, who was taking a long vacation on account of his health, and bespoke for him my society and friendship. He was a fine baritone singer and a very agreeable companion, and we were soon on excellent terms. He was, of course, the minister who performed the ceremony, in the presence of two witnesses, also friends of Herbert's. Surely, I thought, I can be happy now in spite of all the 'prudes' in the world! I am married—a wife in name and in fact! And yet I could not feel perfectly secure. Herbert did not seem to be as devoted in his attentions—though exacting to the utmost every right which the marriage ceremony conferred. I fancied that he maintained a degree of indifference toward me at

"TRYING THE SPIRITS."

Rev. Joseph H. Smith.

WHEN we are bidden in 1 John 4 to "try the spirits," we should be careful to notice that not only the spirits within, which may be animating or impelling us in certain directions, or suggesting thoughts or feelings within ourselves; but the spirits of various prophets and teachers, with the views, the sentiments or the literature they may create, are to be put to the test. And this is perhaps the predominant intent of the passage: Because (as is added), "many false prophets are gone out into the world." But we shall consider the "trying the spirits," both as to such teachers and teachings, and as to the spirits within ourselves.

Paul and John alike have been moved to give us caution as to the first of these. In 1 Cor. 13:14, false teachers are designated as "deceitful workers," "transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ;" and are likened or related unto Satan himself "transformed into an angel of light." And likewise here in John we are told of them that "this is that spirit of antichrist, that should come and is even now in the world." And by these two we are to be reminded that though not avowedly against Christ, yet secretly and subtly they are so, though as deceivers they would appear as the very "apostles of Christ," yet they seek to undermine our faith in him as the Son of God. Hence we are to know that not everything is Christian that poses as Christian; not all that assumes the name of Christ, not all that would figure as a Church.

Next, we will observe, since these are spoken of in Scripture as "seducers," their spirit, at least in early stages of their approaches, is that of a charmer, a spell-binder, with much of the attractive lure of the "strange woman." Hence we must not be deceived nor decoyed by the gentility, the courtesy, and the seeming fairness and the professed concern for our own interests of the affable professor, the plausible writer, the swaying orator: for all this can obtain without a touch or influence of the Spirit of God. Upon the other hand, it is a fact that as Satan can duplicate miracles, and counterfeit inspiration, so too, he can imitate the manners of a gentleman and the charity of a Christian. Neither their pretences for our welfare, nor their politeness in speech, can prove their real spirit; neither can their power to effect wonders or to draw great crowds, or sustain great followings. We must have some other tests than these.

Both Paul and John agree as to the essential assize. These both, as we have seen, allow that they make their claims as Christian—some even as 'apostles of Christ,' and others as not altogether against Christ but without Christ; yet both John and Paul make real loyalty to Christ the test of their genuineness. John puts it thus: "Every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God." And Paul says that: "No man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed." (1 Cor. 12:3).

Whatever good, nice, or complimentary things they are saying or writing of Jesus, if they are denying or disputing that he is the incarnated Son of God they are not speaking by the Spirit of God. It is equal to anathematizing him to intimate that he was of carnal birth, as a writer in the Friends Review was allowed by the editor in a recent number to insinuate that, "Mary may have had some secret love relation unto some other man before she married Joseph." And while not many speak out so atrociously as this, still all who deny or dispute his birth of a virgin, confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh and come out at the same place as the blatant blasphemer just quoted, in classing the Son of God as a human bastard.

Loyalty to Christ is the only sufficient proof that the spirit of prophet, teacher or author is of God. Our Lord has said that "the Holy Spirit would glorify him." This he does in manifesting his deity, accrediting his conception of the Holy Ghost, demonstrating the vicariousness of his death, in conferring the saving and sanctifying benefits of his Blood to the believer, certifying his resurrection and heralding his coming again to judge the world. And the failure of any to thus magnify the Lordship of Christ, however eloquent, logical, rhetorical, persuasive, or sweet in spirit he may seem to be has not the "Spirit of God." Let us therefore "try the spirits" of those who would be our teachers or leaders, by their allegiance to the Cross of Christ. Peter would have had a Christianity without a Calvary. But the Lord relegated him to the rear, related his spirit to that of Satan, and declared that he savored of men rather than of God.

And now as to "trying the spirits" within ourselves. And first it is necessary for us to recognize that we have three spirits to deal with: There is the Spirit of God which is holy and infallible. There is our own spirit which (after sanctification) is holy but still fallible, and there is the spirit of Satan which is unholy and erratic.

And here unto ourselves as well as we have seen through them without, the latter is ever an arch deceiver and poses often as "an angel of light." Many of his suggestions and solicitations are under pretence of our "rights," or our "liberty," or our best "interests." Sometimes he would justify "evil that good may come out of it." He will seek to flatter us that, because either of high calling or the good we are doing, God will make exception of us and allow in us what would be wrong to men in general. He would seek to show us that the moral law (and not only the ceremonial ordinances) was done away in Christ; and that we do not have to "keep the commandments" in order to get to heaven. He has even persuaded some that as some early Christians "had all things common" we do not need to be too scrupulous in our regard for the property rights of others. And some have even listened to him saying that marriages consummated before conversion were not "in the Lord" and are therefore not "binding afterwards." These are but samples of the sayings of Satan transformed as an angel of light. There are many other such wiles of his.

Then there are the impulses, the imaginations, the thoughts and feelings of our own spirit; all possibly pure, but many neither preferable, practicable, nor possible. Some of our own affections or desires may be mistaken for impressions of the Spirit of God. So may our views or our notions. It is no disproof of their sanctification that holy men may make mistakes. Weakness may not be wickedness. Error need not be evil. We must not however blame all of the girations or the depressions of our spirits upon the Holy Ghost.

How then shall we "try the spirits?" That is, how detect the spirit of the wicked one seeking to seduce us, and how discriminate between our own finite spirit, and the Holy Spirit of the infinite God? There may be several minor, but there are these three major tests:

First, the Holy Spirit is never author of anything contrary to the Holy Scriptures. Though Satan may even quote and misapply Bible texts, and though we may not understand all scriptures, there are certain principles of truth in God's word which are inviolable. For instance, the Holy Spirit never leads to any violation nor to any lessening of conscience concerning any of the Ten Commandments. Neither is he ever back of any notion of the creation of the world other than that which is declared in Genesis and maintained throughout the Bible. Accounts of Man's Fall, and of the coming end of the world, and a future and final judgment are held by the Holy Ghost to the believing mind as fixed as the planets in their orbits. And all the Spirit's leadings maintain the mind and soul of man in obedience to the Bible's account of the Person and Plan of Christ in our Salvation.

Second, the Spirit does not lead contrary to Providence. Sometimes callings are cited ahead but never across or against God's order of events. Sometimes to further faith, but never to force either ourselves or others or things out of God's hand. Patience now, and prompt obedience next is the Spirit's method of moving the soul in the ways of God for us.

Thirdly, nothing unloving is ever of the Spirit of Christ. Not but that love must be faithful; but never fierce. It must be brave but never brutal. Even in consigning one to darkness and death for not having on a wedding garment.

Jesus represents himself as addressing him as "Friend." And with regard to them that "oppose themselves" against the truth we teach the apostle Paul enjoins us to meekness in instructing them, "if God peradventure may give them repentance."

Thus, by his love, by his Providence and by his Scriptures we may know the Holy Spirit of Christ within ourselves.

SOUL WINNING.

BY BISHOP THEODORE S. HENDERSON.

A DIFFICULT CASE FROM HIS PASTORAL EXPERIENCE.

IT was the close of a Sunday evening service in a city church. The day had not been notable. Then something happened of which I was not aware until the next morning. One of the members of that church was a foreman of the pattern shop in the Navy Yard. His height was over six feet. His muscles were like the iron in which he worked. He made patterns for the big battleships. There was iron in his blood. His name was John.

Once he had been a wicked man. Never did he deny that he needed an uttermost salvation. His sins had plunged him into deep debt to God. When a local preachers' convention met in the church to which his wife belonged, John went to hear these eager, enthusiastic men of God. Their contagion for Christ caught him. He yielded to the Savior without any reservation. All went well for several years. On the Sunday evening to which I refer some one whispered an evil report about John. At once his sense of justice knew the rumor was false. But the devil hit John when he was off guard and felled him.

He left the church in a rage. When he arrived home he said to his wife: "Kate, if that is Christianity, I am through with Christianity and the church." John knew that this gossip was not Christianity.

Still further he went in his unreasonable-ness. Turning to his wife, who had borne with him so faithfully during the years of his dissipation, he said: "Kate, tomorrow morning I go back to my cups. I will return to the old crowd." Nothing could have been more of a nightmare to that woman than such a threat. Every horror of the past years rose before her. All night long he kept her awake with that horror. And when the morning came, she was well nigh paralyzed with fear. As John left for the Navy Yard, he said to her: "There is one man in this city you are forbidden to see. If you dare to see him today I will reckon with you tonight when I come home." The man to whom he referred was myself. I was her pastor. Just as soon as John was safely at work, his wife came direct to the parsonage. What was I in that city to do, except to help people like her? She told me the whole tale.

When she had finished her story, I inquired at what hour John would finish the day's work. She quickly replied: "Oh, pastor, you must not go where John is; he would insult you. I beg you not to go." I replied: "He cannot insult me. No one who is occupied in the business of God has any time to be insulted. Leave that to me." After having prayed together, she left it to me. Four o'clock in the afternoon found me at the gate of the Navy Yard waiting for John. It was in latter December; one of the shortest days in the year. It was dark by 4:30, when the workmen were supposed to stop work. The thermometer registered below the freezing point. Keen winds blew across the harbor. As I stood there for half an hour waiting for John, I was chilled to the bone. Every kind of temptation was presented to make me give up the search. But it was life and death for that man. I would not be diverted by the devil, though he plied every art and argument. At 4:30 the big gates swung open. Thousands of men tramped out from their day's toil. John was so tall, I thought I could not miss him in the crowd. But I did. The crowd passed on. I had missed my man. The devil renewed his parley. It was late. I had tried and failed. He even suggested that I had done my full duty. Five o'clock came, and I still stood there, hoping that John would yet come out. But it was no avail. It was bitter cold. Pneumonia was prevalent in the city. The devil suggested I would surely fall victim to it. At last I determined, by God's help, not to be defeated.

John's home was two miles away. I started for it with a prayer in my heart and heat in my blood. I must have him for God. I could not be denied. He lived in a city apartment, the third story on the left. I pressed the electric button. Through the tube I heard his wife's voice. "Is John there?" I asked. Faintly there came the reply: "Yes." Up these three flights of stairs I went as if to battle. I knew the fight was on. His wife met me at the door. Her face was ashen white. All she could do was to point me to the door of his den. He had been home for an hour. All the time I had been standing in the cold he had been home in his comfortable room. He was seated in his easy chair. As I entered his room he said savagely: "What do you want?" "I want you," said I, "what do you suppose I want?" He glared at me as if he would have liked to leap at me. I kept a respectable distance. No one knew what would happen. He evidently was raging within. His wife came in and threw her arms about his neck and besought him to return to God. He swung his big right arm and flung her aside. I wanted to leap at him, but I did not. His sweet little daughter came in, threw herself at his knees and begged him to come back to Jesus. He rudely ordered her from the room.

Then I took a chair, still at a comfortable distance. I pleaded with him for Christ's sake, for his wife's sake, for his children's sake, for my sake, to yield himself anew to God. He had not been drinking. He was bitter, hard as iron, unyielding. For an hour I poured out my soul to him. It was useless. He was unmoved. Then I drew my chair close to him. I threw my right arm about his big frame until my right hand was under his heart. Then I clasped my left hand in my right until I had him in my embrace. Calling upon God to help me, I poured into John's ear the tenderest word I knew about Christ; I pleaded until my voice broke and my strength was gone. All the while I held him to my heart. Then John fell on the floor as if he had been struck with lightning. The fountains of his heart broke. He wept; he sobbed; he cried for mercy. I thought his heartstrings would break. I cannot tell how it all happened. I found myself on the floor beside him. I wept with him. Every sob of his soul started a sob in mine. He was passing through his Gethsemane. I went through the garden with him. I "wrestled in prayer on his behalf." Calvary was a living reality to me. My heart was broken.

After a while, John jumped to his feet, threw his arms about me, put his head of iron grey hair on my left shoulder and cried aloud for me to forgive him for his insult. "There is nothing to forgive, John," I said. "You have only to ask Christ; it is he whom you have wronged." Then he did so. It was all over. John had been won back to God, not by contract, but by contact.

John has been absolutely loyal to Christ and the church since that hour. I saw John a few weeks ago still faithful, still serving Christ to the uttermost.

We will never win folks from sin and death until our souls become so stirred that we will be willing to make any sacrifice in order to win them.

If Christ was willing to pay the full price—to give his all for our redemption, then surely, we ought to deem it a privilege to give ourselves in whole-hearted devotion to his service. Let us be done with the bargain counter type of religion. Let us dedicate ourselves wholly unto our Lord and Savior. Let us pay the full price.—Selected.

If God's goodness be to us like the morning light, which shines more and more to the perfect day; let not ours be to him like the morning cloud, and the early dew, that passeth away. Those that would be satisfied with the fatness of God's house must keep close to the duties of it.—Matthew Henry.

A Splendid Offer.

Now that the long winter evenings are here you should supply your center table with books that will not only entertain, but be profitable to the whole family, especially the young people who may be in your home.

The world—and the church too—seems to be going mad over cards, dancing and movies. It does not occur to the church members that they are supposed to leave these things behind when they take upon themselves the vows of the church, but indulge in them just as freely as they did before they identified themselves with the church.

We are so anxious for the people to get light on these subjects that we are making an unusual offer in order to induce people to supply their boys and girls with such reading matter. We have twelve books that sell for 25 cents each, and we are lumping them in one lot and propose to sell them for the price of eight, making $2.00 for the entire lot.

Let me give you the names of them and then you may judge for yourselves whether we are offering you a bargain or not. Here are the names of the twelve books, each one priced at 25 cents, regular price.

Flirting with the Devil, by C. H. Jack Linn, treats of cards, dancing, and movies.

Riches of Faith, by M. M. Bussey, a wonderful faith tonic.

Lest We Forget, L. J. Miller, on what the fathers have to say on sanctification.

An Exposition of the Lord's Prayer, R. A. Danskin, a prayer tonic.

The Tongue of Fire, A. P. Gouthey, treats of backbiting, a timely book.

Mary of Bethany, Ella M. Parks, a message to young women who seek a closer walk with God.

Fragrance, Sweetness and Power, a new book by J. M. Hames, the purpose of which it is to stir up God's people to deeper devotion.

New Paths in Old Pastures, Albert G. Stone, a brand-new book written and dedicated to the youth of today whose hands must hold the torch that shall light Tomorrow's Pathway.

Spiritual Shocks, another book by J. M. Hames, dealing with Conscience, Record and Judgment. This book will stir you to self-examination and prayer if anything will.

The First Ten Thousand Years in Hell, a most thrilling and searching book.

The Nightingale of the Psalms, by Aycock, a wonderful seller; 50,000 have been sold and still selling.

Crossing the Deadline, by H. C. Morrison, or the Crucifixion of Jesus Christ. This is a book you can read every day and each time find something to stir you to better living.

Now is not this a galaxy of literary gems? Any one of them is a reservoir of truth that needs to be placed before the rising generation. Friends, do not fail to take advantage of this remarkable offer to get this whole set of twelve books for only $2.00. And then every member of the family read them, pass them to your neighbors and help to break down the craze for the dance, cards and movies, and other harmful amusements. You can't talk back to a good book, but the truth will soak in and take root and bring forth a harvest of fruit in better living and more consecrated devotion to the church.

These books are beautifully bound in illustrated covers which makes them most attractive. I am telling you about them because I want to help you and yours to shun the paths of worldliness and vice that lead to destruction in the end.

I am yours to fight the World, the Flesh and the Devil. MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

times that amounted to almost revulsion. How he could spend whole nights away from me, I knew not where, without a thought of how I should amuse myself. And then I made the mistake of upbraiding him of unfaithfulness to his marriage vows. All this did not occur at once upon our marriage, but required nearly a year for development. An event, which when I became aware of it, I thought would bind us more closely together, seemed to anger him greatly. In his mad fury he cursed me in foulest language, and told me that I was to be the mother of a child born out of wedlock, the marriage ceremony having been but a mockery and the Rev. Frank Mason, an apostate whom his church had excommunicated, the marriage license a stolen one upon which no return had ever been made, the witnesses tools of his who had lent themselves to the deception because of some offense I had given them in other days long forgotten by me.

"When I informed him that I held a marriage certificate duly signed and witnessed which justified me in the eyes of the world, and in the eyes of the law as well, he scornfully replied that two other women held similar documents which had not been found of any value in a court of justice where the license to marry was not a matter of record. With this taunt on his lips, he went from my presence and I have never seen him since.

"When I realized what all this meant to me and the unborn babe I thought I should die. Then I could begin to fathom the devilish character of the man to whom I had bound myself by vows which I felt were recorded in Heaven. Hour after hour the bitterness of death seemed intensified until reason gave way and I became a raving maniac. I never knew when my child was born or what became of it. How long my reason was dethroned I cannot tell. Others have told me six months elapsed before I began to regain my mental balance.

"Having a somewhat expensive wardrobe at the beginning of my sickness, I was cared for by the woman in whose house I was living at that time, with the expectation that she would be well paid for her trouble. She believed that I had plenty of money, as she noticed that I denied myself nothing my fancy called for. But when she found that I was penniless and friendless, she avenged herself by confiscating all my belongings and disposing of them to suit herself. When all was gone she unceremoniously turned me into the street. I earned enough to keep soul and body together in ways I need not mention, and vowed to live only for vengeance on the devil who had wronged and deserted me! Day and day I sought for him, I secured the services of a detective, to whom I confided the story of my wrongs. I could not promise him any other reward than that of the gratitude of an outraged and unhappy woman. He pitied my evident misery and registered a solemn vow to find Herbert Dalton and bring him to justice, if it took a lifetime to do it. I never relaxed my efforts to find him and punish him with my own hand. But I was seriously hindered in this purpose for the lack of funds which I must earn before using.

"In this extremity my voice was my capital, and my street singing attracted many who were moved to pity by my evident distress of body and mine. For I was sick and sorrowful indeed. Only my strong will made it possible for me to keep up day after day, and night after night for many weeks—itinerating from city to city in the vain hope of coming upon Herbert Dalton and settling the heavy score between us. At last I grew utterly hopeless and realizing that illness and possibly death were near at hand, I quitted Los Angeles, where I had gone two months before, and returned to San Francisco.

"Having saved up a few dollars I took lodgings where you found me and took to my bed sick, as I believe unto death. I am only able to recall dimly the events of the next day or two—the calling of a physician and the awful agony of body and mind which ended in delirium.

"There you found me and brought me back to consciousness and peace, sweet peace, which I have found in trusting in Jesus. He has lifted the burden from my soul and taken me into his love and compassion."

Thus Jessie ended her story. The reader will have noticed that there has been no attempt to cover up her sin or justify herself. She did not seem to desire that fact to be known that she had made her debut before the public under very flattering conditions and won immediate recognition as a talented woman—that the company reaped a golden harvest largely through her popularity and that but for the dissolute habits which she indulged she might have enjoyed uninterrupted popularity so long as she continued in the profession. These facts came out through questions asked from time to time by Mrs. Queerman.

We will follow Jessie, her brother, and Bessie Queerman to Glenview.

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of drys do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

LINCOLN ON PROHIBITION.

Whether or not the world would be vastly benefited by a total and final banishment from it of all intoxicating drinks seems to me not now an open question. Three-fourths of mankind confess the affirmative with their tongues, and, I believe, all the rest acknowledge it in their hearts. . . .

If the relative grandeur of revolutions shall be estimated by the great amount of human misery they alleviate, and the small amount they inflict, then indeed will this be the grandest the world shall ever have seen.

—Lincoln in his Washington's Birthday Address, 1842.

THE SIN OF MEDDLING.

E. E. SHELHAMER.

"Forbear thee from meddling with God who is with me that he destroy thee not."—2 Chron. 35:21.

THESE were the words of a heathen king, Necho of Egypt, to Josiah, king of Judah. It seems that Necho was about to continue the Egyptian conquests in Asia, especially along the river Euphrates. In so doing his nearest route was along the sea coast of Palestine to a point about fifty miles north of Jerusalem where his army disembarked and started to march across the country via the plain of Esdraelon. King Josiah objected to this, though Necho was ready to pay for the privilege of taking the land route, which was nearer. But Josiah stoutly refused and went out to intercept him and there lost his life. Yes, "He that passeth by and meddleth with strife belonging not to him, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears"—he is likely to be bitten.

Now Josiah was a remarkable youth. Few like him today. At the age of eight he began to reign and at sixteen made a covenant to put down all idolatry and revive the true worship of Jehovah. At the age of eighteen he kept the passover of which it is said, "There was no passover like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet." Josiah, himself gave "thirty thousand lambs and kids, and three thousand bullocks." In this he surpassed all other kings.

But was it not sad that after all the good he did he should suddenly come to an untimely end, while in the prime of life, simply because he stepped aside and "meddled"? Let us notice then the cause and cure of this baneful habit—meddling.

1. Idleness. This is a curse to any people. It has caused the downfall of kings and the overthrow of empires. David was invincible until he "tarried still at Jerusalem," and ceased to fight the battles of the Lord. Then when ease, luxury and popularity came, he went down with a crash.

We are told that, "This was the iniquity of Sodom—Pride, Fullness of bread, and Abundance of Idleness was in her and in her daughters." These three things will ruin any family, city, or nation. It would put an end to a lot of divorce scandals if a host of idle men and women could be kept busy caring for a home with several children. They have too much time to gad about and meddle with the affairs and affections of others. As long as Josiah was kept busy cleaning up around home he had no time to meddle with the quarrels of other kings.

2. Curiosity. One old writer said, "Idleness and curiosity married together beget envy." This is certainly true! Let any one be idle and curious and he will be likely to pry into the affairs of others where he has no business. The result will be he will stir up a lot of trouble between close friends. "It is an honor for a man to cease from strife; but every fool will be meddling."

Had Josiah remained at home and been content to enjoy the smile of his own God and his own people, he would have lived to a good old age and died in peace. But his curiosity was aroused when he found that Necho was making haste to forestall his Babylonish rival. This curiosity drew Josiah away from his place of security and he was slain. I may be preaching now to some one who, back yonder, brought upon yourself suffering and sorrow because you were curious and did not remain at home. Jacob and his household were disgraced and an awful slaughter followed because his daughter, Dianah, "went out to see the daughters of the land." She was not the only child to bring upon herself and her people ignominy as a result of going to parties and pleasure resorts.

I have made it a rule to stay away from auction sales and similar places where there were "Special Bargains," unless I knew beforehand what I positively needed. Several times have I disregarded this rule to my sorrow and have gone just to see the sale or the crowd. I either bought something I did not need because it was cheap, or was asked by a "special" friend to go on his note. I need not tell the rest. Nehemiah was invited to attend a great gathering of nobles but replied, "I am doing a great work so that I cannot come down; why should the work cease whilst I leave it?" Of course this caused offence, but he pleased his God and saved his head. Good Lord keep us from allowing curiosity and sociability to turn us aside from the chief course of our lives.

3. Self-Sufficiency. No one has time nor disposition to meddle with others until he first becomes unduly elated over his own real or fancied success. Amaziah, king of Judah, sent a challenge to Jehoash king of Israel saying, "Come, let us look one another in the face." But Jehoash replied, "Thou hast indeed smitten Edom and thine heart hath lifted thee up; glory in this and tarry at home;

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

NANKWANTAO, SHANTUNG, CHINA.

Dear Friends of The Herald Family:

As we begin this letter we are sitting on a small brick platform, located in the angle of a large L-shaped church, in a little mud-walled village of western Shantung Province. Between the two sections of the L is a five-foot-high brick wall separating the men from the women. Each side is packed to the platform; at least two eager listeners occupy every window, and still more are trying to crowd in at the doors. Men, women and children are apparently dressed alike, except that the men's outer garments extend below the knees, while the women's are little more than waist length. All wear thick blue or black, cotton padded blouses and trousers which are tied at the ankles. Most of the women hobble in on little bound feet, averaging from three to five inches in length, many of them with naked babies tucked in the front of their blouses next to the skin.

As the preacher delivers his message almost all listen with rapt attention. Just now the chauffeur started the motor in the car which brought us in over the rough cart roads or through cultivated fields. There was a clamorous rush for the door. Non-Christians, with little respect for the "Jesus Christ Meeting," wanted to see the foreigners' "horseless cart" in action. It is often necessary to put a canvas cover over it to keep inquisitive boys from digging holes in the enamel to see what is underneath. After the car had moved away most of them came back, unaware that they had committed any breach of etiquette, some crowding to the front again to find their seats which had been quickly occupied by those more interested in the service. Things had quieted down again when a man in the back cried, "Sa'er" (third son). Number three, a boy of ten sitting on the front seat, answered, "Aih" and rushed out after his father.

A few weeks ago this entire section was in the hands of bandits, who carried off or consumed almost everything of value. Live stock, including chickens and beasts of burden, has disappeared from many communities as a result of the ravages of these murderous vandals. Most of the temples are in ruins and bullet holes through church walls or windows tell of the seriousness of the conflict. As we traveled the hundred miles from the nearest railroad to our present location we were forced to go far out of our way to avoid certain bandit-infested areas. However we were told that these were "good" bandits. They only wanted our valuables and would carry off a missionary only occasionally to protect them from soldiers. A certain robber chief recently said to a friend of ours who was in his possession, "Rest your heart; you can count on us to protect you missionaries. We are engaged in the same great work as you. You are here to save the people and so are we."

How we praise God for the consciousness of the Spirit's abiding presence during these days. As they have been rich in new experiences, even more so have they been rich in spiritual abundance. Great blessing has come to us through mingling our efforts and prayers with the consecrated, Spirit-filled group of men and women who have so nobly advanced the work of the National Holiness Association in the face of unspeakable dangers and difficulties. Their sacrifices have been many but giving much has brought them an abundant harvest in gracious experiences. Notwithstanding manifold hindrances because of Red influences, war conditions, and outlaws, we find the work in a healthy condition; rapid in advance, powerful in influence, and successful in its endeavor to lead sinners to Christ and believers into the experience of holiness.

With respect to visible results the work is somewhat harder here than in Korea. Meeting houses have been packed, attention good, and conviction deep, but we have experienced more difficulty in getting souls to the altar. However in the last four services more than fifty have gone to the enquiry room or remained in the front of the church to pray. Many of these have glowingly testified to victory. Praise God! We are convinced that the seed is falling on good ground, and that these souls are hungry for Christ. Pray that it may bring forth an hundred fold.

Our present plans call for two more weeks in the interior with the N. H. A., after which we will be engaged in Peking, Tientsin and vicinity for at least a month with the Oriental Missionary Society, Methodists, and N. H. A. Headquarters address continues to be Box 1489, Shanghai, China.

Asbury Foreign Missionary Team.

Crouse, Erny, Kirkpatrick.

P. S.—Since beginning this letter a wonderful service was conducted in which more than fifty women and some men came to the altar. There followed a wonderful season of getting right with God.

GREEN COVE SPRINGS, FLORIDA.

My summer campaign of some 4,500 miles of travel, with about 1,200 at the altar of prayer, has ended. The drouth-stricken country from Galveston to Fall River, Kan., was bad indeed. There had been no rain all along the line. I went into the interior sixty miles from the railroad and found hundreds of families out on the plains with nothing growing on the land. People had rushed into that part of the country because, a year before, they had a great crop of wheat; this year there was nothing. It is heart-sickening to think about it. People would stand around crying that no one cared for them or their children. It is a true saying that 'man's extremity is God's opportunity.' These people want to know God. We preached the gospel to them, notwithstanding the fact that the heat was 112.

I came across at Huntsville, Texas, where the State Penitentiary is located with 2,000 prisoners; not two blocks away was a church costing $85,000, which advocated sinning religion; but you had only to look from the pulpit of the church to the gray walls of the Pen to see and know what sin is doing. Yet there are some who preach that we have to sin every day in thought, word and deed. I cried out, "Is there no balm in Gilead?" Was the angel mistaken when he told us that "His name shall be called JESUS, for he shall save his people from their sins?" If our preaching for the past 75 years had been from Romans 5:1, 2, instead of from Romans 3:12, the churches would have blossomed like the rose and there would be an altar call for sinners at least, every Sunday night, and the hymn would ring out, "Oh, mourner in Zion, how blessed art thou."

In the seven months of our tour we had eighteen revivals and turned down fourteen calls. The people are tired of speculation; they want action. We are now home for a few weeks' rest. We took Jesus' advice in St. Mark 6:31. We expect to open a campaign in Jacksonville, Fla., soon. This is the gateway to the great sunny state of Florida and the people all over the nation pass through this city. There is no holiness center here. Pray that the Lord may open the way for a work here along full salvation lines. I am delighted in the service of my Lord. Let all the people of God look up, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

Yours for the Kingdom,

A. D. Buck.

REPORT OF VICTORY FROM NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA.

At the Annual Assembly of the Louisiana District of the Church of The Nazarene held at Shreveport, La., we were assigned to the New Orleans Church of the Nazarene recently organized through the efforts of Rev. Ed. N. LeJune, assisted by Rev. G. N. Akin and wife. We arrived here shortly after the Assembly and found the same number as did St. Paul at Ephesus, twelve members, but faithful souls willing and anxious to do their best for Jesus and his cause. They gave us a very warm welcome, and we went to work searching for a place to worship and live. After a month's diligent search we secured a place admirably adapted to our needs, a neat auditorium 42x19 feet, with nice quarters and Guest or Prophet's Chamber. Some forty souls have sought the Lord since we entered into our place of worship thirty days ago. Sinners and backsliders have been saved, believers sanctified, and sick folks have been healed. To our God we give all the glory.

We have had several of God's choicest saints stop over and bless us this month. Uncle Buddie Robinson gave us a week-end, and Brother Akin, our excellent District Superintendent, has visited us twice. Rev. A. J. Valery of Memphis, Tenn., and Rev. Mrs. L. J. Coca, both gave us a good message that helped us on the way. The need is so great and the pressure of sin so heavy we need the prayers of God's holy people everywhere that we may be able in God's name to plant a great scriptural holiness work in this beautiful southern city, a city that has lived under the flags of four great nations, but mostly under the power and dominion of the Devil. A priest-ridden city, where sin and crime hold high carnival, but where thousands need our Christ and full salvation. We are anxious to get in touch with holiness people elsewhere who have friends and loved ones here who might be interested in a place where they can worship God in the beauty of holiness. Write us and them, and visit us at 1712 Baronne Street, if passing through.

REPORT OF MEETING.

Just closed a good meeting at old Asbury Chapel, a Methodist Church near Beckwell, Ind. More than fifty were at the altar. Eighteen heads of families were converted and several sanctified, while others renewed their covenant with the Lord and were blest.

Rev. Burton, the pastor, is certainly an exceptional pastor and is greatly liked by his people. Eighteen joined the church Sunday morning and received the ordinance of baptism. Our next meeting is with an M. E. pastor at Danville, Ill.

E. G. Grimes.

HYATTSTON, MARYLAND.

We just closed a union meeting at Hyattston, Md., with the M. E. and M. E. Church, South. The crowds were very good from the first and continued to grow until on the first Sunday night several were turned away. The second week of the meeting we changed to the M. E. Church for it was some larger than the other. But this church was well filled on Monday night and the crowd increased as the week went by. All available space was used by chairs or people standing, and on the closing Sunday night the church was filled almost two hours before the regular preaching time and enough were turned away to make a fair size crowd.

Rev. Barnes and Jordan were the pastors and they stood by us and cared for the singing in a splendid manner. Our first break came on the first Sunday night with some twelve at the altar. The afternoon services were well attended, the church being one-third full or more. These services were gracious times with as many as twenty-five at the altar at one service. There was not a barren night service after the first break. In all there were a hundred who gave definite testimony of being either saved, reclaimed or sanctified. Some of the older people felt that it was the greatest spiritual awakening that the town had enjoyed for many years. We thank God for these victories. The outlook for this year is bright and we rejoice to keep busy in revivals.

J. R. Parker.

TWO GOOD REVIVALS.

We have just closed a campaign of six Sundays and five weeks, three weeks in Calhoun, the county seat of McClean county, where we have a splendid people and church. The women of the church and community held five group prayer meetings in different sections of the town the first week, following this, five different groups held prayer meetings at the church twenty minutes before the worshipful services began. There were some bright, genuine conversions at the altar, the church was greatly revived and eleven have been received into church with more to follow, and one infant was baptized. The prayer meeting and Sunday school have greatly increased in attendance.

The Rumsey revival closed with more than twelve conversions at the altar and eighteen additions to the church, and two infants baptized. The last Sunday afternoon service can never be forgotten. There were seven saved at the altar. One young man was brightly saved at the altar the last night. One seeker did not get through. Some after-services are being held to get this seeker and others under conviction saved. There have been thirty-five received into the church in these two churches since conference at Bowling Green under my preaching. God has all the praise.

THE SIN OF MEDDLING.

for why shouldst thou meddle to thy hurt. But Amaziah would not hear. Therefore Jehoash went up. And Judah was put to the worse and fled every man to their tents."

It was after Josiah had put down all idolatry in his kingdom, re-captured and rebuilt the waste cities and had rest on every side, that he vainly over-estimated his ability to go against, perhaps the most powerful kingdom in the world. The heathen king tried to dissuade him saying, "What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against the house wherewith I have war. For God commanded me to make haste; forbear thee from meddling with God who is with me, that he destroy thee not." I gather from this incident that the sin of meddling is so great, so inexcusable in the sight of God, that he will permit, yea assist, a wicked nation in afflicting and punishing a more righteous nation for this offence. How terrible then, yea how unpardonable must be a spirit of self-sufficiency. No marvel that we read, "Pride goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall."

Many a man started out poor and unnoted. But by diligence and frugality became influential. How sad then to see him become overbearing and fling to the winds those qualities which built him up. Many an illiterate, but natural born preacher or leader began his career in a very humble way. But through much prayer and fasting, coupled with hard study he came to the front and was accorded a place with the mighty ones. How sad then if he becomes independent and self-important! Josiah's sad and beclouded end should teach all of us the danger of disregarding reproof, though it come from a heathen. And what is a sure preventative for meddling?

1. Mind your own business.
2. Listen to others, even sinners.
3. Seek and obtain the fiery baptism with the Holy Spirit.

If You Want Something

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

gration because immigration was pouring millions of Romanists into this country. Politicians are afraid of millionaires and Romanism, the result being that we have millions of native-born laborers without work because certain powers have manipulated Congress and overflowed this country with foreigners who can be manipulated by politicians, and thus keep down wages. This tremendous raw foreign population is largely responsible for a great percent of the crime committed, and the idle millions of American-born men who must eat their bread in the sweat of their brow, or stand in line for a hand-out.

Two years ago the President ought to have asked Congress for a bill stopping immigration of labor, and any Congressman opposing the bill ought to have been hung in effigy or otherwise. Since the vetoing of the bill to which I have referred, some immigration laws have been passed restricting the flood of foreigners flowing into this country. If Congress had slammed the door two years ago we would have a very different industrial situation, and no great labor problem.

"Well," says some reader, "what of your business is it?" Say, brother, this is preaching. The Devil is running things in this nation and we are coming to even more perilous times. Just one more short article on this subject and you may rest. But we are headed toward disaster. The universities are centers of unbelief; in many of them there is sex teaching that is destructive to purity, to virtue and modesty. The Bible is the subject of ridicule. Jesus is the target of sarcasm, and the lower lusts are rampant. Meanwhile, there is a tremendous revolt in Methodism against revivals of religion; an open attack on the Bible doctrine and experience of the new birth is on at this moment. In many church schools and pulpits the historic faith of the Church is being assailed. In many of our great city churches the regeneration of a sinner is almost unknown. Hell enlarges itself and we rush forward to the breaking up of the old political parties, and the spiritual dearth of the Church, Atheism in the schools, crime, mobs, revolution and bloodshed. There is only one remedy—a great revival of religion. I believe if we have that we shall have to begin it out of doors.

ONE OF THE GREATEST NEEDS OF THIS COUNTRY.

Well, what is it? You may not agree with me; I hardly think you will, but if you do not I am right and you are wrong. What we need is

Evangelists—

Men filled with the Holy Ghost with no desire for wealth, promotion or anything this world has in the way of honor and office. Men who do not fear the face of men; sons of thunder who will walk from place to place, if need be, sleep in barns, if they can do no better, take a hand-out at the back door if necessary. We need men who can, and will, preach, and will be heard in spite of men and devils. Yes, we need an army of God-called, blood-cleansed, Spirit-filled, mighty Evangelists.

There are Thirteen Hundred Million Babies Due to be Born in The Next Four Decades.

WHAT WILL BE THEIR COLOR?

CHAPTER III.

N the white man's World War white men insisted on colored men engaging with them in killing white men. They organized regiments, hundreds of them, of black men, red men, yellow and brown men, trained and taught them how to kill white men.

"Very well, Mr. Editor, what is your objection?"

It is this: The Devil is set to break the power and leadership of the white race. The white race wrote the Bible, Old Testament and New; the white race furnishes the apostles and missionaries of the world. The white race has built up Bible societies, missionary societies, and had the leadership in world evangelization. The white race has been a favored race, and God has used it largely in carrying forward his work of salvation in the world.

The Devil, who is the greatest deceiver of men, has for some time been marshalling his forces against the white race. The liquor traffic, the movies, the modernistic preachers, the skeptical school-teachers, the godless newspapers, are all agencies of the Devil seeking to break down, bankrupt and destroy the leadership and world domination of the white race. The old deceiver well knows that if the liquor traffic is suppressed in these United States European nations will be compelled to follow; hence, he stirs up millionaires, politicians, fashionable women, his preachers and all of his hosts to fight prohibition. It is remarkable how completely the Devil owns most of the newspapers and magazines of this country.

If the Devil can keep white men drunk, reeking with tobacco, break up the home and bring on one great white man's war, he will have things in shape for the colored races to demand a settlement of accounts at the point of the bayonet. Japan is ready; the whole of China is one vast military school. The difference in the training in the military schools in this country and in China is that in this country the cadets use blank cartridges, and when they charge bayonets they stick their bayonets in sacks of sawdust. In China they use ball cartridges and stick their bayonets in China meat. They can use that method over there and have plenty of Chinamen left to put twenty-five, thirty, or even forty millions under arms when the time comes to settle accounts.

Well, so much for that much. I now want to bring you to think something of the color of these coming thirteen millions of babies. To begin with, remember that there are in round numbers some five hundred millions of white people on the globe, and something like twice that number of colored people. Think several minutes on that phase of the subject when you consider reproductive power. Is it not quite possible from this fact alone, that we may expect that for the next half century the babies coming into the world will be two to one colored?

It must be remembered that it has become unfashionable for white women to have babies. Let it be known that a white baby is on its way to this world, in most any well civilized community it will raise a disturbance, and the party of the second part will be thoroughly abused. If you do not know this you are too ignorant of conditions to receive instruction. Right now there is being organized a tremendous opposition to the birth of white children on this globe. This antagonism to the birth of white children is meeting with great success, and is sweeping the country. It will demand legislation on the subject specifying who shall be allowed to have any children, and how many shall be permitted in families that have any.

I shall give you some interesting facts on this subject next week.

Those Three Thousand Idle Preachers.

No. III.

I am more and more interested in the three thousand idle preachers. I believe I know they can shake this nation if they will. They can consecrate, they can pray, they can get a baptism and filling with the Holy Ghost that will empty half of the churches of this nation; if they preach out of doors the people will go to hear them.

Preaching in the power of the Holy Ghost out of doors is the most attractive thing in the world. Do not forget the out of doors. John the Baptist preached out of doors, John Wesley, so did William Booth. These out-of-door preachers started something. The greatest need of our times is for some one to start something; something real, you understand, that will have divine power in it to keep it going, once it is started.

Let three thousand idle preachers quit being idle, pray fire down upon themselves, and go to preaching out-of-doors and they will break the spiritual ice gorge of this nation, and let revival rivers flow. What a wonderful opportunity these three thousand preachers have! They could almost ruin the Radio preaching business. The people would run away from a talking machine with a modernistic metal voice and rush into the streets to see a man on fire with the Holy Ghost, blazing and not consumed, you understand.

I will put these three thousand idle preachers against all the committees and programs of all the churches, if these idlers will get in earnest, get a Jacob's spell of holding on until "thou fill me with the Holy Ghost."

Getting down to bare facts, they had better get busy. God did not call them to be idle, but to win lost men to Christ. Any man who is God-called can get a baptism with the Holy Ghost that will make him a spiritual magnet that will move things. All the combined powers of earth and hell cannot keep him from preaching, winning souls, and gaining heaven in the end.

Now who is going to say something? GO TO IT!

A Word to The Herald Family.

I have now been in California thirteen weeks; seven of them have been spent in sanitariums; four weeks I put in in revival work. I got a good rest in the sanitarium at Loma Linda; went out and preached twelve days and came close to a relapse. Some good friends hurried me down to a sanitarium in Southern California where I have been for four weeks. My health is improving and I am hopeful. The Lord has been very gracious to me and given me many songs in the night.

The night-time is hard on sick people. Disease seems to like darkness. My sufferings have been far more severe in the night, and the songs that come to me in the night are those no one ever sang, and have been a great help to me.

I must confess I have preferred to live a while longer, if it be in harmony with the Lord's will. One thing that now has a deep interest to me is the camp ground at Pentecostal Park, near Glasgow, Ky., located on the old farm where I was reared. We are rebuilding the tabernacle and planning many improvements there. I long to live to see it well established and a thousand sinners converted and many Christians sanctified there. The people in that surrounding country are very dear to me.

I have cancelled all of my engagements for the present. You may join me in prayer for my health and this camp ground, if you wish.

Your brother in Christ,

H. C. MORRISON.

THEY CAME TO THEMSELVES

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

As I was glancing through The Wesleyan Methodist the other night and read a wonderfully touching incident that holds some lessons which we all might learn. Most of us are too sparing of our bouquets to the living, but wait until the forms of our loved ones are cold in death before we realize what they were worth to us, then shower the roses upon their lifeless corpse when they cannot enjoy their fragrance nor appreciate the love that prompted them.

In this story, the mother lay dying, having given up to die. She thought the family could get along without her, as they had not indicated that she was of any special value to the home. But when they found out that she was slipping away, they began to realize their loss and what a vacuum there would be in the home when Mother was no longer its center and circumference.

With the hope that those who read this incident may be more thoughtful and considerate of their loved ones while living, I am giving this beautiful story to our readers, and as you read it, may you resolve that hereafter you will scatter seeds of kindness while the loving heart can appreciate them and know that you really love them.

Beyond the Skill of Doctors.

The windows of the great house were darkened, the door bell muffled, and the pavement in front strewn with rushes, while the physician's car waited. In the hushed chamber Mrs. Allison lay still, with closed eyes. Doctor and nurse bent over her in anxious ministrations, but the expression of the wan features never altered, and, beyond a faint monosyllable elicited with difficulty in reply to a question, no words came from the pallid lips. The watchers exchanged significant glances.

"I will be back in an hour," said the doctor, glancing at his watch.

As he stepped into the hall a waiting figure came forward to meet him.

"How is she now, doctor?"

The doctor shook his head.

"Shall we go into the next room, Mr. Allison?" said he. "I will speak with freedom there."

The two men sat down facing each other, Mr. Allison grasping the arms of the chair as if to steady himself. The lines of his strong, masterful face were drawn and drops stood on his forehead.

"May I venture to ask you a delicate question, Mr. Allison?" said the physician. "Can it be that some secret grief or anxiety is preying upon your wife's mind?"

"Secret grief—anxiety? Certainly not! My dear doctor, how could you imagine such a thing?"

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Allison. It occurred to me only as the remotest possibility. The facts of the case are these: The force of Mrs. Allison's disease is broken and she is absolutely without fever, yet she shows no sign of rallying. On the contrary, she constantly grows weaker. It is impossible to arouse her. There seems to be not only no physical response to the remedies employed, but she apparently lacks even the slightest interest in anything, including her recovery. Unless this condition be speedily changed—which appears altogether unlikely—I can no longer offer any hope. The patient is evidently drifting away from us, while we stand powerless to hold her back."

Mr. Allison groaned aloud and laid his face in his hands. The physician rose and, after a few sympathetic expressions, left him alone.

Meanwhile in the sick room the nurse busied herself with conscientious care about her charge. There was no perceptible movement in the outlines of the quiet form lying upon the bed, and the skilled watcher had no suspicion that behind the shut eyelids and apathetic features, mind and spirit were still active.

"It isn't so hard to die after all," ran the slow current of the sick woman's thought. "It's easier than to live. One grows tired, somehow, after so many years. It seems sweet just to stop trying and—let go! I have accomplished so little of all I meant to do, but—the Lord understands! The children will miss me for a while—poor dears!—but sorrow isn't natural to young people. I'm not necessary to them as I was when they were little. It would have been dreadful to leave my babies, but now—it is different! Helen has her lover—Roger is a good man, and they will be going into a home of their own before long; and Dorothy—so beautiful and such a favorite—her friends must comfort her; and the boys—somehow they seem to have grown away from me a bit. I ought not to mind it. It must be so, I suppose, as boys grow into men. It will be hard for their father, but he is so driven at the office—especially since he went into politics—that he can't have time to mourn as he would have mourned years ago, when we were first married. How happy we were—so long ago—in the little house on Carleton Street, where Helen was born. Henry has been a rising man. Any woman might be proud to be his wife. Some say I've hardly kept pace with him, but I've loved him—loved him!"

The air of the room had grown heavy and the nurse set the door ajar. A sound of suppressed voices reached the ear, and she glanced anxiously toward the bed, but the sick woman showed no signs of consciousness.

"I need not close the door," she said to herself, "she hears nothing."

Once more skill and training were at fault. That which in the nurse's ear was only an indistinct murmur, to the nerve-sense, sharpened by illness, slowly separated itself into words which made their way into consciousness, awake and alert in the weak frame, as if spoken along some invisible telephone line of the spirit.

"O Helen!" Could it be Dorothy's voice so broken and sobbing? "No hope! Did the doctor say that?"

"None, unless her condition changes—those were his words father told me." The words of water in a cave.

"But she was better yesterday!" That was Bob, the handsome young collegian, who had been summoned home when his mother's illness caused apprehension.

"So it seemed; but she does not rally—she takes no notice."

"But she can't be going—to die—and leave us! She wouldn't do such a thing—mother!"

The tones of sixteen-year-old Rupert were smitten through with incredulous horror.

"I really don't understand it," answered the older sister. "She is drifting away," the doctor says. O Dorothy! O boys! O boys! she said in a low, intense voice, "we haven't any of us looked after mother as we ought. We have always been so used to having her do for us. I have been miserable selfish since—since I had Roger—I didn't mean it, but I see it all now."

"You haven't been one half so selfish as I," sobbed Dorothy. "Here I have been rushing here and there, evening after evening, and she often sitting by herself! I must have been out of my mind! As if all the parties and concerts in the world were worth so much to me as mama's little finger!"

"And I've been so careless about writing her regularly." There was a break in Bob's voice. There was always something or other going on out of study hours, and I didn't realize. It was so easy to think mother wouldn't mind; and now—why, girls, I could never go back to college at all if there weren't to be any more letters from mother!"

"I haven't kissed her good-night for ever so long," said Rupert. "I'd got a fool notion that it was babyish. I always used to think I couldn't go to bed without it. I wonder if she ever missed it. I've seen her look at me sometimes when I started upstairs. What sort of a place would this be without mother? I should want to run away—or drown myself!"

The door of the sick room opened a little wider and Mr. Allison entered noiselessly.

"Is there any change?" he said.

"Apparently none, Mr. Allison. She lies all the time like this. One hardly knows whether it be sleep or stupor."

"How long?"—the strong man, choking, left the question unfinished.

"It is hard to say," answered the nurse pitifully; "but she has lost ground within the last twenty-four hours."

The husband knelt at the foot of the bed behind a screen which had been placed to shade the sick woman's face from the light and rested his head upon the coverlet.

"My little Nellie!" he moaned, as if unconscious of any other presence in the room. "The mother of my children, spare her yet to me, O God! that I may have time to teach her how much dearer she is to me than money or lands or honors! Take her not—"

"Mr. Allison!"

It was the nurse who touched him. There was a quiver of suppressed excitement in her voice. He rose to his feet. His wife's eyes were open—the pallid features illuminated. The wasted hand moved feebly toward him across the white counterpane. He fell again on his knees and pressed the thin fingers to his lips.

"Henry—darling!"—the faint, thrilling voice seemed to come from very far away—"don't grieve—any more! I am going to get well!"

Long afterward the doctor and nurse would sometimes recall together the unexpected recovery of Mrs. Allison.

"It was no cure of mine," the doctor would say. "Medicine had nothing to do with it. She was as nearly gone as she possibly could be without actually ceasing to breathe, when she simply made up her mind to live. A marvelous case!"

Not so marvelous, perhaps, good physician! Only a righting for once of the disordered sequence of this topsy-turvy world!

If the words of love and appreciation which beat so vainly at the closed bars of the coffin lid were spoken oftener into living ears, how many other weary feet might turn again from the "valley of the shadow"!

Just to Remind You!

Have you ordered your Arnold's Sunday School Commentary for 1931? If not, do not delay, for time is passing and you should have it for the splendid lessons it gives and the comments that are so invaluable and helpful. I do not hesitate to recommend this Commentary on the Sunday School Lessons as I have used it so long that I am convinced that it has no equal in giving a concise, practical, illuminating and helpful understanding of the lessons. Its price is within reach of all, only $1.00. To use this book once, you will always know what to get when the next year comes around.

Yours, wishing to help,

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

THE WOMAN WHO WAS A JUDGE.

Mrs. Geneva Mendenhall.

In the days of the Judges in the land of Canaan, there lived in the plain between the cities of Ramah and Bethel, a very wise and brave woman, whose name was Deborah. Her home stood in the shade of a grove of palm trees and men came from far and near to tell her of their disputes and ask her advice.

Those were very sad days for the children of Israel for the Canaanites, whose slaves they were, took their crops of grain and their flocks away from them, so that the people fled from their homes and hid in the woods and hills.

But Deborah was not afraid of her enemies and she sent word to Barak, a brave young man of the tribe of Naphtali, that if he would gather the people together and lead them against the cruel king, Jabin, and his great general Sisera that the Lord would go with him and help him win the battle.

Now Barak was very young and he began to be afraid, and he said, "Do you not know that Sisera is the greatest soldier in all the world, and that he has never yet been beaten in battle? I will not lead the people to meet him at Mt. Tabor unless you will go with me." So Deborah left her home under the palm tree and went with Barak and his army to the great mountain in the north. But she scolded Barak because he had not trusted God to help him. The little army climbed to the top of the mountain and looked down on the great plain below, at the flooded river Kishon and at the many tents, chariots and horses of the great army of Sisera.

Barak called his men together and they rushed down the mountain side so suddenly that the Canaanites became frightened, running away and leaving their chariots, trampling one another and crowding each other into the swollen river.

Sisera leaped from his chariot and ran away across the plain. Toward evening he reached the tent of a woman named Heber. Heber's wife, Jael, welcomed Sisera to the tent as if he were a friend, and gave him a cool drink and covered him with a cloak when he lay down to rest. But no sooner was he asleep than she slipped back into the tent and drove a long tent pin through his head killing him as he slept.

So God delivered the children of Israel from the oppression of the Canaanites and the land had peace for many years.

1. How many women judges did the Israelites have?
2. Can you find Ramah and Bethel on a map of Canaan? Mt. Tabor?
3. Did Jael do right to deceive Sisera and then kill him?
4. What else was Deborah besides a judge and a soldier?

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have greatly enjoyed the letters which are an inspiration to me, especially those giving their Christian experiences. No doubt there are many boys and girls who get a broader vision of what it means to live for God by reading page ten. A worldly life gives pleasure only for the time being and afterwards our conscience condemns us and makes us most wretched. Aunt Bettie, please print this letter as it is my first and I have three children and each one tries to be first to read your page. I want them to see my letter in The Herald. Although not possessed with this world's goods my greatest desire is to have my children grow up to be God-fearing men and women. Have just read Bro. Morrison's account of his wonderful meeting in California and trust that he'll live to hold many more such meetings. An Interested Reader.

Toomsboro, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please allow a 21-year-old space in your valuable paper? I enjoy reading The Herald, especially those letters written by Christian boys and girls. They are an inspiration and help to me in my effort to live for Christ. I am a Missionary Baptist. We hold prayer service each Sunday evening at the school building, near my home. I am a farmer and enjoy country life. Mother, father and sister make our home. They are members of my church. I enjoy association with Christian people. John C. Bailey.

Rt. 2, Toomsboro, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Wisconsin girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years old and in the third grade. My eyes are blue and hair is brown. My birthday is May 21. Have I a twin? I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep for I would like to see my letter in print. We get The Herald and enjoy it very much. I will write to all who guess my middle name. It starts with M, ends with E, and has eight letters.

Marcella Callaway.
Warrens, Wis.

Dear Aunt Bettie. When I was a boy, some sixty years ago, I learned a little poetical prayer which I sometimes use now. If you think it suitable for page ten of The Pentecostal Herald, the children might memorize it and find it helpful in their devotions.

"Great God, wilt thou condescend,
To be my Father and my Friend;
I, a poor child and Thou so high,
The Lord of earth and air and sky.

"Art thou, my Father, and canst thou bear,
To hear my poor imperfect prayer;
Or stoop to listen to the praise,
That such a little child can raise?"

"Art thou my Father, let me be
A meek, obedient child to Thee;
And try in word and deed and thought
To serve and please Thee as I ought.

"Thou art my Father, then at last,
When all my days on earth are past;
Send down and take me in thy love,
To be a better child above. Amen."

T. L. Adams.
Alhambra, Cal.

Dear Aunt Bettie: One evening I was reading The Herald and a thought came to me. Why not I write to my own cousins? I hear that so many of them are getting nice letters. I thought that maybe I could get some too. Can I, cousins? Don't disappoint me. You write, too, Aunt Bettie, will you? I will make a sure promise to answer any letters sent to me. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I have a fair complexion, blue eyes and dark hair, but I don't call myself handsome. I am ten years old. My birthday is June 23. I had better leave with my best regards to my cousins and Aunt Bettie. Take heed! Don't let W. B. get this.

Esther White.
Argyle, Ia.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here is a Kentucky girl to join your happy band. I sure enjoy reading the letters from the boys and girls. I go to school. I like my books and teacher. I live in the country. I have about two miles to go to school. I am nine years old, four feet tall. My birthday is August 13. Who can guess my name? It begins with L and ends with A, and has four letters in it.

Martha L. Lewis.
Forest Cottage, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here is a little girl from the grand old state of Alabama. Will you let me join your happy band of boys and girls? I am five feet, six inches tall, and weigh 110 pounds, have dark brown hair, light brown eyes and medium complexion. I go to school at grand old Phillips High. I have one sister married, four brothers, two married, and two at home. I live on a farm of 195 acres. I certainly do enjoy farm life. Have I a twin? I will be seventeen March 7th. If so, please write to me. Come on, boys and girls, let your cards, letters and photos fly. I will be pleased to hear from anyone. Can any one guess my first name? It begins with M and ends with E, and has five letters in it. I will send my picture to the one who guesses it first. Do you cousins go to Sunday school? I go almost every Sunday. I sure do enjoy going. I hope Mr. W. B. is out hunting when my letter arrives, for I want to see it in print.

Pauline Cook.
Rt. 1, Bear Creek, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I do not believe I have ever seen a letter from the state where I was born. I am a "Bug Eater." Come on, cousins, write me and I will assure you that I won't be hungry enough to eat your letters. As my father was in the Civil Service, we have moved about a great deal. We have been living in the great Lone Star State for about twelve years. I am a member of the Episcopal Church. I love to attend church and Sunday school. I will get my fourth bar, six year, for attendance in May. I am a Junior in High School. I want to train for a nurse after I finish High School. I would like very much to hear from all the cousins.

Irene Stedifar.
P. O. Box 373, Brackettville, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Oklahoma girl join your happy band of girls and boys? My mother died when I was eight years old. I have two sisters and two brothers. I stayed with my aunt for a year and went to school; my aunt was sick so much that she couldn't keep me, and now I am staying with a minister by the name of Himes. They have no living children, so they took me and my little sister. My name is Lorene; my middle name starts with B and ends with E, and has eight letters in it. My sister's name is Betty. I am nine years old and in the fourth grade. Mr. Sims came to our church to hold a revival and I have been saved. I have no more to write, so good bye. With much love to all the girls and boys, and Aunt Bettie, I am Lorene Rader.

Driftwood, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Bayou La Batre member join your happy band of boys and girls? I enjoy reading page ten. I read it through and enjoy it so much. I am a member of the church. I was saved last March. A Christian life is the sweetest life in the world. I was raised in a Christian home with a dear mother and five sisters. I don't remember my father. I am forty-four years old and the mother of ten children; two have gone to be with Jesus and eight are living. I am glad so many of the cousins are Christians. I will say good bye to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

Eliza Barber.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let me join your happy band of boys and girls? My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it. I am eleven years old and in the fifth grade. I go to Sunday school and church every Sunday I can. Our minister is Rev. W. W. Morrow. I go to the M. E. Church. I have brown hair and weigh 78 pounds. My birthday is October 27. If I have a twin let me know. I will answer all letters received.

Mary Alice Willis.
Dayton, N. J.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Have you and the cousins forgotten me? I go to High School at Oakland, Md. I am a sophomore and like it fine. I have chestnut brown hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, weigh 108 pounds and am five feet, four inches tall. Juanita Howell, I guess your middle name to be Fanny. Write to me and tell me if I am right. Mary Kennedy, I guess your middle name to be Bertha. Let me know if I guessed right. Katherine Taylor, I guess your first name to be Mary. If I am right don't forget to write me a long letter. My first name starts with M and has four letters in it. Anyone who guesses it I will write to them, also send a snapshot of myself. My father takes The Herald and I certainly enjoy reading it. It is a wonderful paper. Lois Pickrel, I guess your middle name to be Irene. If I am right don't forget

BYRUM.

Clarence Walter Byrum, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Byrum, died November 19, 1930. He was thirteen years of age and loved by all who knew him. His funeral was preached by Rev. J. W. Cooley, assisted by Rev. R. M. Bell.

Oh, dear Walter, thou hast left us
And gone on across life's way,
To wait for friends and loved ones
Till the Resurrection Day.

Our hearts are sad and lonely,
For all did love you so;
God called you from us,
Though not our will that you did go.

But we know that God has called you
To that home in heaven above,
Where no sorrow there can enter,
For he made it all of love.

In that home we hope to meet you,
Never then to part again,
For in heaven there'll be no sorrow,
Naught that gives us any pain.

Lucy A. Harris.
Hickory Grove, S. C.

GARRISON.

One by one our friends and loved ones are gathering home. Sunset after sunset fades in the glowing west. Star after star goes down. The pendulum of life pauses one stroke and all is over. It is God's great plan from the dawn of creation. How dare we in our littleness question the wisdom thereof.

Language fails and my pen falters when I undertake to commemorate the noble life of Grandma Garrison. She was born March 8th, 1838 in Henry county, Ga. She moved to Carroll county when eleven years of age. Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Gray.

On the 5th of November, 1857, she was married to Mr. William H. Garrison. Five boys and two girls were born to them. The boys were James, Zachins, Jesse, Walker and one who died in infancy. James and Zachins died some years ago, Walker went to the tomb in 1928. The girls are Mrs. Mattie Kinney of New England, and Mrs. Mollie Allen of Temple.

In my early girlhood days our paths met and to me, Grandma Garrison's noble life has been a radiant star of the first magnitude in all the days that have followed. In my sorrow she was a sweet comforter. In my perplexities, she was an able counsellor. In my struggles she was an encouragement. She was my dear friend always. I never was permitted to spend an hour in her presence without feeling that my life was made richer and better because of it. God never made but one Grandma Garrison. She spent her days strewing pearls of truth and virtue. Her vision of God and of life and eternity were clear. Her ideals were pure and high. Being human she must have had some faults, but in all the years I never found them. I do know that the memory of her kind words and noble deeds permeates the heart of all who knew her as a sweet fragrance from the blooming flowers.

By nature she was plain, thoughtful, sincere and faithful. A woman of unusual common sense judgment. She possessed a depth of thought even in very old age, that was remarkable. The threads of honesty, truth and courage seemed to be woven into her very nature. At an early age she sought and found her God and then keyed her life to his purpose and plan. She made him first in her every word and act. A deep reverence and an unquestionable faith in him, seemed to envelop her whole life.

She lived to a ripe old age and on July 8, 1930, she fell asleep. Her dear old body was tenderly planted in the beautiful cemetery at Concord Church where she has been a faithful member for many years. Her grave to me marks the pillar of a living faith. Grandma Garrison, I loved you in life. I loved you in death and so long as my life lasts I shall sweetly cherish your dear memory.

A Friend.

But the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. Prov. 4:18.

GREETINGS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

I enjoy reading The Pentecostal Herald. The editorials are surely gems of thought. You hew to the line and let the chips fall where they will. The situation demands it. This is a crucial time. There is a wall fast closing in around us and we must work while the day lasts, for the night soon cometh. Away with these modernistic preachers. They are wolves in sheep's clothing, blighting millions of souls with their false doctrine. Many that had faith in God are now groping their way in darkness and drifting with the tide of unbelievers. I can hear a voice saying, "How oft would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her brood under her wing, but ye would not." The harvest is past, the summer ended and ye are not saved. The world seems to be in a turmoil. The unemployment situation is alarming. What about Prohibition? Since the November election, our great forces on the dry side seem full of anxiety and, well they may be. All these years the wets have been preparing for an attack. They say they will pay out ten million dollars to fight the dries. If all the ministers and members of our Christian churches, the Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U., and all the forces of Temperance combine in an effort to save our land from the curse that threatens it, the great Commander and Judge of all the earth will lead the way. The papers are full of wet propaganda. They remind us of the small boy and his little sister who were proudly walking down the street, the boy tooting a horn and his sister walking behind him beating a drum for all she was worth. The boy said to a passer-by, "We're the 'vance guard of the army." "Where is the army?" the passerby asked. "There aint none," said the boy, "The band's the most 'portant part."

Let us inscribe upon our banners, "Eternal vigilance is the price of Prohibition."

See the host of rum advancing,
Satan leads the way,
Like a roaring lion tramping
To devour his prey.

Children of the Heavenly King,
Will you let this monster in?
Will you sit at east in Zion,
Hear the wives and children crying?

For God's sake, quickly strike the blow
That shall lay this demon low,
Are we ready? Come, Christians,
Come,

As good soldiers fight till the battle's won.

Florilla Pinney.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. V.: "I sincerely desire to be remembered in prayer."

Mrs. E. E. Q.: "Please to pray for my two sons, that they may be saved."

A mother asks that you remember her two sons in prayer, and for an unsaved neighbor.

A reader asks that we pray for the salvation of relatives in England and that she may get in touch with them.

M. F.: "Please to pray the Lord to heal my daughter and myself, and that we may live closer to him."

Pray for a sister who is dangerously ill, that she may be healed and filled with the Holy Spirit; also for a revival to come to her town.

Pray for the salvation of a neighbor who is sick and not saved.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VI.—February 8, 1931.

Subject.—Jesus the World's Teacher. Luke 6:27-42.

Golden Text.—As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise. Luke 6:31.

Time.—Summer of A. D. 28.

Place.—Region west of the Jordan. Introduction.—“Never man spake like this man.” These were the words of certain officers sent by the Pharisees to arrest Jesus, but returned without him. They could not gainsay his teachings. We exhaust our little brains trying to reason out things, and then we often miss the truth; but Jesus did not have to waste time reasoning, but spoke the full truth intuitively. Our mistakes are many; but he made none at all. He came from the carpenter shop in despised Nazareth, and taught men the highest standard of morals they have ever known. It has been nearly two thousand years since he taught in Palestine, but during the three and a half years of his earthly ministry he spoke the last word in morals; nor has any teacher of ethics been sufficiently wise to improve upon what he said. To learn whether a teaching is right or wrong, men must compare it with his standard.

The teaching of Jesus is still far ahead of the standards set up by the most civilized nations. Take the subject of marriage. He permits divorce on no ground, save adultery; and beyond all question, he does not allow parties divorced for any other reason to be married to other parties. According to his teaching such persons are guilty of adultery; and by entering into such marriages they seal their everlasting damnation, for no adulterer can enter into the kingdom of God. Civil governments grant divorces for various reasons, and then permit the divorced parties to be remarried to whomsoever they wish; but in so doing they run counter to the moral teachings of the Master Teacher, and must in the end answer for their crime.

The religion of the Jews was largely to them a matter of obeying laws. There was in it little of love, joy and peace; but under the teachings of Jesus these blessed graces bloomed and fruited in abundance. He compressed the Decalogue into two commandments of love: (1) “Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind”; (2) “Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.” It was a bold stroke when he said: “On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.” What a shock his words must have been to Jewish pride when he said: “Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.” When he said: “Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you,” he was so far ahead of the best teachings of men that they have not yet come anywhere in the neighborhood of living up to it.

Men do not like his teachings concerning wealth. Take one example. The Jews thought there was nothing better than great riches, and most men are yet thinking that way; but he said: “Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth . . . but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven . . . for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.” But listen to his reason for this teaching: “No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other: Ye cannot serve God and mammon.” Men will not believe the sayings of Jesus on this subject. They will risk damnation before they will do it. Here are some samples: “How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God.” “It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.” “Who-soever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple.” The only solution we can find to the problem lies in the fact that we are all God's stewards, and that not one of us can claim to own one cent. We must use all that is entrusted to us for the glory of our Master. St. Paul made a clear interpretation of the matter when he said: “Whether ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.” If one can live on any other basis, and go to heaven at last, I am sure I cannot find it in the Bible. I believe this to be the teaching of Jesus Christ concerning salvation.

One more word about this matchless Teacher. Mere men struggle and strain to live up to his teachings, but fail utterly until he supplies sufficient grace and strength through the Eternal Spirit; but he lived all that he taught, and did it with perfect ease. His enemies were ever looking for an opportunity to condemn him; but when he asked: “Which of you convinceth me of sin,” not one of them could find a thing against him. His teaching, by both precept and example, was absolutely perfect. Our best teaching is shoddy when compared with his.

Comments on the Lesson.

27. Love your enemies.—Salvation from sin is a prerequisite to obedience to that command. Do good to them which hate you.—An unsaved soul might do that in outward form, but not in his heart.

28. Bless them that curse you.—The world says curse him in return. Pray for them which despitefully use you.—I fear this is even beyond the living of many who profess to be Christians; for it calls for a clean heart. Can you do it with a good conscience? If not, find a mourner's bench.

29. Offer also the other.—The carnal mind has found much consolation in the fact that when Jesus was being tried for his life, and one of the officers struck him with the palm of his hand, the Master said: “If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil; but if well, why smitest thou me?” We miss the truth of his teaching. He is telling us not to avenge ourselves, but to leave that in the hands of God. Christians have to suffer many things in silence. If one is persecuted for Christ's sake, let him bear it with joy.

30. Give to every one that asketh of thee.—I do not believe that this means that one is to throw away on every piece of human trash that comes begging, the things that God has committed to his trust. “If one will not work, neither shall he eat.” We are to be faithful stewards of our Master's goods.

31. This is our Golden Text, and the Golden Rule of Christianity. Heathenism has its “golden rule”; but it is negative, and calls for no doing at all. The Christian Golden Rule is impossible for ungodly men. It is clear above the world. One had as well try to play a violin with all the strings broken, and keep in harmony with a well tuned piano, as for a wicked man to try to live by the Christian Golden Rule. His heart will not respond.

The next five verses are a commentary on what the Lord has just been saying. It is just at this point that all such cults as New Thought, Eddyism, and Modernism break down. They make Christ an example to be imitated, but do not make provision for the regeneration of the soul. But fastening fine apples onto a thorn bush will not convert it into an apple tree. Self-righteous men are loath to believe the Master's words to Nicodemus; “Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again;” and those other words seem to be galling: “That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.” There is no more impossible task than trying to live one's self into Christianity.

37. Judge not.—This passage has suffered much at the hands of would-be teachers. It was my misfortune some years ago to attend the funeral of a confirmed drunkard who had died in delirium tremens. Shortly after we had left the grave-side a gentleman remarked: “That poor fellow has gone to hell.” Immediately another man rebuked him sharply by quoting the two words at the beginning of this paragraph. Whereupon I told the second brother that he was misusing Scripture, and that no drunkard could inherit the kingdom of heaven. One is not judging men when he makes statements that are known to be true; but he is judging when he says unkind things concerning matters about which he knows nothing, especially when his motive is to injure his neighbor. A Christian must not be unkind in his remarks; but when it is necessary, he must tell the whole truth. It is sometimes sinful to keep quiet. Unkind speeches are like the saying: “Chickens will come home to roost.”

39. Can the blind lead the blind?—Can a spiritually blind teacher lead spiritually blind souls? Sometime ago this preacher met a man who was in great spiritual trouble. In reading his Bible he said that he saw clearly, as he then thought, that men must be wholly sanctified in order to go to heaven. He was under deep conviction about the matter, and went to his pastor for help. The pastor laughed at him, and told him that it was all foolishness, and that it was based on a fanatical misinterpretation of the Bible. The poor fellow went away grieved, but as hungry as ever. For some years he wandered in darkness until he landed in a holiness camp meeting, and discovered that his pastor was wrong and his Bible right. He got the blessing to his great satisfaction. No one can lead others in spiritual things any further than he himself has gone.

40. The disciple is not above his Master.—It is enough for us to be as our Lord. If he was hated, so must we be. If he was holy, so must we be.

41 and 42.—The mote and the beam.—That needs little comment. We are so prone to do that very thing, that one is almost afraid to say anything to another about his faults, lest he condemn himself for a bigger fault. This tree has produced many sprouts. How about these: “Sweep before your own door first;” “Physician, heal thyself?” One might cite a dozen of such; but these are sufficient.

NOTICES.

Rev. John Greenfield, of Warsaw, Ind., will mail a free copy of his book, "Power from on High" to every foreign missionary who will apply for same. He cannot afford to give a free copy to all missionaries, but is willing to give to those who may apply, as such will appreciate the gift.

Rev. and Prof. C. C. Crammond who have been evangelizing in the south expect to return north from Florida the first of March. Their services may be had by any one desiring them while on their trip north. Address them for the present, 113 W. Cayuga St., Tampa, Fla., as they will be there for some time yet. Their home address is 815 Allegan St., Lansing, Mich.

God manifested himself in a powerful way throughout special services which Guy Green, lay evangelist of Kansas City, Mo., led for the Hutchinson Memorial Presbyterian Church of New Albany, Ind., from Dec. 28 to Jan. 11. At one service 27 young people came forward in confession of Christ. Others came from time to time during the series. Mr. Green taught a union Bible class of 60 on his first Sunday and one of 200 on his last Sunday.

The Georgia District, Church of the Nazarene, is anxious to complete arrangements for tent meetings in the following cities: Albany, Ga., Athens, Ga., Augusta, Ga., LaGrange, Ga., Rome, Ga., Valdosta, Ga., Anderson, S. C., Charleston, S. C., Columbia, S. C., Florence, S. C., Greenville, S. C., Spartanburg, S. C., Sumpter, S. C., and Rock Hill, S. C. We would be glad to get in touch with any one in either of those places, who might be interested in revivals, such as the Church of the Nazarene usually puts on, accompanied with clear-cut preaching on Christian Perfection, as preached by Mr. Wesley, resulting in pungent conviction, definite seeking and victorious professions, unmingled with fanaticism.

Oscar Hudson, Dist. Supt.

125 Moreland Ave., S. E., Atlanta, Ga.

Our readers will be glad to hear of the success of Dr. Walt Holcomb, pastor Trinity Methodist Church, Miami, Fla., as he is well known over the Church for his successful work as one of the General Evangelists. The Florida Christian Advocate says:

"One of the most encouraging reports made to the Annual Conference came from Trinity Church where Walt Holcomb is pastor. We have been told privately that the largest asset of that Church cannot be put into statistical terms. A large part of the congregation is engaged in a covenant of prayer and the spiritual state is excellent and growing. Dr. Holcomb has long been one of Methodism's leading evangelists and it is not surprising that he is making a success of the evangelistic side of his work as well as impressing the people with his pulpit work."

PAULO, BRAZIL.

It was three months yesterday that I reached Campinas and up to date 60 persons have claimed to accept Christ and have offered themselves for church membership, here in the city. At one of the charges on the District, where I spent a Sunday while on my fourth quarterly round, 14 other persons did likewise. Yes, the Lord has been with us. That is the only way to explain what is taking place. I was never more happy to be in his service than I am right now.

The tempter has been busy and in many ways has sought to hinder the work, but so far victories for the cause of righteousness have been the final outcome. For instance, two Sundays ago my Sunday school superintendent in the absence of a teacher, was teaching the men's class. He became offended at some remark made by a member of the class who is rather abrupt in his manner. One word brought on another and all of a sudden he rushed into the office, his eyes flashing fire and asked me to go and take charge of the class, that he was going home and would never put his foot in the church again, adding that he should have knocked the man down. As he started to leave I stepped between him and the door, pushed it to and stood against it, although he was big enough to have thrown me aside and walked out, saying to him firmly that we must pray over the matter before he left, that he was perhaps fighting the battle of his life and could not afford to go down in defeat, that by losing his temper he was destroying all the good he had endeavored to do during the two years that he has endeavored to be a Christian, that that quarrel between him and the other brother was another of Satan's efforts to destroy the revival that has been in progress ever since I reached here. For awhile he stubbornly refused to get down on his knees with me, but I finally got him down and with one arm about him I prayed for him. As we arose I put my arms around him and said: "I will go and take charge of the class for the remainder of the hour, if you wish, but you must come with me and tell the class you are ashamed of your weakness and sin which was the result of your trusting yourself instead of trusting God. Ask the class to pray for you that God may baptize you with the Holy Spirit and so strengthen you that you may never again fall into sin." He went with me and he made a glorious confession. At the close of the school he called on the very brother who had made him angry to lead in the closing prayer. Then, at the mid-week prayer meeting, he surprised me by coming up before about fifty persons relating the whole story, telling them he became very angry at me for shutting him in the office and making him get down on his knees and pray, but that while I prayed for him the Holy Spirit came upon him and wonderfully changed him. His eye now has a sparkle I never saw in it before and he is taking a new and lively interest in all the work of the church.

This is one of a number of victories. I haven't time to write you about the others this time. Some have come to my home to ask me to pray for them, others have asked me to go to their homes, while others have asked me at the close of a service to go with them into some room at the church and pray for them. Hungry-hearted people are finding that "prayer changes things."

Pray that God may continue to lead and bless us.

Your co-worker,

Walter G. Borchers.

Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee. Isaiah 26:3.

ARNOLDS' COMMENTARY

A very practical aid for the busy teacher. It is rich in suggestions and sets forth the lesson in a very pleasing manner. We consider this the most spiritual exposition of the Sunday school lesson.

The hints to teachers, illustrations, blackboard exercises, questions, maps, etc., make this popular help a good all-round commentary at a popular price $1.00.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1931

By Amos R. Wells. Fifty-seventh Annual Volume.

To the many who are familiar with "PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES," it would be sufficient to say that the standard of excellence which has characterized the work for more than half a century is fully maintained in the new volume.

The analysis and treatment of the lessons are clear and inspiring, carrying quotations from great Bible teachers. It is for teachers of all grades and contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help so compiled and tabulated that it can be effectively used. It has maps, pictures, and charts alone worth the price of the book.

This book is invaluable for the study of the Uniform Lessons. Price $2.00.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide recognizes no superior. If you have never used this wonderful commentary, try it for 1931.

No teacher will be unprepared who uses this extraordinary commentary. The treatment of the lesson never becomes dull or uninteresting. The topics are always fresh and appealing.

Many thousands of up-to-date teachers buy two or more of the best commentaries and find it pays. Whatever you do, don't leave out Tarbell's this year. Price $2.00.

The Gist of the Lesson

An excellent commentary by R. A. Torrey. It is a concise, boiled-down commentary for the busy teacher. It takes the text of the lesson, each verse separately, and illuminates it. It gives the teacher many good ideas. Price 35c.

A CRIME AGAINST GOD AND HUMANITY.

By The Editor.

OW hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God."—Jesus.

The millionaires of New York City have recently dedicated a great cathedral church in that city that cost four millions of dollars; enough money to have dotted China over with ten thousand beautiful chapels with Sunday school accommodations.

This church was dedicated a short time ago. I don't know what the text was from which the dedicatory sermon was preached, but I do know that it was not, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."

It would take a Jeremiah or a John the Baptist to take that text for such an occasion. Such men are few and far between in the world today. But Jesus used those words, and he never changes; the truths he uttered are for all time. Mr. Fosdick and his millionaires may think over that text.

If this magnificent edifice, with the immense expense it will require to carry it on, had been built for the defense of Bible truth, and to become a powerful evangelical gospel center for the salvation of lost souls, it would be different; but it is, and will be, a center for the dissemination of false doctrine and the destruction of Christian faith.

Carved on the front of this gorgeous temple are the figures of Einstein, Emerson, Darwin, Confucius, Buddha and—Jesus. For some reason, they left Darrow out. Think of it! Not one of these men were believers in our Lord. Emerson nor Einstein had no more evangelical faith in Jesus than Harry Fosdick. Very well! Go on, ye blind leaders of the blind. The ditch is just ahead—a deep ditch—what a surprise!

Jesus tells us that, if possible, the very elect will be deceived. The preaching of falsehood in a four-million dollar church does not confer upon the falsehood any saving power. Had Fosdick been sitting with the rulers of the Jews who tried Jesus, he would have agreed with them that Jesus was not the Son of God. Fosdick is worse than those Jews who denied the Godhead of Jesus. The centuries have witnessed to the Deity of our Lord, and yet he denies his Godhead and the miracles which Christ performed.

The cup of iniquity is filling, and the cup of wrath will be poured out. There is a neglected scripture which reads like this: "The rich man also died. And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments." The procession moves along. THE RICH MUST ALSO DIE. They go somewhere. The imaginary, man-made Christ of Fosdick cannot save a sinner's soul.

WHAT ABOUT THIS!

Isaiah saw the airplane many centuries before it really existed. In chapter 31, verse 5, we read: "As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver it; and passing over he will preserve it." It will be remembered when the British army was fighting the Turks, British airplanes were circling over and about Jerusalem, and the city was captured without firing a shot. God did "preserve it." How fortunate! What a calamity it would have been if the sacred city had been bombarded, burned and ruined. God did not intend it should be so, and he notified Isaiah of the fact more than two thousand years ago.

Isaiah catches another glimpse of the airplane in the 60th chapter and 8th verse: "Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as doves to their windows?" He saw the planes circling like doves. He did not understand them. Notice he does not say "What are these?" but "Who are these?" Isaiah was divinely inspired and looked far into the future.

There are Thirteen Hundred Million Babies Due to be Born in The Next Four Decades.

WHAT WILL BE THEIR COLOR?

CHAPTER IV.

SOME statistician, apparently on good authority, tells us that in Europe there are eighteen millions more white women than men. So far as they are concerned, the white race is practically extinct. The men who should have been their husbands have been killed in battle, or have wandered about to the colored end of their earth, and mingled their blood with colored people. That means some slump in white babies.

Just now we are thinking of the rampage on "birth control." Not long since I was seated at the dinner table with a prominent newspaper man who had recently made an extended trip in Russia. He was a man of culture, much travel and wide experience. In the course of the conversation it developed that he was enthusiastic on the subject of birth control. On inquiry, I found that, first, the unfit should not be permitted to produce children; second, the fit should be limited to small families. A fine theory for white people, mark you!

I said, "Well, Sir, I am glad your theory was not in practice to apply to poor Tom Lincoln and Nancy Hanks; it would have ruled out Abe Lincoln—some loss to the world! I am glad it did not apply to Samuel and Susannah Wesley, for if it had, neither John nor Charles Wesley would have been born. Some loss, again!" The great man changed the subject. I could have run in Benjamin Franklin on him.

I see that Dr. Fosdick is coming out strong on "birth control." I suspect if Fosdick and a bunch of old maids, and the like of them, had been a committee of control on who should be born into the world the past two hundred years, the most useful men and women of that period would have never been born.

Stop for a couple of minutes! If not in a hurry, you might take five minutes, to think of the great men who have been born of uneducated, common-looking parents in log cabins and stone huts, who have counted large in the leadership of world progress.

It is quite probable that this noisy crowd that is going to save the world by "birth control" has never given a thought to the fact that they are planning to so reduce the white race that the colored race will easily come into the rulership of the globe. Such a result is quite possible.

You have heard of "burning the candle at both ends." What about the white race candle? First, the white race keeps up wars on each other organizing the colored races to help them kill off the white race; second, a lot of cranks go to work to stop white people from reproducing the species. Laugh, if you will, but your laughter does not prove your intelligence nor change the seriousness of the facts under consideration.

Much has been written and said about the fearful slump in membership in the two great branches of Methodism in this country. Do you know that birth control has had much to do with that decrease in membership? Some time ago I was assisting a Methodist pastor in a revival meeting in a small city of ten thousand population. The pastor said to me, "I have fifteen married couples in my church who have been married from two to fifteen years, without a single child." Think of the effect on the Sabbath school and the future membership of this congregation. He added that these childless people were those among his members who were best prepared to raise and educate families. In those homes there should have been at least forty young Methodists who, within fifty years, would have made a large congregation. But these fifteen selfish couples had cut off the stream of human life. Who can estimate the splendid life that might have flowed from these fifteen homes within a century, literally, thousands of intelligent, godly people, some of them, perhaps, most useful men and women of their generation.

These fifteen couples represent thousands of others who are living the same selfish lives. It should be understood that children should not come into a home too rapidly; but as a rule, you will find the mothers of large families more healthy, and better women every way, than the women who refuse to bear and raise children.

We have some interesting revelations for next week's issue of THE HERALD.

NOTES OF TRAVEL AND SALVATION.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

The real God-called, God-sent missionary is an Adventurer; some things about him or her that reminds us of those lines of Joaquin Miller:

"Behind him lay the gray Azores,
Behind the Gates of Hercules;
Before him not the ghosts of shores,
Before him only shoreless seas."

Then there comes "Land ahead"—the land of his dreams and vision and prayers appears:

"Then pale and worn, he kept his deck,
And peered through darkness. Ah, that night

Of all dark nights! And then a speck—
A light! A light! A light!

It grew, a starlit flag unfurled!

It grew to be Time's burst of dawn.
He gained a world, he gave that world
Its grandest lesson, "On and On!"

But our ideal missionary must be more than an adventurer; he must be born of God and baptized with his Spirit. Bishop Thoburn has truly said: "Only a man whose mind is pervaded by the immediate personal presence of the Holy Spirit can reveal Christ to those seeking him." Too much of our missionary work has programs so full of educational, social, administrative work that there is no margin left for the Holy Ghost and no looking for the supernatural.

Years ago a missionary on the Congo determined that something more emphatic ought to be done to make the people good, so he proceeded to preach the Ten Commandments with unusual emphasis; but he was disappointed with the results. After two years he saw no improvement in his people. He then began to study the Scriptures anew and as he read his New Testament he asked, "If in the days of the Acts of the Apostles heathen turned from idols to serve the living God, why should not these heathen in Banza Manteke?" It came on him then that he was not sent to the heathen to preach the Law, but to preach the Gospel. Then he put new emphasis upon the gospel message. He noticed one thing more—that the disciples were bidden to wait until they were endued with power from on high.

The Holy Spirit began to work marvelously and then, after seven years of work, he saw his first convert who said, "I do believe Jesus has taken my sins away. I do believe he has saved me." Others found the Lord and the whole community was stirred. All the people around Banza Manteke had abandoned their heathenism; more than a thousand names were enrolled. Those who had been thieves, liars, etc., became honest, truthful, industrious, and clean. Their idols they brought out and burned at the first baptismal services. The gospel of the grace of God acts in heathen lands exactly as it does elsewhere, convicting, saving, sanctifying.

Many modern missionaries seem to have left the Holy Spirit out of their program and plans. They no longer look for the miracle of conversion. It is good when the awakening comes to some of them, as it did to Richards, of the Congo, and they change their view point and their method of work; they then witness the power of the Holy Ghost.

At Calcutta, in 1902, two lady missionaries of the Khassia Hills Mission listened to an address on prayer by the late Dr. Torrey. They were so moved by it that when they went back to their people their one theme was prayer. The result was that, by the spring of 1905, the Khassians were praying everywhere. Revival, of course, was inevitable. Within a few months, over eight thousand additions were made to the Church in that one section of India.

The work of the Spirit in the mission fields produces marvels of grace. In Chiquimula as we sat around the supper table last evening, Miss R. Esther Smith was led to speak of some of the miracles of grace she had witnessed in the twenty-five years she has worked in the Guatemala field; other missionaries took up the story and told of wonderful transformations. One of their chief Guatemalan evangelists was one time a drunkard, adulterer, adventurer, wicked in the extreme. Grace found him, the blood cleansed him; he started to tell the story to others; prayer meetings were held, missions started, people got converted, and it was our privilege the first night we landed from the steamer to preach in a mission church where several hundred people sometimes attend which was the outgrowth of this man's salvation, his testimony and consecration. Another very wicked man was converted and sanctified through this Guatemala work, and from his redemption and testimony twenty-two preaching stations have arisen.

Now one thing I am constantly insisting on that "there is no difference" to the Holy Spirit, whether at home or abroad. The same scenes of salvation may be witnessed over here in the dark lands of Central America when the gospel is preached as are witnessed in revivals in the home land. For instance, get this glimpse from a revival meeting in Guatemala:

A brief business meeting of that Quarter was sandwiched in later and then we entered the indescribable night meeting that closed before 1 A. M. only because missionaries closed it. It was a farewell service with several exhortations as to how to keep the blessing received, but in the midst the invitation to sinners was given. A few had accepted, two expressed their desire to return to God when Emilio Salgado began singing a precious invitation hymn. Before he had finished it a dear woman jumped to her feet and extending her hand in supplication toward her grown son who was on the other side of the room, she pleaded, "Son, give your heart to God, and let us all go to heaven together." Moved by the same Spirit he accepted, then got to the altar where later he found pardon. Something broke all over the audience then and sinners and back-sliders came tumbling to the altar. Our mouths were filled with holy laughter as we watched and listened. There was divine order in it all though some were praying, some weeping, some laughing, some inviting individuals, some seeking pardon of different ones in the audience. Nothing but a moving camera could have caught it all, but how glorious it was! Three grown sons of one believer were either saved or reclaimed. Joy overflowed in the hearts of the saints.

Many there are in missionary work who refuse to believe the natives, with all their sin and wickedness, can be saved through and through and sanctified, and yet here in Chiquimula at the commencement meetings I am meeting with real saints of God who were brought up in the darkness of Romish heathenism; some of them were vile adulterers, drunkards soaked in sin and vice and yet, when the truth as it is in Jesus was preached to them, their hearts opened, the Spirit worked; they are convicted, converted and entirely sanctified and then become zealous witnesses of sanctifying power and take delight in spreading the good news.

"Behold what wondrous grace
The Father has bestowed
On sinners of a mortal race,
To call them sons of God.

"Believing we rejoice,
To see the curse removed,
We bless the Lamb with cheerful voice
And sing his bleeding love."

The marvels of the gospel and the growth of the church in the midst of heathenism is wonderful. Think of India; in the Punjab in 1857, a certain church was started with four members; 1878, 211 members; 1908, 14,202 members; 1918, 32,557; 1928, 43,895. The first four members in 1857 were a high caste Hindu, one Moslem, two outcasts. What a beginning! Thank God for the Mass Movement which began in the days of Praying Hyde. It brought thousands into the fold.

Over here in Guatemala the Friends of California started their mission in 1902, with two women missionaries—Miss R. Esther Smith being one of them—no church, no native workers, no houses or lands, no school; today there are 14 missionaries not including the Tegucigalpa Mission with its workers and out-stations. Now there are about 2500 believers, now there are 75 native workers, now there are 50 evangelistic centers, now there are 60 chapels, with a beautiful, large tabernacle in Chiquimula; now there are 16 pieces of property, now there are three schools, Bible, Boys' and Girls', having enrolled 814 students, and graduates who return to teach. Now there are over 500 Christian families, now there are Guatemala, Honduras and border of El Salvador missions. The native church maintains a mission station in Bolivia, S. A.

These missionaries say of their field: "It has been interesting to remind ourselves of the tremendous geographical expanse of the field. Were we obliged to travel by mule-back over the whole, the trip going from one extreme to the other by the most direct route would mean sixteen consecutive days of travel in good weather, or probably some twenty-five days were the roads wet and muddy. The first five days of the trip are reduced to one by the narrow gauge railroad. Over this great stretch of territory are scattered some 300,000 souls for whom your fifteen missionaries are directly responsible. We have believers in 201 different centers throughout the length and breadth of this farflung battle line. We greatly rejoice in reviewing what God hath wrought and render unto him the praise and gratitude of our hearts for his enablings and workings in our midst."

REVIVAL NOTES.

We had a precious revival meeting in connection with Commencement days of the school of the Friends Mission at Chiquimula, Guatemala. Twice a day the tabernacle was well filled with students and people. Evangelists, missionaries and preachers came in for this annual gathering. It was almost like a home holiness convention or camp meeting, except that the audiences are made up of Spanish-speaking people, most of whom were brought up in the darkness and superstition of Rome. But we have good interpreters. The difficulty of interpretation is not nearly so great as in China or India, where there are so many dialects. Here there is just the Spanish, and this is not nearly so difficult to acquire as the Oriental languages. Some of the missionaries here have a wonderful command of the Spanish language and are fine interpreters.

At every service the tides of salvation rolled in, and it was not an unusual thing to see the altar full from end to end of young people and older folks, seeking conversion, reclamation and sanctification. They seek in the old-fashioned way by confessing and consecrating and praying through.

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

By Rev. A. D. Shockley.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE PRODIGAL GIRL RETURNS

Y a merciful arrangement of Providence, the mother seemed to know that whatever sin the daughter might have been guilty of had been atoned for by the Loving One, and that her child was also his. The mind which had been so long darkened and feeble seemed now to become clear and strong. While she never referred to the cause of that mental darkness, it could not be doubted that she remembered everything. Indeed her friends marvelled that she seemed to know every detail of Jessie's experience without being told. Some superstitious souls insisted that the mother's soul went with her erring daughter in all her wanderings, and so knew the events as they occurred. While not ready to adopt such a theory, we are free to confess that it seemed a miracle that the enfeebled mind should derive strength from meeting the one whose great sin had unsettled the mind and caused reason to totter from its throne.

Mrs. Upright had rapidly regained her bodily health, and had no further lapses into insanity after the awakening recorded in the previous chapters. She had noticed the absence of Ralph and Jessie and had inquired for them. By the advice of the physician the deacon had told her that Jessie had been very sick in San Francisco, and that Ralph had gone to help take care of her and bring her home, as soon as she was able to travel. Every day thereafter she was kept informed of the progress of her sickness and convalescence.

With the news that Jessie had so far recovered as to think of starting home in a few days, the Upright family were thrown into a state of feverish excitement and expectancy. Especially when Jessie wrote telling of her new-found joy and of her determination to give herself to the work of saving the lost ones, were tears of thanksgiving mingled with earnest prayer that God would make her the instrument of great good wherever her work might lead her.

The day at last dawned, bright and beautiful, on which Jessie was to arrive in Glenview. The whistle of the 10:20 train, upon which our young friends were to arrive, was like heavenly music to the waiting ones in the Upright home. No visitors were expected, or idly curious spectators of the tender scene which was to take place. Only God, the angels, and the reunited family could appreciate the blessing of this hour.

It was proper that Jessie should first see her mother alone, and with this understanding the other members of the family purposely left the house when the servant announced the arrival of the carriage, which had been sent to the station to meet them. No human ear heard the cry of penitence, which the sight of her mother's wan face wrung from Jessie, nor the tender words of forgiveness and mother love which answered that cry.

Jessie had time to weep out her sorrow for her sin, and her purpose to devote herself to earnest effort to redeem herself so far as mortal can, by helping others out of the snare of Satan.

From the hour in which the grief-stricken mother held her repentant daughter in her arms and pressed the kiss of forgiveness upon that daughter's lips and brow, a new life seemed to awaken in her. While the marks of sorrow and suffering were indelibly impressed upon her countenance, it was glorified by a holy peace, that came through a clinging trust in a Father's love and pity.

Bodily health came more quickly than her friends had dared to hope. It was a joyous day to the family when the re-united Upright family once more occupied the family pew in Euclid Avenue Church. But as we are writing a history rather than unfolding romance, we are bound to say that no event in the history of Euclid Avenue Church, since its organization, had so stirred the congregation and caused such division among the membership as did the home-coming of Jessie and the exaggerated stories which somehow gained publicity.

Some of the prominent members of the church openly denounced the deacon and his wife for receiving the prodigal, and especially bringing her into the house of God to flaunt her shame in the face of the pure young womanhood represented by THEIR daughters.

Because the pastor of the church declined to become their mouthpiece and the executor of their sentence of excommunication against the deacon, some withdrew their financial support from the church and declared their intention of looking elsewhere for a church home. However, there were but few such determined ones, and the support they had hitherto given to the church did not reach a very high figure, the church did not feel any considerable uneasiness on that account.

But there was one thing that did distress the pastor and those nearest to him in the work of the church. One of the leading newspapers of the city gave space in its columns to articles denunciatory of the deacon and professing a profound respect for pure Christianity. The writer, too cowardly to write over his own name, declared himself to be in possession of evidence which if given to the public would forever damn the deacon in the eyes of all decent citizens.

All that was ever known of the deacon and his family that could be distorted and used to injure the family was given to the public under glaring headlines. When these articles first began to appear Rev. Paxton called upon the editor and remonstrated with him for lending the influence of his paper to destroy the character of a good man who had already been deeply stricken by the sin of his children. The editor disclaimed any intention to hurt anyone wantonly, but intimated that the public had a right to any news it was willing to pay for! And furthermore, "the writer of the articles in question bought the space occupied by them, paying a goodly sum therefor. If the deacon was what he ought to be, and what he had been professing to be, he could undoubtedly prove the fact and the articles in question could not permanently injure him."

Mr. Paxton very frankly told the editor that, in his judgment, the attitude of the paper toward the deacon was most contemptible and would result disastrously to the publisher if persisted in.

In the next issue of the Glenview Gleaner, the Rev. Paxton was violently assailed by the author of the articles already mentioned for an attempt to muzzle the press and prevent free speech.

The other papers severely scored the Gleaner for its course, and defended both Mr. Paxton and the deacon. A number of old-time subscribers of the Gleaner withdrew their subscriptions and discontinued the paper. As the editor of the paper published a full list of such withdrawals from day to day, parading as a martyr to free speech and pure morals, he received many subscriptions from other towns and cities, as well as from Glenview, from that class of citizens to whom free speech means the right of any scoundrel to falsely accuse and malign anyone who dared to offend him!

"Truth Seeker," the writer of the articles above mentioned, persistently alluded to certain "nocturnal visits of Rev. Paxton and Deacon Upright, to No. —, a disreputable house, and inquired if there were any returning prodigals there! Then, figuring to have heard that both gentlemen indignantly denied the truth of the implied accusation, declared himself armed with a dozen affidavits of persons who had seen and recognized both gentlemen at different times at the above number, if the public did not credit his declaration.

The venomous reptile was well aware of the fact that, with a certain element, his unsupported declaration would discredit Christianity more than a dozen Christian lives could overcome, so willing are men to believe a lie against one of "Christ's little ones."

The attention of the Association was called to this matter and a council called to investigate and advise the church what course to take in the matter. Of course this action was taken several months after the appearance of the first article in the Gleaner, and in deference to what is popularly supposed to be "public opinion."

If the church, it was argued, fails to protect the sincere Christian membership by exposing the pretender and unmasking the hypocrite, it cannot hope to make headway among those who are too high-minded to tolerate deception and cant.

But in the present instance, as in scores of others of similar character, it was found impossible to satisfy "public opinion" by the most searching inquiry into the facts in the case.

There were those, who in spite of the fact that the editor of the Gleaner refused to divulge the name of "Truth Seeker," and the latter gentleman paid not the slightest attention to the published request followed by a demand for the evidence he claimed to be in his possession of implicating Rev. Paxton and Deacon Upright in conduct unbecoming in a Christian minister and an officer of the church, yet held aloof from the church and avowed their belief that the council was only seeking to "whitewash" the guilty parties, having no intention of bringing them to punishment!

The council met and adjourned from day to day, for several days hoping to be able to get at the facts in the case and set at rest the minds of the brethren who were very much stirred by the persistent attack of "Truth Seeker."

Unsuccessful in an attempt to get him to reveal himself, the only thing left for the council to do was to publish a statement that they had been unable to find any evidence sustaining the charges against Rev. Paxton and Deacon Upright, and that it was the unanimous feeling of the council that the charges were absolutely groundless and the whole thing a malicious lie, a blackmailing scheme.

Neither Mr. Paxton or Deacon Upright took any action in the matter further than expressing a desire to have the matter thoroughly investigated. When the Council published its conclusions, those who were anxious to have the matter rightly disposed of for the honor of the church, who had attended the meetings of the Council, and knew that an honest effort had been made to bring everything to light that affected the Christian character of the accused men, were satisfied of the groundlessness of the charge.

That the "Truth Seeker" failed to make good his boast was to them proof of his villainous character. But there were many who persisted in believing the slanderous story still. No evidence but the bare assertion of a villainous liar was needed to fix them in the belief of what they desired to believe.

About this time a telegram from Mrs. Upright's mother announced the serious illness

REDEMPITIVE CREATION.

(Sermon by Paul S. Rees, delivered over Station WJR, Detroit)

Text: "Create in me a clean heart, O God."—Psalm 51:10.

LET your imagination picture a king seated upon his throne. He has established himself in the confidence of his subjects and the fear of his foes. Victory has come to his armies, expansion to his kingdom and honor to his name. But, like Dimmesdale in Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter," he carries something in his soul that makes his reputation for goodness and greatness a maddening mockery to him. Secretly he has done outrage to honor. Artfully he has planned and perpetrated crimes that have escaped the notice of his people but have proved the death of his peace. Lust has conceived and brought forth sin. He has wrecked a home and, having broken the heart of an innocent husband, he has gone on to destroy that husband's life. In the wake of immortality there has stalked red-footed murder. There he sits within the throne-room, the glory without furnishing an ironic contrast to the gloom within.

"THOU ART THE MAN"

Now look. There is one bowing his way into this royal presence. You recognize him almost instantly. He is the man of God, as brave and true a man as ever wore the prophet's mantle. The king recognizes him. He begins to speak. He lays before the king a grievance which, he feels, cries out for redress. A wealthy landlord, owner of many flocks, has taken away the one ewe lamb of a poor neighbor in order that he might have meat to set before a guest. The king's eyes flash with anger. Indignant over the injustice of it, he pronounces swift judgment on the oppressor, never dreaming that he has unwittingly called to order and presided over the court of his own conviction. With an amazing daring the prophet turns upon the monarch and cries out the indictment of God: "Thou art the man." The king's collapse is complete. Humiliating as the experience must have been, it must also have offered tremendous relief. The rebuke of the prophet was no more searching than the self-judgment and open-hearted confession of the king, who sobbed out: "I have sinned against the Lord." That prophet was Nathan. That king was David.

Such is the story that lies back of our text: "Create in me a clean heart, O God." No more intimately personal or spiritually instructive word ever came from the royal Psalmist than that contained in the Psalm from which this passage is taken. Although its language is intensely individualistic, its essential truth admits of applications that are universal. As Robertson of Brighton once observed, an Englishman might take it upon his lips as appropriately and as feelingly as did a Jew 3000 years ago.

You will note that the text is a prayer, and as such I want you to consider it. "Create in me a clean heart, O God." It is a prayer that has directions—at least three.

I. THE PRAYER OF A MAN LOOKING BACK UPON DEEDS THAT ARE EXCEEDINGLY DARK

It has a backward look. No man can escape the necessity of such a prayer if he is grappling, as David was, with the problem of unforgiven sin. Listen to his humble, earnest plea: "Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving kindness: according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions. . . . I acknowledge my transgressions: and my sin is ever before me."

William Lyon Phelps of Yale, analyzing the temper of our time, says that what is needed just now is an "acute consciousness of sin rather than an enormous accession of conceit." How refreshing it is to find a distinguished scholar with real moral insight! It is a fine contrast to the absurdities of another college professor who recently held the spotlight of attention while he informed the country that the time had come to graduate from belief in God and in sin. Anyhow, we have here a prayer that is born of an "acute consciousness of sin."

HAUNTED

One tragic night, about seven years ago, out in the Siskiyou Mountains near the California-Oregon line, three brothers staged as bold and bloody a train hold-up as had been known in many a day. In doing the "job" they killed three members of the crew. Then they fled. Four years later, after a search that had cost the government and the railroad a half-million dollars, they sat in the presence of officers at Medford, Oregon, and made their confession. There were tense moments in the story, but none more so than when the oldest of the three, having told how the bell on the locomotive kept ringing all the time the looting and shooting were taking place, declared that he had been hearing that bell ringing in his ears ever since. "That bell was hell to me," was the way he described the effect of it all on his memory and conscience. It was something like that that David experienced, for he said: "My sin is ever before me." It belonged to the past but it would not keep its place. Hauntingly and horribly it came stealing out of the shadows, and took its accusing place square in front of the king; and it did not once or twice, but with ever recurring persistency. It was a spectre he could not lay, a black-winged raven he could not chase, an enemy he could not dispatch, a memory he could not kill, an obligation he could not discharge, a guilt he could not cancel. And that, my friend, just that, is what your sin is! No wonder David turned in desperation to the comforting thought of the mercy of God. No wonder he cried: "Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities."

II. THE PRAYER OF A MAN LOOKING WITHIN UPON A HEART THAT IS CONSCIOUSLY UNCLEAN

There is a superficial type of religion that decries what is sometimes called "paralyzing introspection." Some persons do take a sort of morbid delight in scrupulous self-examination. Abnormal cases aside, the fact is that no religious life ever runs deep that does not begin in that revealing of ourselves to ourselves which is made possible by the arresting, illuminating, convicting influence of the Spirit of God. Dr. Hutton, editor of the British Weekly, holds that the great significance of the Psalms lies in their marvelous analysis of the moods and attitudes of the individual soul. Take the text, for instance. Certain it is that much of its meaning is missed unless we see that David had discovered a very vital connection between the ugly history he had just made and the ugliness of soul he now beholds and detests.

NO MORE ERUPTIONS

Sin is more than act; it is disposition. For the dark act the Psalmist seeks forgiveness. But there are hidings of evil, of other dark acts, which he rightly locates in the depths of his own heart; and he dares to believe that he can be made clean throughout by a creative, cleansing ministry of the Holy Spirit of God. He wants the root of the disease removed that the symptoms may not reappear. He wants the fountain to be purified that the stream may be undefiled. He wants the destructive interior fires of the volcanic mountain to be put out—not banked, but put out—that no more eruptions may occur. Hence this throbbing, pounding, believing soul-cry: "Create (the same Hebrew word, we are told, that is used in Genesis where we read 'God created the heaven and the earth') in me a clean heart." O Thou who didst create the heaven and the earth; Thou who hast promised to create the new heaven and the new earth in which righteousness dwells; Thou who dost create the new creature in Christ Jesus; create Thou within me a holy heart. Only Thou canst make me clean.

And the answer to that prayer is a glorious, joyous reality. "Purge me with hyssop," says David, "and I shall be clean: wash me and I shall be whiter than snow." And then he adds: "Make me to hear joy and gladness." Francis Asbury, America's first bishop, the dean of circuit riders, is credited with this burst of praise: "O purity—it is heaven below to feel all sin removed." That sentence must have been in the thinking of Philadelphia's notable woman exponent of the teaching of holiness, Mrs. Phoebe Palmer, when she wrote the hymn:

"Oh now I see the cleansing stream,
The fountain deep and wide;
Jesus, my Lord, mighty to save,
Points to His wounded side.

"I see the new creation rise;
I hear the speaking blood;
It speaks—polluted nature dies,
Sinks 'neath the cleansing flood.

"I rise to walk in heaven's own light,
Above the world and sin,
With heart made pure and garments white,
And Christ enthroned within.

"Amazing grace, 'tis heaven below
To feel the blood applied;
And Jesus only, Jesus know,
My Jesus crucified."

III. THE PRAYER OF A MAN WHO IS LOOKING FORWARD TO DAYS OF SPIRITUAL USEFULNESS

Retrospective and introspective, the prayer is also prospective. We began by marking the fact that it had a backward look; we are now ready to note that it has a forward look. "Create in me a clean heart, O God. . . . Then will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee." No suggestion here that David intends to sponge on the goodness of God! No intimation in this that salvation is conceived of as a kind of glorified fire-escape to save one from hell! Not a hint that the psalmist thinks he can sing himself away to everlasting bliss, forgetful of the crying needs of his brother men! Instead there is revealed an unmistakably clear understanding of the truth that salvation is for this world as well as for the one to come.

NO HOT-HOUSE HOLINESS

Salvation is not simply for the shrine of worship; it is for the shop of toil. Holiness is not for the hot-house; it is for the highway. He who is truly saved must seek the salvation of his fellows. Christ has done so much for him as to put him under everlasting obligation. He owes it to Christ and he owes it to those who are without Christ to share the life and grace and power and joy that have come to him. Is not that what Paul meant when in writing to the Romans, and assuring them that the fact that they were not Jews did not lessen his interest in them, he said: "I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise. So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also." Ah, David and Paul have both been baptized with the same Spirit. And what is the result? Transgressors must be taught the wondrous ways of the redeeming God. Sinners must be converted. Such must ever remain the purpose and passion of real Christianity.

I think the story is founded in fact, that General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, once took it upon himself to send a message of cheer and counsel to every Army unit and every Army man around the world. It must go, of course, by cable. Expense must be considered. It must be intelligible. It must be pungent, piercing, impressive. Nothing else would satisfy the General. When it was released for its worldwide race, it consisted of a single word: "Others." OTHERS! Others! And as it went speeding along the deep-laid cables of the seven seas it was nothing more nor less than a late and abbreviated edition of David's declaration of three millenniums ago concerning the usefulness and fruitfulness of the truly saved soul: "Then will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee."

"Lord, help me live from day to day
In such a self-forgetful way
That even when I kneel to pray
My prayers will be of OTHERS.

"Help me in all the work I do
To ever be sincere and true
And know that all I do for YOU Must needs be done for OTHERS.

"Let SELF be crucified and slain
And buried deep, and all in vain
May efforts be to rise again
Unless to live for OTHERS.

"And when my work on earth is done
And my new work in heaven begun
May I forget the crown I've won
While thinking still of OTHERS.

"Others, Lord, yes, others
Let this my motto be;
Help me to live for OTHERS
That I may live like Thee."

The Bible is God's chart for you to steer by, to keep you from the bottom of the sea and to show you where the harbor is, and how to reach it without running on rocks or bars.—H. W. Beecher.

A CONCRETE CASE.

W. W. CARY.

EXPERIENCE sometimes adds most pointed illustrations to teachings and warnings. THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD for years has been warning people of the need our churches have for a theological seminary which is orthodox, evangelistic, a teacher of the essential truths of vital Christianity, exemplifying and urging holiness as a standard of conduct.

A young man out of last year's graduating class at Asbury College, for lack of money, was unable to enter Asbury Theological Seminary, and received an offer of a big scholarship from a seminary in one of America's best known universities. At Christmas time he returned to Asbury begging that he be permitted to enter the seminary here on any terms, that he could no longer endure the awful conditions he faced where he was. This is his experience:

In this seminary there are about one hundred young preachers preparing for the pulpit; several denominations are represented. One of the broad basic principles announced by this seminary is that there everyone is permitted to think as he pleases; that they are broad minded, tolerant. Strangely enough this broad-mindedness never extends to anyone orthodox, conservative, evangelistic and spiritual. This young man had received the blessing of sanctification; was thoroughly orthodox in his beliefs, and said so very plainly. Persecution of the boldest type pursued him throughout his course. In one class, where there were only seven present, the professor practically pointed him out and said, "Of course, ignorant, old-fashioned, back-woods people do not agree with me; but all intelligent people will be able to comprehend, and see the truth of what I say." Another professor called him a "jack-ass" in open class.

A resume of the teachings in this theological seminary preparing young men for a so-called "Christian ministry" is interesting. First, there is no anthropomorphic God as Father interested in the affairs of men. There is a First Cause, an impersonal force entirely indifferent to the futile squirmings of such insignificant parts of the creation as men on this earth. Jesus was mistaken in claiming to be the Son of God, and his death has no meaning for us save as an example of moral courage. He was a good man; a teacher and a good example; but there is no blood atonement, and it is absurd to believe he was the Son of God in any special way. The Bible is an interesting piece of literature. Here we find a compilation of Jewish folk lore, myths and traditions with some Oriental wisdom and poetry thrown in for good measure. It is valuable as a bit of literature, but has no special authority and is far from being a revelation from God; for no such revelation exists. The Bible has the same authority as Homer's "Iliad." The fruits of this sort of teaching are plainly in evidence among the theological students. Almost everyone smokes incessantly; they are strongly addicted to swearing of a blasphemous sort; their pastimes quite prominently include bridge, poker and dice playing for money; they unite in their abhorrence of silly, old-fashioned, orthodox, beliefs.

Is not this an absolute proof of the appalling need that our churches, the nation—yes, the world—has for Asbury Theological Seminary? What a contrast at Asbury! The omnipotent God, the Creator of all things, who is a Father to those born again, is worshipped with the deepest reverence; Christ, the Son of God, shed his blood for our sins; he is Master, King, Saviour and Elder Brother, who will come again as King of kings, and Lord of lords, to rule this earth, and to him every knee shall bow; that the Bible is the Word of God without the elimination of a comma, or the dotting of an "i"; in which God has revealed himself, his purposes for mankind and his commands, and the Bible is approached with the deepest reverence as authoritative.

Yet strange it is that such seminaries as the one first mentioned are able to offer big scholarships to prospective preachers, and draw them into such a trap of heresy and disbelief. Is not this a challenge for the people of God to enlarge and build up Asbury Theological Seminary, that our most promising young preachers, missionaries and evangelists shall have the benefit of training where the truth is adhered to, and where the white banner of "Holiness Unto The Lord" is ever held aloft by precept and example?

This story is not exaggerated. Two men of judicial minds and considerable experience attest to its exactness. It seems that no one who loves God, and looks for the appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ, and seeks to build up his Kingdom, would fail to answer such a challenge as this. Your prayers, your money, and your personal support, should be given to Asbury that its work may be enlarged.

Text of Dry Report by Hoover Board.

(By International News Service)

Washington, Jan. 20—The conclusions and recommendations of the national commission on law enforcement and law observance with regard to prohibition, and signed by 10 of the 11 members, follows:

1. The commission is opposed to repeal of the eighteenth amendment.
2. The commission is opposed to the restoration in any manner of the legalized saloon.
3. The commission is opposed to the federal or state governments, as such, going into the liquor business.
4. The commission is opposed to the proposal to modify the national prohibition act so as to permit manufacture and sale of light wines or beer.
5. The commission is of opinion that the co-operation of the states is an essential element in the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and the national prohibition act throughout the territory of the United States; that the support of public opinion in the several states is necessary in order to insure such co-operation.

FINDS IMPROVEMENT IN ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS

6. The commission is of the opinion that prior to the enactment of the Bureau of Prohibition act, 1927, the agencies for enforcement were badly organized and inadequate; that subsequent to that enactment there has been continued improvement in organization and effort for enforcement.
7. The commission is of opinion that there is yet no adequate observance or enforcement.
8. The commission is of opinion that the present organization for enforcement is still inadequate.
9. The commission is of opinion that the federal appropriations for enforcement of the eighteenth amendment should be substantially increased and that the vigorous and better organized efforts which have gone on since the Bureau of Prohibition act, 1927, should be furthered by certain improvements in the statutes and in the organization, personnel, and equipment of enforcement, so as to give to enforcement the greatest practicable efficiency.

COMMENT OF EDITOR.

So far so good. There are some other features of the report not so encouraging, but the above is most hopeful. The war on prohibition is not over, nor will it be so long as there is a Devil, with children and servants to make war against prohibition. The people of God must be girded for battle all the time for the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

of Mr. Duncan, Mrs. Upright's father, and requesting her and her husband to hasten to Churchville at once. As Mrs. Upright had gained sufficient strength to undertake the journey, they took the first train for Churchville.

Mr. Duncan lived but a few hours after their arrival, though he retained consciousness and was able to give directions for the settlement of his business and to execute a will disposing of his property. As Mrs. Upright was the only surviving child—a younger brother having died some years before at the age of nineteen—the will bequeathed the family residence with all its furnishings to the widow, together with the income from certain bonds of the United States, aggregating $15,000 a year during her life, after which this bequest, with the residue of his property, should descend to his daughter, Susan Duncan Upright. Examination into his affairs showed him to have been worth over a million dollars. As the most of this was in bank stock, railroad, government and municipal bonds, it was easily converted into cash in hand.

Deacon Upright, to whom his wife entrusted the management of her interest in the estate, decided that government bonds were better than gold, and converted everything possible into such. As the present was a period of great activity in railroad stocks, he disposed of his wife's holdings in that line quite satisfactorily to all concerned, and invested a part of the proceeds in Glenview property, and the remainder in Government bonds.

Mrs. Duncan, upon the deacon's recommendation, sold her residence in Churchville, and bought a less imposing, but really more modern and convenient one in Glenview. At the request of the deacon and his wife, she only nominally occupied the new home, spending most of her time with her daughter. Being well advanced in years—nearly eighty and withal not very strong, she needed the devoted care she would receive at the hands of the Upright family.

The attitude of some of the members of the Euclid Avenue Church toward Jessie Upright might have deterred one of less determined character from attendance upon the services of the church. However, she without any attempt to force herself upon any, kept her accustomed place in the family pew and entered into the spirit of worship with a feeling that her need justified her presence in the house of prayer. She quietly took her place in the family pew, quietly attended to the things which concerned her own religious life, and as quietly walked out of the house of God to her own home. She meekly bore the coldness of those who should have helped her in her struggles for a higher, purer life, and obtruded herself upon none.

Without delay she began, what, to her seemed her life work, trying to win her erring sisters who had fallen into bad lives back to virtue and honor. There was about her such an air of intense earnestness and devotion, such an evident feeling of weakness and despair of self help that she attracted attention everywhere she went. If she could gain admittance to the bedside of one who had been prostrated by dissipation and disease, she hardly ever failed to reach their hearts and leave them with a new desire forming in their heart to reach higher and holier things.

It frequently happened that sickness cut off the income of some poor girl who had but a single source of income left to her, and failing to pay her rent she would be evicted from the place she had been wont to call her home. In such case the city hospital alone was open to her, unless some of her sisters in sin should open their doors to her and nurse her back to health. But this was not always done. A life of sin deadens the finer feelings of the human heart and leaves it indifferent to human misery.

The meager provision which the city government usually makes for the poor and unfortunate does not always allow those in charge of city hospitals to admit all whose condition requires immediate care and help, and so, cast out and scorned by her more unfortunate sisters, many a poor girl has met her death in some mean hovel with only some degraded soul for an attendant, who is only waiting to rob the corpse of its scanty covering, or sell the body to some ghoulish purchaser.

Jessie Upright found such cases very soon after engaging in her work and began planning a refuge for such unfortunates. She made confidants of her parents, giving them an account of her experiences and her labors each day. Their hearts were stirred by the recital and they determined to do something to provide for extreme cases of sickness or of suffering among the class to whom Jessie turned her attention.

It chanced that the deacon had recently become the owner of a building admirably adapted to the purpose and so situated as to furnish a degree of retirement and rest to

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dries do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

BEER AND THE PRICE OF BARLEY.

The wets woo the farmers by blaming prohibition for the low price of grain. They claim that beer would raise the price of barley.

The Chicago Tribune, on November 2nd, 1930, published an editorial, "PITY THE CANADIAN FARMER," which said in part:

"October barley in Winnipeg sold the other day at less than 26 cents per bushel. . . . From that price the farmer had to subtract the cost of transporting the grain from his farm to market. No one will pretend that prices in this country are satisfactory, but they must arouse the envy of Canadian farmers."

Canada has breweries; the United States has not.

To put a worthwhile truth into circulation is a good day's work.

those who were in sore need of both. He cancelled the contract with the present tenant, with his consent, and began to fit it up for the care of such as Jessie might induce to take up their residence there until such time as returning health and higher motives might lead them to seek out honorable employment and a new life.

Both Mrs. Upright and Mrs. Duncan insisted in having a part in the matter and undertook to furnish kitchen and laundry equipments, and also bear some of the expense for beds and beddings. This laudable undertaking was begun without ostentation or flourish of trumpets. No one was asked to supply any funds for the enterprise.

While Mr. Paxton was called on for counsel he was not asked to solicit help from anyone. It was purely a private enterprise, born out of the sympathy of a single family. Indeed so quietly was the work carried on that the house had several occupants before the public began to suspect to what use the building was to be put.

The building was a large three-story brick, and occupied nearly a central location on a plat with 150 feet front and 165 feet depth. This would allow of wings being added if occasion seemed to require such enlargement.

Soon as the nature of the enterprise became generally known, applicants for admission began to multiply. While none were turned away, who were known to be in distress, it was not intended that the house should become the rendezvous of the idle and vicious who only sought it for the free lodging or lunch they hoped to obtain.

Being the only institution of its kind in the city, its utmost capacity was soon taxed and the necessity for its enlargement felt by its managers. It became a matter of some concern to Jessie and her helpers to provide a sufficient force of able-bodied women to keep the rooms in order and to attend to the sick inmates. But as the patients became strong enough one after another of them fell into the work, out of gratitude to Jessie at first, and later continued it from choice. They found satisfaction in the thought of supporting themselves in a manner involving no sin or loss of self-respect, and so the institution began to pay at least a part of the necessary expense of maintaining it.

Jessie gave herself to daily effort in portions of the city devoted to the tougher classes. Before the close of the first year of this kind of effort, it was found necessary not only to enlarge the building but to provide regular religious services which should not be dependent upon the limited time which the busy pastors of the city could snatch from their regular work, nor to be held at an unreasonable hour. In a word, the work took on the character of a city mission of such magnitude as to occupy the full time of a pastor, as well as to call for lay workers. As the work enlarged the Christian public forgot its prejudice against Jessie Upright and contributed time and money to the work. Great difficulty was experienced in securing a minister who could "come down" to the level of the inmates of the home, and thereby be able to raise them to a higher level.

Until the work had become strong enough to pay a fixed salary but few ministers could be induced to consider a call to minister to it. When it had reached that point there were those whose only motive for taking up the work was to draw the salary and do as little work as possible. Under such circumstances it could not be expected that much good would be accomplished. Men who had fitted themselves for ministerial service through years of study in college and seminary usually came from a class of well-to-do people, who had nothing in common with the ignorant and depraved they were likely to meet in this home for the unfortunate. The uneducated and untrained who applied for the position failed just from their lack in this respect of course.

In our anxiety to follow the fortunes of the Upright family we have neglected other characters and left our readers to guess at the time which has gone over the heads of the characters of our story. We humbly apologize for both these offences and will say that seven years have elapsed since the first incident recorded transpired. It will be remembered also that details of the discovery of the secrets of those reading rooms were omitted, the simple statement having been made that to Deacon Upright was due this discovery, aided by Ralph's previous experience in connection with them.

Other items of interest which we failed to mention occur to us and with the reader's consent we will look them up.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

GOD'S MYSTERIOUS MOVING.

Dear Friends Scattered Abroad Everywhere:

Greetings in Jesus' Name! In August, 1927, I left India with my three children bound for the United States. I had said before leaving that I would not allow anything to stop me shorter than San Francisco. In due season we reached Hongkong on board the S.S. Tilawa. After staying in Hongkong a night and a day we went on board the S. S. Korea Maru which was sailing for San Francisco. Just before leaving Hongkong my second son was becoming ill. I said to him, "William, don't get sick, for if you do we shall not be able to proceed on our journey." It did not matter what I had said to William, for when we were steaming on to Shanghai he grew worse, until he became unconscious. Like Jonah, I was down in the hold of the ship. O, how I prayed and cried to God in prayer to heal my boy. The assistant doctor on making his rounds discovered us and ordered my boy to be taken to the ships' hospital, telling me that some one must stay with him. I told him that I would stay with him. Dear friends, I cannot tell you how I kept pouring out my heart to God to heal my boy, and yet it seemed the more I prayed the worse he grew.

When we arrived in Shanghai on September 9th, 1927, he was still unconscious with icepacks on his head and talking in a delirious way, and I was pleading God's promises. The captain sent the steward to ask me to see him in his cabin. When I entered the Captain said to me, "Mr. Carter, the doctor tells me that you have a very sick son, and he is unable to bring down the fever, and is not sure but what the symptoms are those of typhoid, and we are afraid if you continue on to the States you shall lose your son. Will you please leave the ship here, as we wish to sail tomorrow morning, and if you refuse to leave the ship, you will prevent our sailing as scheduled." Friends, God only knows how my heart sank within me when I heard those words from the Captain. He further said, "We cannot compel you to get off in a Chinese port, but if you do not get off here, we shall put you off at Nagasaki, and Shanghai is the best place for you and your son." I said to the captain, "Have the temperature taken again while I pray," and as I prayed I said, "Now Lord, if the temperature is gone down I shall remain on the ship, if not I shall get off." After taking his temperature they reported that the fever had gone up one point. I said to captain, "What shall I do, as I only have nine Hongkong dollars, and do not know a soul in Shanghai." O, dear friends, God was working all the time, but at the time I did not see it, and I had heard so many horrible things from the missionaries, that many had fled and some had given their lives, and I expected most anything to happen if I got off the boat. However, the captain helped me and refunded me two hundred Shanghai dollars, saying, "This is food money, your passage is paid, and as soon as your son has recovered you may proceed to the States by any of our other boats." He telephoned to the General Hospital for an ambulance and with the second officer and the assistant surgeon of the ship we started on our journey to the General Hospital. Arriving there I was told by the sister in charge that it would cost me twenty dollars a day. With the assistance of the doctor and the second officer we explained my position. I was told to leave a deposit of fifty dollars, which I did, and to call the next day, when we could make better arrangements. The next thing was to find a place for us to stay, now that William had been taken care of.

The Astor House was suggested and then the Savoy Hotel, even the names of these places were too much for me as I thought of my finance. I finally settled for the Savoy Hotel for $9.00 per day. I thought this indeed too much but thought I would try it for the night, and then we proceeded with the officer back to the ship for our trunks. Arriving there I asked if there was a truck that could haul our trunks, they replied, "Don't worry, we'll arrange everything." Four rikshaws were called and the Carter procession left the ship for the Savoy Hotel. In our room that night I said to my children, "We shall have to pray much for William, and then you know that I have not much money." My son Edward said he did not think William was going to die. We got down upon our knees and prayed for William's recovery and that we soon might be on our way to the U. S. A. The next day we returned to the hospital and I was told that my boy would have to remain there from forty to sixty days.

How I felt, friends, God only knew. After two days we were able to find a place in a private home, where my son Edward said to me, "Daddy, maybe God wants you to stay here in Shanghai. Would you if he wanted you to?" God was trying to speak to me but it was a hard fight for me to say Yes to Jesus, but William never began to get well until I did say Yes to the Lord.

FROM THE INTERIOR OF CHINA.

To the Friends of The Herald Family:

For the last two weeks we have been busy in the interior of China holding services for the National Holiness Mission in the Shantung Province. Here we see real China, centuries behind the times, bathed in superstition, ignorance and poverty; and still dazed from the recent years of war, famine and internal upheaval.

Poor China! For the past several years this ancient land has been steeped in turmoil while her soil has been soaked with the blood of thousands who have been slain. War has constantly raged with leading generals forming their independent armies for the purpose of gaining control of this disunited and disorganized country. Motivated by selfish ambitions these generals have plundered the country causing great destruction and economic distress, and creating misery and woe. Peace has recently been declared but it seems to be a prevalent opinion that it will not continue very long. "Just a breathing spell," say many, until the defeated generals can gather together enough money to start the struggle again.

While the armies have been at war robber bands have roamed the country creating a reign of terror throughout the land. Their atrocious crimes and barbarous actions have caused the people to live in constant fear of their lives and property. They enter a village to plunder and destroy. We saw much of the wreckage that remains in some of the villages as a result of these marauders. Not only do they plunder but carry off everything of value while the intimidated villagers stand looking on with fear and consternation. Usually a number of the residents are carried off as captives to be held for ransom. If the ransom money is not produced immediately they kill one or more of the prisoners to spur the relatives to bring forth the price demanded. Cruel and torturous methods are used. Often they cause a captive to dig a grave and then bury him in it alive. Nothing seems too horrible for them to do. Some of the missionaries that have been captured have been relating their thrilling experiences to us. Since peace has been declared the soldiers are free to deal with their own bands, but during the period of war the villages had no protection and were at their mercy.

In the midst of this seething pot of war the northern provinces were held in the grip of a dire famine. For two years the crops were a complete failure and because the country was engaged in battle the government was unable to lend an assisting hand. The pleading cries of the starving millions went unheeded. Some were able to eke out a miserable existence with gnawing stomachs and tottering bodies but actually millions starved to death. With the lack of food came disease and pestilence which swept many more into eternity and added horror to the tragic situation. The past harvest yielded a good crop which has brought relief.

Further fuel was added to the conflagration by the devilish propaganda which swept the land. Under the guise of nationalism, this propaganda, atheistic and anti-religious to the core, covered the land. Baited with promise of power for the younger generation it literally carried the young people off their feet. Propaganda societies were formed in every village and youth drunk with this hope of new power sallied forth beyond all bounds of propriety and custom. Determined to do away with all religions they took the law into their own hands and in large groups went out to the temples and in merciless fashion demolished buildings and smashed idols on every hand. In some cases Christian buildings were entered but comparatively little damage was done to them. This wild fire has been somewhat subdued with the declaration of peace. God marvelously protected the property of the National Holiness Mission from these attacks.

It is to a people that have passed through these terrible years of strain and stress that we find ourselves proclaiming the message of hope. We find the people very eager to hear the "good news" and hungry for the bread of life. We have met some very unusual Chinese Christians here who have come through severe persecution and opposition in great triumph. Our faith has been strengthened as we have heard of God's marvelous power to keep and sustain even in the midst of war, famine, and trouble of every sort. Praise God, his grace is sufficient.

The missionaries of the National Holiness Mission were forced to leave their stations for several months during the past year because of the dangerous conditions, but they have all returned and are going forward with renewed energy and strength to spread the gospel of Christ. We have not met a more spiritual and consecrated group of workers anywhere, and we consider ourselves highly honored to have the blessed privilege of laboring in their midst. Please put this work on your prayer list.

Yours in His service,

NELSON, PENNSYLVANIA.

The Rev. Warren G. McIntire, M. A., of Wilmore, Ky., recently closed a gracious revival service at my church in Nelson, Pa. At the beginning many of the people were prejudiced against a revival, but it was not long until the Lord got hold of the people's hearts and changed their attitude. The church people were revived and some of them entered into the blessing of entire sanctification.

On the first Sunday evening there were twenty-three young people at the altar seeking the forgiveness of their sins. The Lord graciously met us and blessed many who had not felt the nearness of God's presence for many years. Several evenings when no altar call was given people came over to the parsonage asking us to pray for them. They told us that they felt so miserable that they could not go home until they had peace of heart.

On the last Sunday morning God was with us in unusual power, and at the close of the service thirty-one seekers came forward. The meeting lasted for several hours but it seemed only a few minutes to us as God was so graciously dealing with souls. Bro. McIntire and I rejoiced and praised God for victory as we listened to the testimonies of new-born souls. Even though the revival service continued only a little over a week there were nearly sixty definite victories of grace wrought in the hearts of the people. Praise God the days of revivals are not past. Paul H. Huyett, Pastor.

REPORT OF E. C. MILBY, SONG EVANGELIST.

My heart is grateful to the Lord for his wonderful blessings upon my soul and my ministry, as song evangelist. Since my last report I have been in some great meetings and have seen many souls at the altar for pardon or purity. I wish to mention two meetings in particular. I was in Campbellsville, Ky., for twelve days. God wonderfully blessed and many found Jesus. The church which had a seating capacity of about eight hundred, was filled every night and many were turned away. Praise God the day of revivals is not over. Another good meeting was in Calhoun, Ky., in the First M. E. Church. God poured out his Spirit upon us. The good pastor, Dr. C. K. Dickey, did the preaching. He is a Spirit-filled man, and my, how he did preach! The people in Calhoun co-operated in a wonderful way and many victories were won.

I am now in a meeting in Charleston, W. Va., with John Fleming, as Evangelist. Some 60 or 70 have been saved, and another week before us. I am surely glad to be working for the Lord in this way. Pray for me.

EVANGELIST JOHN FLEMING.

This past year has been one of the greatest, if not the greatest year of my life. I have had the privilege of working in some of the best churches and camps, and of course some not so good. (We all have to take the bitter with the sweet.) Also with some of the best pastors, evangelists and singers in the nation. Have seen thousands at the altar seeking God, of which scores of them have prayed through to victory, the result being hundreds uniting with the churches. My meetings have taken me in twenty or more states, and covering a mileage of between 25,000 and 28,000 miles. I can thank God for keeping me safe from any wrecks or accidents of any kind. These are the busiest days of my life. I have plenty of work to do and never was in better shape, in both body and soul, to carry on my work.

Thank God, the day of revivals is not over, for we are now in the midst of one in Charleston, W. Va. Services are being held in a large tabernacle, preaching to from 800 to 1,000 every night. We are seeing God's power demonstrated in a way as we haven't for some time. The altars are crowded every night with seekers, and many are happy finders.

My song leader is E. Clay Milby, of Greensburg, Ky., and I can truthfully say he is doing his part of the work in a wonderful way. I am praying God that this the year of 1931, will be the greatest year of my ministry.

Yours for a lost world.

BAKERSFIELD, CALIFORNIA.

This is our first report of our work to The Pentecostal Herald family, although it has carried our evangelistic slate the past year and we have been privileged to circulate it in our meetings and to receive subscriptions for the same. We are always refreshed by reading the splendid articles and sermons by the great editor. What this holy man of God has meant to Methodism and the Holiness Movement, as well as the world at large, only God knows. May the Lord spare him many years to preach and write on the great theme of Bible Holiness, which he has so ably and faithfully expounded these many years, is our earnest prayer.

The past year has seen some gracious outpourings of his Holy Spirit on the people. In every one of the twenty-three campaigns we have seen the power of God manifested and demonstrated in saving, reclaiming and sanctifying power, and not a few have been gloriously and divinely healed. Men and women have sought and found God from the Atlantic to the Pacific and up into Canada. He is just the same today, and we find that where pastor and people pay the price and meet the conditions of Pentecost (all with one accord) God never fails to give a revival. The days of revivals are not past, but it takes old-time praying and agonizing and burden for the lost, for "when Zion travails she will bring forth." Let us pray more and talk and gossip less, and we will have better results.

A. O. Henricks, Evangelist.

If You Want Something

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

What is the Matter with the World?

No. V.

I were better, and far safer for five million wage earners to own cottages, with the necessities, and some of the luxuries of life, than that twenty men should have two hundred million each.

The ownership of a home counts large in the making of good, self-respecting, law-abiding citizens. It is far better that a laboring man should own a bungalow, which increases in value, and save rent, than that he should own a car which depreciates in value and constantly drains his purse in repairs, gasoline and oil.

The coming of the automobile has made some scores of men vastly rich, and some millions of men miserably poor. Thousands of families have bought cars who ought to build homes and live in them, rather than buying cars and living on the road. Millions have mortgaged their homes, furniture, pianos, in fact, practically all they have, to buy a car, to spend what little change they can scrape up chasing about the country when they ought to be at home producing something of value. Enough of this will impoverish the millions of the people who, otherwise, might be living comfortably with good bank accounts; on the other hand, they buy cars which means financial depression and general bankruptcy in the end. And there you are!

One thing that seriously affects the finances of this nation are the hundreds of thousands that leave this country every year for European travel where they spend millions of dollars summer after summer. Last summer fifty thousand Americans visited the Passion Play in Oberammergau; at one thousand dollars each, for travel, going and coming, hotels and what not, that is fifty million dollars. That is a mere trifle of what is spent annually. So far as the finance of this country is concerned this money had about as well been dumped into the sea. Now that American-owned ships are carrying some passengers, it is not quite so severe a financial strain on the country. Great financial depression has come upon the nation and the people look about with surprise and say, "Who has picked my pocket?" The American people have picked their own pockets.

Congress will not be able to frame and pass a bill that will make the farmer rich, while his children tear up an automobile running into the county seat evenings to attend the movies and eat 30 cent nut sundaes. The world is running amuck in a craze of pleasure-seeking, money-spending and following deceptive shadows which promise happiness, but will never be able to fulfill their promises. Wickedness abounds. A large percent of the daily press, the magazine world and present-day fiction is set against the Bible, therefore the God of the Bible, therefore against mankind. There is nothing more startling and dangerous than the attitude of a large percent of the teaching and preaching found in this nation. When men in the schools and pulpits array themselves against the Bible, woe be to the people!

God can give us a great spiritual awakening that will drive back the hosts of hell, but he must have heroic, Spirit-filled men who are willing to sacrifice and suffer. Can he find the men? Are such men on the earth in any considerable number? Give God the Spirit-baptized men and he will shake the world with his power.

Can we have the Old-Time Religion and the Old-fashioned Revival?

I have been on the sick list again out here on the Pacific Coast. I held a few short meetings and have had calls enough to keep me busy half of the year, but I have had to cancel all of my engagements and lay up for repairs.

Wife sends me some of the church papers. First of all, I read The Methodist Herald searching for revival reports, especially in Kentucky Conference, my own conference. Next, I look for the good news in the Louisville Conference.

I thank God for the good revival at Maysville, Ky., and the gracious meeting at Cairo, Ill. In many places the brethren tell of revivals in which sinners were converted and believers sanctified. Those brethren who are preaching, praying, visiting and drawing the people to the church, and to Christ, are simply doing what every pastor in every charge in every conference could do, and ought to do. Of course, there may be some impossible places, but they are few. God wants to save souls, and he saves them through human instrumentality. The combinations of Christians in any community, praying earnestly, singing joyfully, visiting and inviting people to church, and urging them to seek Christ, is almost sure to result in the salvation of souls. Woe be to those pastors who let the precious years go by without having revivals in their churches.

If the blight of modernism had not fallen on the Methodism of Chicago, if the wealthy laymen had furnished the means, and every Methodist preacher had stood for the old doctrines and experiences of Methodism, and held great revivals in all of their churches, Chicago would be an entirely different city from what it is. Men in that city who are bootleggers, robbers, murderers, would have been saved by the droves. Some of them would have become preachers, others missionaries, and others earnest Christian workers. Those unbelieving, modernistic, anti-revival preachers will go to judgment with the blood of lost souls upon them. YES THEY WILL!

There is no place anywhere in our vast centers of population, or sparsely settled communities where souls cannot be won to Christ. What are preachers for if it is not to preach the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation?

I notice numbers of our Kentucky preachers, both in Kentucky and Louisville Conferences, are being "pounded." That is good! It does not cost any one much, and it is a real help to the preacher. Better than anything else, it cultivates the spirit of Christian love and fellowship; the preacher's heart is warmed, he feels that he is appreciated, and it draws out the best that is in him. The people who welcome and "pound" their pastor will love him better. Blessed are they that pound, and he that is pounded. Love is a great thing in this old world of sin and sorrow. Cultivate it, plow up the corners, set the fence back, clear the new ground and sow it down in love. If the church is going in for four years' revival it will take lots of love—human and divine. Remember what Jesus said about loving God supremely, and loving our neighbors unselfishly.

I am glad to see that the editor of the Methodist Herald is speaking out plainly on Prohibition. Every church paper should draw the sword of the Lord on the liquor traffic.

Did you notice what Rev. C. H. Witt said about revivals in a recent issue of the Methodist Herald? He wrote under the same heading we have at the top of this article. I believe it is the worst jumble of misrepresentations I ever saw in print in a high-class religious journal. The old deep-water Campbellites used to talk that way about Methodism; but this brother, in his tirade of misrepresentation, goes them one, if not two, better. Here is a sample of his rant:

"Another tragic fact of Methodist history is the idea that the conversion of sinners demanded the time element. Conversion was not thought of as a natural, normal, every day religious experience of the church services. 'Getting religion' was thought of as an abnormal, super-normal, hysterical, neurasthenical phenomenal experience which had to be extended into days, or weeks, or months, or even years. Conversion was thought of as a supernatural experience preceded by a regular mental hell of torment and contrition and penitence; and conversion was for the hardened sinner alone. We did not think of conversion as belonging to and possible for a little child as well as to the adult. With these ideas prevailing, it is not surprising that conversions were not expected at the regular services. Folks had the idea that camp meeting time was the only time to open the doors of the church, and then the doors of the church were not opened the first week of the meeting. At other times the preacher preached, sang a hymn, and pronounced the benediction without ever making any sort of proposition to his congregation. In other words, we placed a limit on the everlasting God, saying in effect: 'You can't get saved except at the revival. God does not save people unless it is revival time. God does not care to save little children. You must be deep in sin to be saved from sin.'"

Such misrepresentations of Methodism hardly call for an answer. I wonder if this brother is some "stray" that has jumped the fence and is feeding in the Methodist pastures without the Methodist brand on him? When you hear a Methodist preacher making fun of "getting religion," you may mark him down as an uncertain quantity. I have known some of that sort and I never knew one of them who would not fade in the wash. With them, salvation was a mere human act, a resolution, the "turning over of a new leaf," joining the church, miserable substitutes for the regeneration of the heart by the Holy Ghost.

Look again at his ridicule of our Methodist Fathers and others: "Getting religion was thought of as an abnormal, super-normal, hysterical, neurasthenical phenomenal experience which had to be extended into days, or weeks, or months, or even years." Methodism always preached, sang, prayed and taught that "now is the accepted time." "Now is the day of salvation." It is true that some men have been quite awhile in getting the full assurance of their salvation. John Bunyan was quite a while in the "Slough of Despond." Charles Spurgeon hunted around for some time before he came under the influence of the minister who preached the NOW SALVATION, always so dear to Methodism in the days of her power. John Wesley was on the hunt of something to "strangely warm" his heart before he found it. Martin Luther groaned and did penance, but finally on the stairs at Rome he found salvation by faith. It paid these men and the world, that they pressed on until they found the supernatural power of God regenerating their immortal souls. They all preached a NOW salvation after they found the same in Christ.

The glory of old-time Methodism was justification by faith, here and NOW. It was a common thing in those days for a vile sinner to go to a Methodist meeting out of curiosity, be struck with conviction, cry to God for mercy and "get religion" by the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost, and go home to his family praising God. Children were sometimes saved at family prayers; souls were converted at neighborhood prayer meetings; revivals often broke out in unexpected places and swept over a community.

Here the brother is mistaken again, when he says: "One of the tragic facts of Methodist history is the idea that the main purpose of the revival was the conversion of sinners rather than re-animation of church members."

No, the early Methodists commenced their revivals with earnest, searching sermons to the church, always insisting that a backslidden, or lukewarm church was in no condition to lead souls to Christ, or to care of young converts. I am almost half as old as the Methodist Church, and I know whereof I speak. The early Methodists urged upon members the importance of entering into perfect love in order that the power of God might come down in convicting and converting power.

Note what this brother has to say about shouting: "I wonder if shouting is evidence of conversion, or at all necessary to conversion?" What is shouting? It is praising God. It is joyful expression of thanks to God for his mercy. A sinner, guilty, lost, condemned, going down to eternal torment, repents, believes in Christ for forgiveness, is it wrong for him to praise and give glory to God?

This is a shouting age. They shout over baseball, basket-ball; seventy-five thousand people shout over the kick of a ball. Why not let a fellow say "Glory to God" when his sins are forgiven, without raising a row about it. I am reminded of what Henry Ward Beecher said to a party who said she had never shouted. His reply was: "The wind would have to blow mighty hard to raise a wave twenty feet high on a branch half an inch deep." The praise of God is always in order. God's true people in times of victory and revival in Old Testament and New, shouted his praise. The early Methodists were great praisers. It was just as common for those old-time Methodists to shout the praise of God, as it is for the new-time Methodists to dance, play cards, go to low shows and play golf on Sunday. Gracious God, give us a revival of salvation and the praise of thy great and holy name!

"And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the Mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen, saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest!" See!

"And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples." See!

"And he answered and said unto them, I tell you that if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out." See!!

HOW WE SPEND OUR MONEY

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

ES, times are hard! We do not deny that owing to the protracted drouth, the stock market failure, bank failures, etc., there are many who are suffering real deprivation. But there are thousands of people who bring hard times upon themselves; not intentionally, of course, but in their times of remunerative employment they fail to economize in their expenditures, and to make it a rule to save something each week, no matter how small the savings may be.

A leading ready-to-wear store in this city had brought on their fall supply of coats, among them many handsome fur coats, and one of the clerks said that before they could get them ready for the purchasers the girls who worked in that store had bought many of them, to be paid for on the installment plan.

I suppose these girls receive for their stipend from $15.00 to $25.00 a week, plenty to clothe and feed one if economically expended; but when you begin to buy fur coats on $15.00 a week, you will see how far short such income will be in supplying a wardrobe. Not only this, but there are high-heel shoes, expensive silk hose, silk underwear, hair waving, rouge, lipsticks, manicuring, picture shows, theaters, meals at restaurants, silk and crepe dresses to wear to work, and many other things that, I as an old-timer, do not know about.

I am saying this in order to say this: When the pinch comes and that girl is thrown out of a position, and everything stops, with nothing put by for the "rainy day," she is facing "hard times," necessarily. Suppose she had laid by from three to five dollars a week; when her position had to be sacrificed, she would have something to tide her over until she could find another position. But no! How could she save when there were so many beautiful fur coats, lovely dresses, wonderful picture shows, and all she had been accustomed to spend for when she had it coming to her each week.

I take such thoughtless extravagance as the breeder of hard times, and the sooner our young people, men and women, find out that it is not necessary to spend every cent they make, it will be a fortunate time for them and for the times. But will they ever learn it! I fear it will get worse, for people of today know very little of self-denial, or of the value of saving a portion of their income.

I was amazed when I recently read some figures taken from The Christian Herald, which gives us an idea of the extravagance of the American people. In order to give you the thrill of surprise that I received when I read these figures, I am giving them to you, as follows:

"Over a billion dollars for cigarettes—this is an average of $7.50 each for every man, woman and child in the country. Manufactur-urers spent over thirty-eight million dollars in advertising four different brands of cigarettes. Over $275,000,000 was spent for perfumery and face paint, over $650,000,000 was spent for jewelry, and $700,000,000 for candy. Over a billion dollars was spent for theaters and motion picture shows, over $90,000,000 for chewing gum, and nearly a billion for ice cream and soft drinks. Of course it cannot be presumed that all this money was spent sinfully, for some jewelry is useful, ice cream is listed as a food and candy is not wholly bad. Neither can it be presumed that by any means all this vast sum could be diverted to the support of the Church and worthy philanthropic enterprises. But it is interesting to note that the sum of the above is greater than the whole amount spent in America for churches, schools, hospitals, asylums, and all philanthropic work. And when thoughtless people complain about the cost of various things like churches and schools it is a good answer for such to remark that these are not what consume our money but that we make ourselves poor by buying things we could do without."

America is a prosperous nation, but she is undoubtedly spending her money for that which is not bread. What shall the harvest be for those who fling to the winds of fashion and pleasure, that which represents eight hours a day, day in and day out. I have a notion that our "hard times" are just beginning if our people do not learn to appreciate their responsibility of being more economical and sensible in their expenditures. We'll see!

The North Carolina Christian Advocate, writing along the line which I have, has the following to say:

"It is said the times are so hard just now in Texas that some of the girls are not able to buy silk stockings and being unwilling to wear rayon or cotton they wear none at all. In North Carolina the times are so hard that a good citizen cannot find a place up town to park his car. Times are hard, but nothing is quite so hard as to find parking space. Times are so hard that you cannot get a seat at the movies unless you go early in the evening. Times are so hard that the farmers cannot buy both plows and radios, but they must have radios in order to keep up with Amos and Andy and Madam Queen. Times are so hard that people cannot pay their debts, but they just have to go to the football games. These are certainly hard times when it takes all the money one can get hold of to buy luxuries and he has nothing left to provide the necessities of life. The times will continue to be hard as long as paupers try to live like princes, and common folks adopt the habits of spendthrifts. We need some 'thrif' with the 'spend' left off and we will soon be on the road to happiness and prosperity."

You will see from the above that I am not the only one who is probing near the sore spot of the "hard times" ailment.

Putting God's will first never narrows a life. It broadens any life. God's Kingdom lays hold of everything that can enrich one's nature. Many things that would be nothing but hindrances, if we let them take first place, are helps when they are put in the second place, and God's will is put in the first place and directs them.—Selected.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE BOY WHO RECOMMENDED HIMSELF.

A gentleman advertised for a boy to assist him in his office, and nearly fifty applicants presented themselves to him. Out of the whole number, he selected one, and dismissed the rest.

"I should like to know," said a friend, "on what ground you selected that boy, who had not a single recommendation."

"You are mistaken," said the gentleman, "he had a great many. He wiped his feet when he came in, and closed the door after him, showing that he was careful."

"He gave his seat instantly to that lame old man, showing that he was kind and thoughtful."

"He took off his cap when he came in, and answered my questions promptly, showing that he was polite and gentlemanly."

"He picked up the book, which I had purposely laid on the floor, and replaced it on the table, showing that he was orderly. All the rest stepped over it. He waited quietly for his turn, instead of pushing and crowding."

"When I talked to him, I noticed that his clothing was tidy, his hair neatly brushed, and his finger nails clean. Do you not call these things letters of recommendation? I do."

THE BRAVE THREE HUNDRED. Mrs. Geneva Mendenhall.

Whenever the children of Israel did evil and turned to the worship of idols, the Lord left them to suffer for their sins. One time when the people had set up altars to Baal and Asherah, for seven long years the Midianites or Arabs swept over their land, carrying off their grain and even destroying the grass of their pastures, so that the people had to hide in caves in the mountains.

One man named Gideon who had succeeded in raising a little grain slipped out to an old weed-covered wine press to thresh it out before the Arabs could find him. Suddenly he saw an angel sitting under a tree. The angel spoke, calling his name, and told him that God had chosen him to save his people. Gideon brought a kid and some bread and set them upon a stone before the angel, but instead of eating, the angel touched them and they were consumed with fire. Gideon would have been very much frightened but a voice spoke to him saying, "Do not fear, for I am with you."

Gideon's first act was to tear down the altars to the idols and build an altar to the true God, calling on the people to turn from the worship of Baal. Then he sent messengers throughout the tribes calling the men to come and help him drive out the Midianites. Gideon drew his army up on the side of Mt. Gilboa, but before going into battle he asked God to give him a sign that he was with his people. That night Gideon put out a fleece of wool. In the morning the fleece was wet with dew and the grass about it was dry. But Gideon wished to be very sure, so the next night he put the fleece outside again. And the next morning the grass and bushes were wet, while the fleece was dry.

God told Gideon to cut down his army, so Gideon told all the men who were afraid to go home, and about two-thirds of all the men went home. Then God told Gideon to march the rest of the men down to the brook and to divide them into two companies according to the way of their drinking. As the men drank, most of them threw aside their armor and knelt to dip up the water in both hands. But a few of the men held their spear and shield in one hand and snatched up a drink of water in the other, as they marched across the brook. God told Gideon to use only the men who drank quickly while watching the enemy. And of them there were only about three hundred.

That night Gideon slipped in to the enemy's camp and found from the men's talk that they were sore afraid of the Israelite's army. The next night he divided his men into three groups, and to each man he gave a pitcher in which was concealed a torch. At a signal from him, his men closed in on the camp of the Midianites. With a wild shout his men broke the pitchers, flashing the lights in all directions, and startling their frightened enemies from their sleep. The army of Israel followed the Midianites in their wild flight toward the river until it cut them off and utterly destroyed them. After this the Midianites never again ventured to leave their home in the desert to make war on the tribes of Israel.

1. Where was the home of the Arabs or Midianites?
2. Why did Gideon ask God for so many signs?
3. How many judges ruled in Israel before Gideon?
4. How many judges ruled in Israel altogether?

Dear Aunt Bettie: As this is my first letter I want to see it in print. I am ten years of age. I have dark brown hair and eyes. I go to school at Corn Creek. My teacher is Mary Lou Baxter. I like her fine. As this is my first letter I will close. I hope Mr. W. B. is out eating his lunch when this arrives.

Dorothy Joyce.
Rt. 3, Milton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I will write you a few lines. I hope you are real well. I am going to school. I am with my father; he wrote this letter for me as I cannot write so well. We had an awful drouth this summer. Did not make scarcely anything. I have no money, but thank the Lord I have had lots of friends. I want to ask all of the readers of The Pentecostal Herald to pray for us. I am sending my love to all of the girls and good mothers who read this. I have nothing else to give. I thank all of my good friends for their love and kindness in the past. If we never meet on earth may we meet in heaven where all will be peace and love and joy.

Nancy Cave.
Novum, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a little Kentucky girl join our happy band of boys and girls? I am a girl twelve years old. My birthday is January 28. Have I a twin? If so, write me. I have black hair and gray eyes and weigh 87 pounds. I go to school at Corn Creek. My teacher is Mary Lou Baxter. I like her fine. I am in the seventh grade. Our pastor is Rev. Prevol. The one who guesses my middle name I will write to them. It begins with B and ends with R; it has five letters in it. Mother takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. I have two brothers and two sisters. I like to go to school. Any one that guesses my name, write and I will answer. Please send some snapshots.

Rt. 3, Milton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been such a long time since I was with you, I'm almost sure most of you have forgotten me. When I greeted you last I was in the Southland at a little place called Waynesboro, Miss., but now I am writing you from St. Louis, Mo. It's been over a year since I was home. However it seems longer than that. It seems that mother, dad and home are a million miles away. O but I do get lonesome and get the blues, so to speak, at times, and don't know what to do with myself. When I get that way the only place I can find to drive away the blues is at church. We do not have services at my church (Epworth M. E.) through the week, so I go to a Pentecost Church. I like to go there, because you hear the real gospel of Jesus preached and you can feel the presence of God in each service. Evangelist Grace Singleton and party of Texas, just closed a revival here. Some of you may know her. I think she and the two girls with her are just fine. I remember one night of the meeting very well. Two of the girls were singing, people got blessed and began to shout, so they just had a real old-time shouting meeting. On our way home some one said, "Do you really think those people were as happy as they seemed to be?" I said, "Surely they are." And you really find happiness and one of the greatest pleasures in doing the Lord's work and witnessing for him.

As I sit here in my cozy room today, I think of the terrible situation this country is in now. Everywhere men and women walking the streets from day to day looking for work. On all sides you see people sleeping in the parks, on the roadside and just any place they can find. The highways are crowded with people on their way somewhere, most of them not knowing themselves where they are going. Nothing to eat and no clothes to keep them warm. But what has put the country in such a condition? I may be wrong but I believe one word will answer it—SIN. I believe God has sent this trouble upon the country to awaken people and to make them realize the great need of salvation. People are needed everywhere to carry the gospel message. Jesus is coming soon and we may be surprised how soon, too. I often wonder how many will not know him? To many he's a perfect stranger, but you know I'm glad that I know him, not as a stranger, but as a friend at all times. As I sit here I can think of the many places I could be today, (as I'm not working) enjoying the pleasures of the world, theaters, club houses, machine driving, road-houses, ball-rooms. I'd rather a thousand times be here in my one little room reading or embroidering. That's the way I spend most of my time that I'm not working.

Would like to get reading material from any one who cares to send it; papers, tracts, books, or just anything. I'd love to get letters from consecrated young people of my age, or just anyone. Wonder what has become of my old correspondents? Have you forgotten me? I've not forgotten you. Love and best wishes to all of you, from an old friend.

Mattie Ree McCulley.
4035 Page Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Move over a little and let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls. This makes my second letter to you. I am twelve years of age, have blue eyes, dark brown hair and weigh 105 pounds. I go to school at New Hope. I am in the eighth grade. My teacher is Miss Allyn Pierce. She boards at my house. Our pastor is Rev. Prevol. The one who guesses my middle name I will write to them. It begins with M and ends with L. It has four letters in it. I have only one brother; his name is DeVon Gillum. He is seven years of age. We live with my father's parents. I like to go to school. I sit with Louvenia Jackson most of the time. Anyone that guesses my name write and I will answer.

Grace M. Ogden.
Rt. 2, Bedford, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading it, especially the cousins' letters. I am fourteen years old, and am a freshman at Tate High School. I go to Sunday school nearly every Sunday. I enjoy reading and writing poetry. Here is one of my poems.

There is no care up yonder,
The skies above are fair,
There isn't any worry—
Joy is everywhere!

Earthly joys are nothing
Compared to those above,
Heaven holds our treasures,
Peace, and Rest and Love.

As you journey forward
Toward that peaceful shore,
Let your boat be guided
By the Savior's oar.

Love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.
Hazel Owen.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a boy from Kansas enter your corner? I don't see many letters from around here. My parents take The Pentecostal Herald, and love it. I am eight years old. My birthday is July 27. I am in the third grade at school. My father is a Methodist preacher. I have a reward pin for five years of perfect attendance in Sunday school;

We live near the Colorado and Oklahoma lines out in the biggest gas fields of the U. S. I learned many Scripture verses, 23rd, 110th, and 1st Psalms, books of New Testament, etc., in Junior League last year. My mama was superintendent? I would like to hear from any cousins who care to write to me. I sure hope Mr. W. B. don't get me. I would like to see my letter printed.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little woman in the T. B. Sanitarium at Wichita, Kan. A Pentecostal Herald came to my hand and I enjoyed reading it very much. I only wish I was able to be a subscriber but I am poor in purse, but rich in faith. I gave my heart to him several years ago. I am glad I am washed in his blood and saved by his grace. I am afflicted with the T. B. I have been prayed for by numerous ones who are still praying. I am believing and praying if it be God's will; if not, I am willing to bear the cross. I enjoy the letters written by the boys and girls. Am glad so many are giving their lives to their Savior. We know not the hour he cometh. I am taking subscriptions for The Household Journal to make a little spending money. Any one reading this would like to help me, it is 25c per year. It would certainly be appreciated. I love to get letters and to write them. I am forty-three years old, five feet, four inches high, weigh 106 pounds; have black hair and eyes. Pray for me and I will pray for you. I am glad Bro. Morrison is better.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Schenectady girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I enjoy reading The Herald, especially page ten. I am seventeen years old, my birthday is July 16. Have I a twin? I am in the sophomore year in high school. I go to the Alliance Church and Sunday school. We had an evangelistic campaign in our church. Three of the girls out of our class were saved. I was one of them. This has been the happiest week of my life. It is my desire to go where Christ leads. I want to go to the Nyack Training Institute after I finish high school. I will answer all letters received.

FRANCIS.

Thomas Marshall Francis was born Feb. 28, 1846; departed this life Jan. 3, 1931, at his home at Christiansburg, Va. He only lacked about one month of reaching the age of 85. His sainted wife preceded him to the grave one year and eleven months. He was converted and united with the Southern Methodist Church about 1870 and has been a faithful and consistent member ever since. He had been an official in the Methodist Church and loved his church. His house has been a home for preachers of all denominations. Brother Francis did not dread death. He felt that he was ready to go. He had made peace with his God. He loved to read the Bible and the church papers. He was a great admirer of Dr. H. C. Morrison Editor of The Pentecostal Herald.

His funeral was held by his pastor, Rev. J. H. Lotspeich, at the home, January 4, 1931.

James H. Lotspeich, Pastor,
M. E. Church, South, Riner, Va.

LESLIE.

A life devoted to the cause of religion in Huntington and West Virginia was ended with the death of Rev. L. E. Leslie, 85 years old, who was the oldest living member of the West Virginia Methodist Episcopal Church Conference.

Mr. Leslie died at his home, 1004 Ninth avenue, after an illness of three weeks. Although his condition was serious, it was not considered critical until Saturday.

Funeral services were conducted from the First Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Charles G. Slater, pastor, assisted by Rev. P. Y. DeBolt, district superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, officiated. Burial at Woodmere cemetery.

Mr. Leslie was born in Chester Co., Pa., on December 28, 1845. After serving a number of rural churches as a circuit rider in the early years of his ministry, he came to Huntington 38 years ago from Fayetteville, W. Va. He had made his home here since.

At the last West Virginia Methodist Church Conference, Rev. Leslie was presented with the conference cane, which is awarded to the oldest living member of the conference. He has been a pastor for 55 years.

A few years ago when Rev. E. S. Dunham, D. D., of Delaware, Ohio, was writing for the Christian Witness, he mentioned Bro. Leslie's name, substantially as follows:

"When Rev. E. I. D. Pepper, D. D., was pastor of Arch Street Methodist Episcopal Church, in Philadelphia, a young man by the name of Lewis E. Leslie, having been to a holiness camp meeting and received the blessing of entire sanctification, joined Dr. Pepper's church, and because of his fiery zeal while there, Dr. Pepper saw the truth of second blessing holiness, and sought and found this pearl of great price."

Although having retired from service nearly fifteen years ago, Rev. Leslie was said to have married approximately 1,000 couples in Huntington during his residence here.

He leaves the widow, Mrs. Julia Hanley Leslie; one daughter, Mrs. Charles D. Foster, and two grandchildren, James and Julian Foster, all of Huntington.

RICE.

Mrs. Sarah Rice was born March 27, 1857, and departed this life Oct. 26, 1930. She was the daughter of Newton and Love Berry. She was married in April, 1879, to Dudley Rice, who passed to his reward 23 years ago. Mrs. Rice was converted early in life and affiliated with the M. E. Church, South. She lived a consistent Christian life. She had been in declining health for several years being afflicted with diabetes. She spent her last days with her daughter, Mrs. A. B. Meuser, of Madisonville, Ky., who so lovingly and tenderly cared for her.

Those who survive are one other daughter, Mrs. T. O. Ashmore, and one son, Morris K. Rice, and six grandchildren, Paul Rice, Charles Dudley, Ralph Bain Meuser, Louise and James Thomas Ashmore, and Thomas Rice, three sisters, Mrs. Hallie Neal, Mrs. Minnie Neal and Mrs. Helen Duncan.

She had many noble traits of character. Her life was modest and unassuming. She was a cousin of the writer and we always enjoyed having cousin Sarah visit us. She spent her last Christmas day in our home.

Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. A. C. Johnson, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. B. Meuser, and was laid to rest by the side of her husband in Rosedale cemetery at Dawson Springs, Ky.

Her cousin,
Mrs. E. L. Adams,
320 East Arch St., Madisonville, Ky.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Please pray earnestly for a family who is in trouble, that God may bless them and that their lives may be adjusted and that God may have a chance in their lives. Pray for me and mine. A Herald Reader.

Mrs. M. I.: "Please to pray for me and my daughter to be restored to health; and that my son may find employment."

Mrs. K. L. H.: "Pray that I may receive the part of legacy that is being withheld from me unjustly; also that I may receive a deeper insight into God's Word."

B. M. B.: "Please to pray the Lord to heal my little nephew, and that he may be saved."

M. J. V. K.: "Please to pray the Lord to sanctify me and use me for his glory."

A Reader: "Pray earnestly that my unsaved brothers and sisters and relatives may be saved. Pray for our church, that it may be a spiritual church."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VII.—February 15, 1931.

Subject.—Jesus the Friend of Sinners. Luke 7:36-50.

Golden Text.—This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. 1 Tim. 1:15.

Time.—Summer of A. D. 28.

Place.—Galilee.

Introduction.—In this lesson we find our Lord reclining at a feast in the home of a Pharisee. Some thoughts suggest themselves; and we jot them down.

1. John the Baptist would neither eat nor drink at such feasts; and the Jews declared that he had a devil in him. They did not approve his abstemious manner of living.

2. Jesus sometimes attended feasts in the homes of Pharisees, and sometimes among the most common people. Again, the Jews said that he was devil-possessed. The whim of a mob is past finding out.

3. Whenever Jesus attended a feast he dominated it. He did not go there for a frolic, but for an opportunity to preach the Gospel of the kingdom of God. Some of his greatest lessons were delivered at feasts. He had neither time nor inclination for the mere fun of a feast; but he did take time to bless a wedding, and preach truth to sinners while they feasted.

4. Men who love to feast and to mix with sinners have used the fact that Jesus sometimes attended feasts as an excuse for their own attendance upon such functions. The lesson is plain: When one goes for the purpose of leading men to God for salvation, there may be some excuse for going; but there is no reason why a Christian should participate in such affairs simply because he likes to do so. He must be about his Master's business.

5. Jesus Christ was God, and could always control himself and all others with whom he had to deal; but we are but men, and need to recognize our limitations and our weaknesses. Many a man has gone to utter ruin by attending feasts with the wrong crowd. Christians are a separate people. They must not be "unequally yoked together with unbelievers." There must be no fellowship between the saints of God and the children of Satan.

7. Compromise is one of the deadly sins of this age. King Solomon never forsook the worship of Jehovah; but he tried to mix it with the worship of the idols that his heathen wives worshipped, with the fearful result that, as far as we know, he lost his soul in the end. There are multitudes of church members today who desire to have their names on some church roll, but run after the card-table, the circus, the dance, the movies, tobacco, liquor, and almost anything else that the Devil can invent.

8. If Christians will always go to feasts in the same spirit, and for the same purpose that moved Jesus, there will be less danger; but even with that proviso, they must be cautious.

Comments on the Lesson.

36. One of the Pharisees.—Do not forget that the Pharisees were a proud set of hypocrites who considered themselves about the only worthwhile followers that God had on earth. Jesus seems to have a pretty severe contempt for them. Sat down to meat.—Reclined on the left side, resting on the elbow, with the feet protruding backward from the table. The Jews did not sit at meals.

37. A woman in the city.—Judging from these words and from the context, I suppose she was a fallen woman. Brought an alabaster box of ointment.—No doubt this had cost the woman a considerable sum of money; but she had come to understand what Jesus might do for her poor, lost soul; and nothing was too precious for him. O that we might enter into her spirit. Jesus is more than all this world to every saved sinner.

38. Stood at his feet weeping.—Terrible conviction for sin had seized upon her soul. Dry-eyed conviction for sin does not usually mean much. Began to wash his feet with tears.—This service was usually performed for guests by a servant of the household; but this woman not having a basin of water used her tears. Wiped them with the hairs of her head.—Not having a towel, she did the best she could. Our best is always acceptable with him. Kissed his feet.—This was a sign of her devotion to the Lord. Anointed them with the ointment.—She was doing her best. Surely the Lord was highly pleased with her devotion. No wonder he blessed her.

39. When the Pharisee saw it.—No doubt he was watching for a chance to pick some flaw in the Master; and this familiarity of the woman in dealing with her Lord was a little too much for his Pharisaical soul. If he were a prophet.—He was too little and mean to see anything good in such a transaction; therefore concluded that Jesus was not even a prophet. Some are so little that they simply cannot see a big thing at all. I doubt if a flea can see Pike's Peak. It is too much for his eyes. She is a sinner.—It is almost amusing to see how fearful some soiled folk are in regard to contact with other soiled folk. No; that is not where the fear is. They are afraid of public opinion. I have noticed that when some fallen woman approaches the altar as a seeker, very few persons can be induced to even come near and join in prayer for her salvation. They will crowd even to suffocation some beautiful society belle; but the soiled dove can do its own fluttering. Maybe there are still a few Pharisees above ground.

40. Simon.—I judge that was a common name among the Jews; but we are not told who this Simon was. I have somewhat to say unto thee.—This was but a polite way of asking permission to tell him something important; and Simon granted his request.

I prefer to comment on these verses en masse. Creditor here stands for God. The two debtors are two sinners, the Pharisee and the woman. Jesus acts with some sarcasm on the notion of the Pharisee that he was much better than the woman. He (the Pharisee) was willing to admit that he owed fifty pence (was guilty of some small sins); but in his estimation the woman was a far greater sinner. In financial terms she owed ten times as much as he did. The Lord represents God as forgiving them both, and requests the Pharisee to tell him which one he thought would love God most. He had the fellow in a trap; for there was but one sensible answer that he could make. Of course, the one who had been forgiven 500 pence would love most. Fearing lest the Pharisee might not make the full application, Jesus made it for him: "Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet: but this woman hath washed my feet with her tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head. Thou gavest me no kiss: but this woman since the time I came in hath not ceased to kiss my feet. My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment. Wherefore I say unto thee, her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little." The latter party was the Pharisee who had received no forgiveness at all. If I am not mistaken, the lesson teaches that, really and truly, love for Jesus Christ begins to spring up in the heart of a sinner before he is pardoned.

48. Thy sins are forgiven.—Wonderful words; gracious words. When the Holy Spirit speaks them to the sinner's inner consciousness, the joy of heaven breaks loose within him. Who can ever forget that happy day?

49. Who is this that forgiveth sins also?—They were both right and wrong. Wrong in not believing in his Deity; but right in their teaching that none but God can forgive sins. When mere men arrogate to themselves authority to pardon the sins of their fellow-men, they become most miserable impostors. This poor world has been cursed by such deceivers for ages.

50. Thy faith hath saved thee.—Faith is the connecting link between a penitent sinner and a merciful God for pardon. Thank God, that is all he needs. At that last step no mortal man (not even an angel) can help him. But it is blessed to know that the Holy Ghost can, and does, assist him. Go in peace.—No more beautiful words have ever been spoken or written. When the Holy Ghost speaks to the troubled soul: "Peace, be still," there is a gracious calm. Thank God forever.

PERSONALS.

J. F. Mincy: "I am a local preacher in the M. E. Church, South, in good standing. I desire to be busy for the Master and am willing to go anywhere the people need me for revival work. Only entertainment and transportation are all that I ask. I can furnish references if desired. Address me, Corinth, Miss., Rt. 6, Box 80."

Rev. W. E. Lytle: "We begin a meeting in Cheboygan, Mich., February 1, and will continue over the 15th. Special prayer meetings were held for some time and we are believing for a great revival. We have some open dates for spring and summer; those wishing our services may address us, Troy, Ohio."

Bud Robinson: "This is to notify you that my good friend and brother, Rev. J. L. Sanders, of Memphis, Tenn., is now open for calls as an evangelist. Bro. Sanders is a beautiful brother, a splendid preacher and he should be in revival work all the

ONE THOUSAND FAMILY ALTARS.

Family prayer is a real expression of simple, living faith, and a fine example of true devoted worship. The sacred family altar in every church member's home would mean a greater spiritual awakening and a mightier revival of pure and undefiled religion throughout America, than Luther, the Wesleys, Charles Finney or Bishop Asbury ever dreamed of.

What wonderful revivals there were in those days when the people prayed in their homes! Sacred in our memory is the home where we knelt in the circle of holy family worship! The writer is out for "One thousand family altars." Allow a humble minister and brother, to beseech other pastors and ministers to encourage, exhort and urge our people to pray in their homes. The people's hearts are not only hungry, but many are sad, or broken. . . . If those holding family worship will send their name and address, the writer will try to help you.

THANKS, AND A STATEMENT.

My sincerest thanks are herein expressed to each and every one who contributed to my relief in my emergency at our recent Conference, and since, for one gift has been received since Conference, and anyone hereafter contributing, as I understand others who were not prepared at the time, said they would, may consider themselves included in our heartfelt thanks.

My retirement (a word I like better than superannuation) was a surprise to me. I'm not entering a complaint, far from it. I abide by the judgment of my brethren with "charity toward all, and malice toward none." The die has been cast and I am reconciled. It is not all a calamity to be relieved from the gruelling sense of responsibility which the Apostle Paul expressed as the climacteric of enumerated trials,—“that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches.” To battle with the idiosyncrasies, the peculiarities, and the contraities, etc., of the various members of the various churches for thirty-eight years entitles one to a surcease from sorrow, toil and pain.

However, it is only by the wildest stretch of the imagination, it appears to me, that the Committee on Conference Relations could consider me at the stage, and in condition for retirement, when the law says, “A superannuate preacher is one who is worn out in the itinerant service.” Again, “A superannuation shall not be granted by an Annual Conference except on the recommendation of the Committee on Conference Relations, nor shall this committee in their decision consider anything else than this question, viz: Is the applicant really worn out in the itinerant service?” For six months I had done full work, and during September, the last month of the Conference year, when “annual tug” is on I had tramped the hills and hollows in and about Jackson in an heroic effort to help the church in her financial deficiency, and was slowly improving from my breakdown one year before. Had the members of the Committee have been with me they would but have had a different consciousness. The case seemed to be made up before Conference, and nothing I could have said or done could have changed the order. The Conference is crowded and room needs to be made on the veriest pretext. Not a voice was raised in protest but my own. I did protest to the committee of the presiding elders who waited on me first; to the Bishop in private conference; and when my name was referred to the committee I courteously asked to address the Conference, which was accordingly granted, but before I had proceeded far I was courteously requested to desist, assured that the committee was competent to hear me and investigate the case thoroughly, and bring in a report. I immediately desisted and later appeared before the committee who on my appearance, said, “Be brief, Brother Crates,” and brief I was, for I think I speak fairly, when I say, I never lacked “terminal facilities.” No one heard my case; no one saw me in action as a pastor; and no one saw me in action in the pulpit but two and then only very partially.

Had I had the means on which to subsist I should have retired a year or two ago. It has never been my desire to hang on but rather to ask for retirement than to be retired. Never had a desire to round out a certain number of years. I am thankful to God for an unimpeachable record morally and administratively; that I never refused to go where I was sent, even though I had a setback of fifteen years, a few years ago; or that any place refused to receive me, and to cause any bishop any embarrassment by the disturbing of the appointments when made. Have kept my ordination vows, and have never been guilty of ecclesiastical politics,—the meanest in the world. Ecclesiastically, I can say, “I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith.”

Blessings on every one of you. In the language of an old chorus, “I am happy on the way.”

Sincerely,

J. W. Crates.

THE MILLS OF THE GODS.

I have just finished reading “The Mills of the Gods” by Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D. D. Most anyone enjoys a good, thrilling story, and in this, you will get a good picture of present-day conditions and what the future holds. Our young people have been reading, also seeing, in the immoral picture show such rotten stuff, that it is high time to direct their minds to things worthwhile. Character tends to final fixedness; what enters the mind through the eye, or ear, makes the same impression on moral character. The young people have looked at immoral pictures until they have concluded, many of them, that they can do the same thing.

“The Mills of the Gods” is a book that should be read by the young people. I advise parents to buy this book, read it, then ask their children to read it, and tell you what they think of it. They will be impressed with the Hero of the story and his final victory for righteousness and clean living. The book is published by The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., and sells for only $1.50. C. R. Crowe. Member of the Louisville Conference, M. E. Church, South.

For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. 2 Cor. 4:17.

ARNOLDS' COMMENTARY

A very practical aid for the busy teacher. It is rich in suggestions and sets forth the lesson in a very pleasing manner. We consider this the most spiritual exposition of the Sunday school lesson. The hints to teachers, illustrations, blackboard exercises, questions, maps, etc., make this popular help a good all-round commentary at a popular price $1.00.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1931

By Amos K. Wells. Fifty-seventh Annual Volume.

To the many who are familiar with “PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES,” it would be sufficient to say that the standard of excellence which has characterized the work for more than half a century is fully maintained in the new volume.

The analysis and treatment of the lessons are clear and inspiring, carrying quotations from great Bible teachers. It is for teachers of all grades and contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help so compiled and tabulated that it can be effectively used. It has maps, pictures, and charts alone worth the price of the book.

This book is invaluable for the study of the Uniform Lessons. Price $2.00.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide recognizes no superior. If you have never used this wonderful commentary, try it for 1931.

No teacher will be unprepared who uses this extraordinary commentary. The treatment of the lesson never becomes dull or uninteresting. The topics are always fresh and appealing.

Many thousands of up-to-date teachers buy two or more of the best commentaries and find it pays. Whatever you do, don't leave out Tarbell's this year. Price $2.00.

The Gist of the Lesson

An excellent commentary by R. A. Torrey. It is a concise, boiled-down commentary for the busy teacher. It takes the text of the lesson, each verse separately, and illuminates it. It gives the teacher many good ideas. Price 35c.

SINAI, CALVARY, AND PENTECOST.

By The Editor.

YOU men who have been objecting to holiness, even ridiculing the idea of a man living a holy life in the body, magnify the power of Satan and sin, and minify the power of Jesus Christ and the atoning merit of his blood. You enlarge on human wickedness and diabolical power, and seem to forget that "God hath laid help upon One who is mighty to save to the uttermost."

* * * *

There is a class of men who seem to delight in defending sin and condemning holiness. It does not occur to them that their method of thought, conversation, and preaching belittle Jesus Christ. No one claims that there is any salvation outside of Jesus, and all who claim a full redemption, confess their utter inability to save themselves, and proclaim Jesus Christ as their only hope.

* * * *

It glorifies Jesus Christ to exalt him over all devils, and all sin, and all human weakness, and all untoward circumstances, and all adverse conditions and surroundings, and all entailed depravity, and all inherited tendency to evil, and all corruption and defilement of the flesh. Jesus Christ is more than an equal to all the combinations of evil without and within. Jesus Christ is omnipotent. He has said: "Nothing is impossible with God," and "All things are possible to him that believeth."

* * * *

It is high time that preachers of the gospel, Bible teachers and church members, come to know enough about Jesus Christ, his Godhead, the price he paid for our redemption, the power of his resurrection, the value of his atonement, to exalt him above all devils and all men and all sin and boldly and joyfully proclaim him able to "cleanse from all sin."

* * * *

This world needs a great Savior. Satan is powerful, human depravity is deep and awful, and the surroundings on this sinful earth bring to bear fearful pressure against the heaven-bound soul. The evil influences about us are startling; the evil tendencies within us are many; we need a great deliverer; we need a Christ who could make clay of the spittle and anoint the eyes of the blind and make them see. We need a Christ who, with a word, could hush a stormy sea into restful calm; a Christ whose wonderful hands could break a few loaves and fishes and feed a multitude. We need a Christ who could calmly walk the glassy waves of Galilee, touch the bier and raise the dead, stand at the mouth of the sepulcher and, at his command, empty its dark recesses of its victim, loose him and let him go as a witness to the omnipotence of his Lord. In Jesus of Nazareth, the Son of Mary, begotten of the Holy Ghost, one and equal with the Father, the crucified and resurrected Lord, we have such a Christ. Let us preach him to the people and witness everywhere to his saving and sanctifying power.

TOO GREAT TO BE LOST!

It matters not what country he or she was born in, or what language they may speak, all human beings created in the image of God, however that image may be marred by sin, have been redeemed by Jesus Christ on the cross of death, and are great beings, too great to sin, but sinning, too great to be lost.

Christ died for every one of them. We must hasten to find them in all the wide world and let them know of the love that bled and died for their redemption. Let the lowest and the vilest be pardoned, cleansed and filled with the Holy Spirit and you will realize that they are great. Remember all eternity stretches out for growth and enlargement of everything that uplifts the soul. All human beings are great—too great to be lost forever. Let us hasten to the rescue.

H. C. Morrison.

These pleaders for sin, these excusers of carnality, these exalters of the devil and belittlers of our Lord, speak at too far a distance. They have not become closely enough acquainted with the Almighty. When Sinai was wrapped with the glory of his presence, Moses and the children of Israel did exceedingly fear and quake; none of them wanted to commit any sin; they were filled with holy awe, they realized the nearness of God and trembled in his presence. The very thought of sin was horrible. There is a revelation of God by the power of the Holy Ghost that destroys all desire for sin, that makes the soul to bow down in the depth of humility and self-abnegation and cry out, "God be merciful to me a sinner." Men who have gotten close to God, who have been awakened in their souls and realized that his awful holiness fills the universe, have learned a deep and valuable lesson; they know something that cannot be taught by argument, or reason, or illustration; they have touched the source of power, and have learned in the depths of their souls the hatefulness of sin. Blessed are they who have thus been filled with a sense of his presence and his holiness, and who, in sackcloth and ashes have despised and loathed their own wickedness, grieved over their transgressions, lamented, and in horror, turned away from their sins. Such people have learned some theology that is not taught in the school; yea, these deeper lessons must be gotten at the throne of God.

* * * *

When Jesus Christ was hanging on the cross with spittle on his face, and blood in his hair, and nails in his hands, and the mob ridiculing his agony, and the Marys and devout women and the broken-hearted John were standing appalled in the presence of his death agony, did they want to sin? Was there any tendency or inclination in them to get away to some place of worldly amusement, or wickedness? Nay! nay! There is a strange and wonderful power in the Holy Ghost to bring before the human soul the crucifixion of Jesus, the death agony of the Lord; to turn the wheels of time backward and annihilate space, to lift Golgotha's brow, with its rugged cross and bleeding victim, before the startled eyes of the convicted sinner. The poet expressed it thus:

"I saw One hanging on the tree
In agonies and blood,
Who fixed his languid eyes on me,
As near his cross I stood."

Blessed are they who, illuminated by the Holy Spirit, have beheld the agonizing Christ, to whom his death and sufferings have become an awful reality. Not because they have traveled in Palestine, or read the New Testament story, or heard the preacher from the pulpit, but because the Spirit of God hath revealed it unto them. Because the Holy Ghost hath taken the things of Christ and shown them his deity, his humanity, his holiness, his sufferings, his death, and depths of the shame and sorrow into which he entered, and the glorious power there is in him to save from sin. Then they will believe in his power without doubt.

* * * *

When the Holy Ghost fell in power at Pentecost and the hundred and twenty were filled and intoxicated with joy, and the forked flame of fire rested upon their heads, did they want to sin? Did they question the deity or the power of Jesus Christ? Were they good subjects to listen with pleasure to the cant and ridicule of higher critics? Would they have clapped their hands to the platitudes of sneering, side-whiskered Doctors of Divinity from the East or over the sea? Nay! Nay! How utterly impossible! The apostle Peter said on that occasion: "The promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all them that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Experience among men, and devout women not a few, down through the centuries, and throughout the Christian nations, and over in heathen lands today, demonstrates the words of the apostle to be true. The Holy Ghost is in the church of God today. He comes in definite baptism upon consecrated, trusting hearts, and applies the atoning merit. With divine fire he consumes dross, he illuminates and sanctifies, he makes Pentecost a glorious reality in the soul, which destroys all doubt about the inspiration of the Scriptures, the authority of the prophets, the deity of Jesus, and full salvation through his precious blood. He "Exalts the Lord high over all in hell, or earth, or sky; angels and men before him fall, and devils fear and fly."

* * * *

It was in the school of experience that men about Sinai learned how to hate sin, and at Calvary learned how to trust Jesus, and in the upper room of consecrated prayer and faith, received the Holy Ghost in the fulness of redemption. This settled their doubts, anchored their souls, put new songs in their mouths and stopped their guessing and philosophizings. The apostles of doubt, the people who ridicule, may be educated, they may have traveled, they may have investigated with great care, they may have believed in

REVIVAL AND REVOLUTION IN PANAMA.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I am writing this in Panama on the day of their Revolution. I have had some diversified experiences on French battlefields and martial law with bristling bayonets in Shanghai, but this is the first time I have gone through a Revolution, and notably the first time I have had a revival meeting stopped because of a Revolution.

The Republics of Central and South America have a way of changing governments totally unlike the method prevailing in the U. S. A. Their habit is to bring about a new regime by bullets instead of ballots. This now is the second Revolution since I came to Central America. Just after we finished our work in Guatemala a Revolution broke out and the government changed, and now in the midst of our second series of meetings in Spanish-speaking churches in Panama the Revolution came on and our meeting had to stop for the time being.

Panama has had a most diversified history. It goes back to 1519, when Pedrarias founded the city. It was sacked by Morgan the Buccaneer in 1671. For four centuries Panama has been an object of interest to the nations because of its Isthmus and the fact that only forty miles or less of it could be cut through and a canal could be dug thus uniting two great Oceans, the Atlantic and the Pacific. Thus Panama has been viewed with envious eyes by European nations, as well as America, for centuries.

A Revolution is not new to Panama because, since 1850, over 53 disturbances and Revolutions have occurred (53 uprisings in 57 years). President Roosevelt called attention to this when he sought to justify America's action in relation to the Revolution of 1902, just prior to the digging of the Panama Canal.

The Revolution of today (Jan. 2, 1931) evidently was occasioned by the waste, extravagance and corruption of the present government. The deposed President is F. H. Arosemena and the new President is Dr. Alfaro, a very distinguished lawyer and patriot, and highly esteemed by the people of Panama.

During the day handbills printed in red were distributed throughout the city. In this bill the revolutionists say: "'Accion Comunal,' a civic institution which from the beginning has had the advancement of Panama as its purpose, proposes today to attain its ideals. The clamor of the press has not been sufficient; denunciation of the defalcations which the former government has committed has not been enough; the revelations of peculations have not suffered and above all, the clamor against the complicity of agents of the government has gone unheeded.

"The people of Panama realizing that their geographic position and their international relations place them in a special sphere in which to realize their destiny requires only honesty, have resolved as an aspiration consummate with national sentiment, to make of the government of the country an institution that will respond to the collective conscience revealed by the constant clamor against the present order of things, and which because of its personal character, does not correspond to the national ideal which was the genesis of the inspiration of the Fathers of the country in 1903."

Now Panama is a very small country. In size it is about as large as Maine, smaller than Portugal, a little larger than Scotland or Ireland, and nearly three times the size of Belgium. Its total population is about half a million. Before the United States transformed Panama and made it a garden spot Panama was a place of jungle and disease and death. A writer, describing the Panama of the older days, says of it: "A land as feverish to the imagination as to the body is Panama. It is a land making a fitting environment to the deeds of conspiracy, piracy, loot, cruelty and blood that have principally made its history for centuries. This gloomy, God-forsaken Isthmus is a nightmare region." One descriptive writer has truly said of it that "it is a land where the flowers have no odors, the birds no songs; where the men are without honor and the women without virtue." He is not far wrong. Said another writer, "The birds brilliant as is their plumage, have no musical notes. The dense forests teem with bright-hued parrots, parrots and other birds which squeak and scream, but do not sing. There are beautiful orchids to be found in the swamps and jungles, fair to look upon but they have no odor. The oranges have green skins instead of golden; the reptiles and insects are often venomous and myriads of parasites are ever ready to invade the human body and bring disease and death."

I hope my reader will remember that the above words were written in the long ago before the United States came to Panama in the days of Theodore Roosevelt, and not only built the great Canal, but transformed Panama into one of the wonder spots of the Tropics where life is as free from disease and death as in the home land, and where multitudes of people come to behold a land made clean and new and beautiful and healthy through the wonder-working, almost remarkable, genius of Dr. Gorgas, that American of whom not only America is proud but the whole world bows in gratitude.

Referring again to the Revolution which broke out about three o'clock in the early hours of this morning (Jan. 2) let me say that everything went off very quietly. I think the number of lives sacrificed were about ten; of these most of them were police who defended the palace when the mob attempted to storm it. Among those who were seriously wounded was a young American reporter whose home was in Alabama. At this writing his life is hanging in the balance in Gorgas Hospital. In the morning just after breakfast at Balboa, Mr. Marshall, of the Union Church, decided he would drive over to Panama to see how things were and enquire how the mission folks were at the Sea Wall Church and School. I went along with him. All along the Canal Zone leading to Panama U. S. A. soldiers were on guard. Not an American soldier was permitted to enter Panama during the disturbance. Evidently the U. S. A. authorities had decided to keep hands off unless it became absolutely necessary to take a hand in preserving peace. When we came to the approach to Panama City our police told us that we could go in to the city at our own risk, but he advised us to keep out. We decided, however, to go in. We found all business suspended, banks, stores, etc., all closed. No Panama police were to be seen, instead at every corner and at conspicuous places young revolutionists with guns were on guard. The police had been overpowered and disarmed early in the morning and their arms distributed among the young rebels. Later in the day, the firemen with their flaming red coats, were put in control of the traffic and all the streets; these men carried no arms. There was no rioting, no shooting during the day. Women were evidently kept off the streets and everywhere the men lined the streets. No street car operated till towards evening. I think all the Catholic churches were open (as usual) and the Protestant churches were closed (as usual).

It has been thought strange that the United States troops did not come in and put down the rioting in the early morning, but there were two reasons for that; first, the revolutionists had cut all telephone and telegraph connections before they proceeded to do business, hence our authorities in the Zone did not get word of what was happening till the deed was done; second, the U. S. A. does not wish to interfere with internal matters of those little Republics unless conditions arise which endanger the general peace. In the Treaty of 1903 with Panama the U. S. A. has full right and authority to maintain public order in case the Republic of Panama should not be, in the judgment of the United States, able to maintain such order. The fact is that the United States acts as a kind of guardian angel to the little state of Panama, guarding it against disease (as the U. S. A. controls the water and sanitation of both Panama City and Colon) and protecting it against foes within or without which would in any way interfere with Panama in its relation to the big outside world.

As I took up the papers the next day (Jan. 3rd) everything has been settled; the old government has been turned out, the former President handed in his "irrevocable resignation," a President pro tem has been put in office. He has nominated his cabinet and the New President, Dr. R. J. Alfaro, who is the Minister of Panama in Washington, D. C., has been summoned from Washington to come home and take up the Presidency. Dr. Alfaro was elected first Vice President of the Republic in a previous election as he was a man highly esteemed by the people, generally, and the choice of the revolutionists it was both the logical thing as well as very fortunate, that he should succeed the deposed official as President.

Touching again our revival meeting in Panama. As things had quieted down I went over to the church to see what the outlook was for a meeting, but when I arrived at the church just a few of the faithful were there and we decided it was not wise to attempt a meeting. This is the first time in my experience when a revival meeting was stopped by a Revolution.

SOME THOUGHTS ABOUT MORAL REVOLUTIONS.

Let me begin these thoughts with a story from the Press which illustrates the fact that moral revolutions are happening every day through the regenerating power of God.

Bill was politely shown to a seat in the chapel one Sunday morning and staggered drunkenly into it. Despite his stupor the words of the different speakers began to penetrate his dumb brain. There was a chance for him—a chance to be sober—a chance for a new start.

Bill listened and then got up and staggered up the aisle. No one had given him an invitation. He interrupted the leader in his discourse by kneeling down in front of him. He fumbled in his pockets and got out the flasks of whiskey and set one on either side of him. He looked up at the leader and said, "I want to be sober. I don't want to be a drunkard any more."

The room was stilled in prayer. The leader prayed, ex-drunkards prayed, and Bill prayed. Five minutes after Bill knelt at that front bench, he arose to his feet a sober man.

"Ah," says some one, "that isn't possible. How could a drunken brain clear up in five minutes? How could a man stagger up an aisle drunk and arise five minutes later and walk down the same aisle sober?"

I don't know. I don't know precisely what happened to Bill, but I am dealing with facts and not with theories. I am reporting what I saw and heard. I certify that Bill arose to his feet a sober man and has been a sober man ever since. . . .

Bill could say with Paul, "By the grace of God I am what I am." 1 Cor. 15:10.

"His power subdues our sins;

And his forgiving love,

Far as the East is from the West,

Doth all our guilt remove."

We need a moral revolution today that will enable us to distinguish between real salvation and religion that is merely intellectual and nothing more than a moral opiate. Dr. E. Stanley Jones has said a good thing in the following words:

"Where religion is mainly a matter of tradition and orthodoxy, mainly something taken second-hand from others, it could easily become an opiate, dulling the senses and closing the eyes to truth, as has been the case to some extent in Russia, or again in Latin America. But when religion is a matter of personal experience, redeeming and renovating, then so far from being an opiate it becomes an eye-opener, it gives vision and power, and produces the real moral uplift upon which the true life of a nation depends."

We need a moral revolution that would bring us back again to the Ten Commandments. A leading Hindu paper in India wrote about Sunday in the following words:

"The solution of the problems of the world today depends upon the application of the spirit and mind of Jesus to those problems. If for five years or even less time everybody on earth followed the spirit and mind of Jesus about Sunday the world would be such a happy, blissful, joyous place that heaven would be begun here below."

Touching this Sunday question, I add this from an exchange:

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

By Rev. A. D. Shockley.

CHAPTER XV.

GATHERING UP THE THREADS.

It is about time that we gather up the threads of our narrative, which have been lying around loose while we have been following other threads, which have seemed to justify the departure from the orthodox style of story telling.

We will therefore re-introduce the Rev. Jonas Silsbee, bachelor pastor of the People's Tabernacle, who by virtue of the fact that he is about to become a benedict, is entitled to special notice at this time.

It is about a year after the revival mentioned in a previous chapter. During that meeting, in the house-to-house canvass he engaged in at that time, he frequently enjoyed the privilege—which he appreciated more and more each day—of meeting a lady to whom he was attracted from the very first. Frequent meetings, rather by accident than design on the part of either, made them acquaintances, and in time, something more than acquaintances. But we see that we are not skilled in sketching love scenes, and so will briefly say that the Rev. Jonas Silsbee had met Miss Gertrude Holly, had fallen in love with her and is now to be married to her.

The People's Tabernacle is to be opened and decorated for the occasion, the senior secretary of the Home Missionary Society has been engaged to perform the ceremony, and the Rev. Jonas Silsbee feels that he is to be the most highly favored minister of his time.

He had kept his own counsel up to the time when he had decided to try his fate with the lady of his love, and only then advised with the deacons of his church who were discreet men and wholly devoted to their pastor. So it happened that he electrified his audience one Sunday by announcing his marriage, which was to take place in the church on the following Wednesday evening.

Miss Holly was only slightly known to the membership of the People's Tabernacle—in fact only a few of them had ever heard of her, and even they knew nothing of her antecedents or her social standing. She had been spoken of as an earnest Christian woman, however.

Mr. Silsbee had been known as a finely educated gentleman of no mean talent as a preacher. The fact that he had risen from the humblest position to his present place by the force of his character and determination, if generally known had not hurt him materially with his parishioners. While not as eloquent, or so highly polished as Rev. Paxton, he was recognized as his peer in mental power and originality. His presentation of truth was effective from the fact that his illustrations always illustrated, and his conclusions were always legitimate. He was never dull or uninteresting because he filled himself with his theme and gave it to his hearers, heated by the fires of his own soul. Because of his earnestness and his increasing popularity with the masses, he had established himself in the hearts of his people as but few men are able to do.

His sister having been but recently called to the foreign field as the wife of a missionary, he felt the need of someone to look after those household arrangements which a man is never able to manage. But we are not going to have you believe that the Rev. Silsbee was only seeking a housekeeper or a laundress, the fact is he wanted a wife and thought he had found a jewel in the woman he was soon to lead to the altar and install as the mistress of his home and heart.

The fact that she was only a dressmaker never occurred to him, or if it did, cause him any uneasiness as he knew her to be a graduate from a woman's college, and fitted to adorn any station she might be called to fill. But there were some who shook heads wisely and feared Mr. Silsbee would hurt himself in society by marrying only a dressmaker. But when it became known that Miss Holly was a dressmaker from choice rather than from necessity, having an income from her father's estate of some thousand dollars or more, when presented to her after the ceremony was over and saw her ladylike composure and perfectly correct style, they threw their prejudices aside and cordially greeted her as their pastor's wife.

From what the reader has already learned of the character and gentleness of Miss Holly, she will be recognized at once as a true helpmate for an earnest clergyman.

Between Mrs. Silsbee and Mrs. Paxton there had always existed a warm friendship, and now that their work had become one, this friendship grew closer and sweeter. While the parsonage of Euclid Avenue Church was located in the most fashionable quarter of the city, and that of the People's Tabernacle in the heart of that section peopled exclusively by the laboring class, yet the two women came and went, to and fro from one to the other, as though society had not erected barriers between them or fixed a gulf which could not be passed without losing one's position among the "400."

Mrs. Silsbee now had time to devote to the people who needed sympathy and help, and it is no exaggeration to say that she added to her husband's congregation not a little by the gentleness of her manner and the kindly interest she took in the people she met.

Having now launched two of the characters of our story on the sea of matrimony, with bright days before them, we can leave them to their chosen work while we pick up another broken thread.

Upon his return home, after being liberated from the prison, Ralph Upright gave his father a complete history of his life from the time he began his course of deception and dissipation until the night of his arrest. The deacon was astounded by the revelation

"A man said: 'I can worship God far better on the golf-links or in the fields than in a church.'

"A friend standing by replied: 'I would have more faith in the sincerity of your worship if your fields brought drunkards, criminals, godless and careless men to Christ.'

"The church, one has said, through its sacred associations make it easier for us to touch the divine, and therefore easier to get in tune with the infinite.

"'It is not too much to say,' writes Dr. Macleod, 'that without Sunday the church could not, as a visible organization, exist on earth.'"

Ralph made and determined to do all in his power to purge the city of this foul blot upon its fair name.

In consultation with his pastor it was deemed advisable to begin by securing positive evidence against the reading-room proprietors in a quiet way—that is in a manner which should not arouse suspicion on the part of such proprietor. It was found necessary to employ detectives from other cities and employ men entirely unknown to the men engaged in the reading room business. It is not an easy matter to find men who will act a lie in order to convict a criminal or expose a crime. It took several months to secure evidence which would convict all the proprietors of the reading rooms, and it was thought best not to make any arrests until all were in the toils, as only by a sudden swoop on these houses simultaneously could the authorities hope to accomplish their overthrow.

So quietly was the business of securing evidence prosecuted that no one, not in the confidence of the authorities, had the least suspicion of what was going on.

Detectives of both sexes were employed because of the strictness with which the rules of the house were enforced to have separate rooms for the sexes, so that no scandal might be possible in connection with the conduct of the reading room. This rule was conspicuously posted in all these places and contributed largely to create public confidence—or rather to prevent suspicion.

Deacon Upright's connection with the still hunt tactics of the city authorities was that of a citizen having information implicating numerous people as being engaged in unlawful business and knowing of the ready facility with which all traces of their business could be obliterated, suggested a course of procedure, which he was willing to back with funds to render it effective.

In connection with ten other men of means, who had reason to desire the extermination of the evil from which they had suffered, an ample fund was furnished to secure the shrewdest detectives and to retain the best legal talent to be found.

In the meantime mass meetings were held in the largest auditorium in the city—previously mentioned—every Sunday afternoon, and addresses delivered by clergymen, lawyers, doctors, and others, on questions of temperance, social purity and kindred topics. By this means the public conscience was aroused and a sentiment in favor of right living created and strengthened. Perhaps no layman was more conspicuous in these meetings than Deacon Upright, nor were there any of the speakers more successful in holding the attention of the assembly and moving the hearts of the hearers than he. Speaking out of his own bleeding heart, his was the pathos that melted the hearts to which he spoke.

THE CONSCIENCE.

Rev. J. F. Michael.

"And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men."—Acts 24:16.

CONSCIENCE DEFINED.

THE term conscience occurs in our common version thirty times, and once in the plural form, 2 Cor. 5:11, for which we have in the original, sunedeists, compound of sun, together, and eideo, to see or know—in Latin conscio; whence comes conscience, the power of judging ourselves, and the relation in which we stand to our Creator and to our fellow-creatures—Benjamin Wilson.

CONSCIENCE ANALYZED.

The conscience features moral distinction. That is to say, the pointing out the distinction between right and wrong. Conscience features moral obligation which stirs to action, search, and allegiance. It features moral settlement—no peace until real settlement is made. It also features moral elements which have to do with our environment, teaching, and geography.

CONSCIENCE OF THE AVERAGE MAN.

The average man is little concerned about definition and analysis. One man says, "My conscience is like a plumb line." Another says, "My conscience is like a straight edge." Others will define this peculiar power with such terms as spirit leveler, hunter's compass, still small voice, the goad so often kicked against, and the moral scrutinizer of my conduct. Thus we have almost as many definitions as we have people. Whatever it may be called we know what is meant. All of which reminds us that every thinking person has a tabooring conscience. Even in the under world there are rules the conscience dare not violate. Powerful little fellow indeed—this thing we call conscience.

CONSCIENCE OF THE OVER-SENSITIVE.

One lady worried so much about that Scripture that refers to "idle words" that she confined her speech to yes, or no, as the occasion demanded. That much and no more. Can you imagine it? Another person becomes insane over the church question. Which church to join? The different views regarding the church upset him. So, in order to be absolutely sure he united with the Church of Christ, the one founded in the city of Jerusalem, A. D. 30, and organized in the city of Sweetwater, Texas, about A. D. 1838. So the church question with that party is forever settled, regardless of the statement of Jesus when he said I have sheep of another fold. Another party almost turned dietician when she started out to cure all diseases by the regulation of eating. Results—nervous wreck. One dear brother could not attend worship at another church, because his conscience so attuned to the melody of heaven, refused to let him cross the threshold of the synagogue of Satan. A local Methodist preacher answers the invitation of some deacons of another denomination to conduct a revival, one hundred souls are converted to Christ, all of whom united with the churches of the town. But imagine the stir in the community when the leading Elder of that denomination arrives and threatens the fumigation of the pulpit because a Methodist heresy preacher had occupied the pulpit for two weeks. My conscience, said he, I can't stand it. But he did and lived on—until he died. That brother's conscience reminds me of the big ben clock which I set to alarm at five A. M. Did it alarm? Sure, but I missed the train due to the fact the clock registered fifteen minutes late. Some people's conscience is always "going off," but like the big ben clock, missing the mark. A conscience, like a clock, needs timing. Let all get in tune with God, the holy Trinity, the Bible, then when conscience strikes we will not miss the train. To make a long story short the conscience needs educating. It's passing strange, but nevertheless true, some people think the conscience must do the educating.

A BIBLE CONSCIENCE.

About one hundred years ago Uncle Sam started what is known as a conscience fund. Its birth is about like this, viz.: a Civil War veteran stole a mule from the government. Later in life he was converted to Christ, and at once sat down and wrote a check payable to Uncle Sam in the amount of $200.00 to pay for a mule long since dead. So the dead speaks, even though it be a mule. A young lady working on the draft board during the late world war, made away with $340.00 of Uncle Sam's money, but mind you after peace was declared between the nations she had no peace of mind and heart until she refunded that money. An American business man refunded $14,225.15, to Uncle Sam after he reached England. Why? He said his conscience forced him to refund the money. It's a powerful conscience that makes a man do that, but no stronger than the conscience of a little girl that walked up to the post-office window and paid two cents for a stolen postage stamp. The post-master would have never known the whereabouts of that stamp had not the little lady heeded her conscience. Steve Katonka, after he and his so-called wife had killed two young men, took their car and made a complete get away; and from all accounts was absolutely safe so far as the law was concerned. But later wrote to the sheriff of San Juan Co., N. M., to come and get him. He had had no peace of mind since the crime was committed. I saw Steve led upon the scaffold, the rope placed round his neck, the sheriff trip the door and the body fall through the trap and dangle amid air until pronounced dead. Steve might have been living today had it not been for that strange power called conscience. Doubtless you remember Prof. Marvin was reported accidentally drowned. The real facts of the case were not disclosed until the gospel was preached to an Eskimo, and this Eskimo's conscience became alive to the enormity of the sin of murder, and then he confessed that he shot and killed Prof. Marvin. Thus the mysteries surrounding the death of this distinguished man were, after sixteen years, brought to light. They say it's their religion that compells them to confess. Truly a Bible conscience is careful not to offend God or man. The Christian must live with his conscience and it is a hard creature to live with if abused. To continue the abuse of the conscience means that it will leave you, perhaps never to return. Who knows? However, it never leaves the soul until that soul by constant disobedience sears it through and through. The conscience is said to be weak when knowledge is limited, pure when free from accusation, and evil when polluted with guilt. The Bible speaks of a good, pure, weak, defiled, and seared conscience. It must be a desperate state indeed when one's conscience becomes seared. The term in the Greek is a strong one implying the searing with a red-hot iron. Some try to evade the issue by saying it is a figure of speech.

But, what cauterization does to the flesh of man; a constant repetition of sin will do to the conscience—brand it to such extent that the image and likeness of the Holy Ghost will be completely effaced.

PAUL'S CRITERION.

What was good for Paul, in his day, is likewise good for us, even today. To live a life void of offence toward God, and toward men, is a most wholesome feeling, comforting thought, and happy state. Such an one need not fear to stand before the open mirror night and day for to do so is to reveal the image and likeness of the triune God. But when the conscience is not right a scrutinizing view of the All-seeing Eye discloses a desperate state. Paul, your philosophy of life has not been improved upon! May we not "Herein exercise ourselves, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men."

*****

FACING THE ENEMY.

LUDIE DAY PICKETT, Pres. Ky. W. C. T. U.

*****

THE issue, socially and politically, before the American people today is Prohibition. Since the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment to our National Constitution the liquor forces have been fighting the law with an ever-increasing intensity.

Never before in all the history of the fight to rid our nation of the curse of the liquor traffic, has there been such a complete organization of the enemy. This enemy is Hydra-headed but is working in perfect unison with combined force. We might name these heads to good advantage:

(1) Dram-drinkers and Drunkards. Naturally these people do not like the Prohibition law. They have difficulty getting their drink. After they get it, they are afraid of it for more reasons than one,—it may mean arrest,—a jail sentence or a fine, or both; it may contain a deadly poison and mean blindness or even death. This group, however, is negligible and left to themselves without power.

(2) Brewers, Distillers, and Saloon-keepers. Those who have in the past and would again fill their coffers at the expense of helpless women and little children; those who care more for the blood-money they receive than for all the sacred institutions of their land and country.

(3) Selfish Millionaires; who in order to save their incomes and corporations from taxation would bring back the legalized liquor traffic with 3c a glass, tax on beer, willing to place the tax on the poor victim of drink and his impoverished family that their millions may pile up to corrupt the world.

These groups are largely headed up in the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Mr. Staton of this organization has said, "On our board are individuals, who either in the management of their own personal affairs or in the broad general direction of corporations in which they are interested, direct the management of forty billions of dollars, and employment and occupation of three million employees."

Mr. Irene DuPont, who is a member of this board, made the statement that one of his companies "would save ten millions of dollars in corporation taxes annually if we would get the 3c tax per glass on beer." He further said, "Had we pursued such a course licensing and taxing liquor at a figure no higher than Great Britain for the last eleven years, there could have flowed into our government treasury seventeen billions, six hundred fifty-four million dollars." No income tax or corporation tax would have been necessary. Greed! Insatiable greed!

We must remember that we are not fighting the liquor forces of the United States alone but the liquor forces of the world. Eleven nations have organized to fight prohibition in America. They come to our shores, use our newspapers, our magazines, and our radios to break down our laws and undermine our constitution.

Closely allied with the organized enemy against Prohibition, we find the would-be politicians, men who are in no way fitted for public office, but are there because the money of the liquor power has put them there, and for the sole purpose of fighting Prohibition.

We still have another group allied with the liquor forces. "Society folk" we hear them called. Their cellars are empty. Pre-prohibition liquor all gone. They are afraid of bootleg liquor, and perhaps too, they do not like to be classed with the criminal but are not willing to obey the law, so join the forces to fight it.

We mention only a few of the things the enemy is doing today to undermine the law. They have tried in every way to prove the Eighteenth Amendment and Volstead Law unconstitutional. However, the A. A. P. A. according to one of their officials, have given up until "time and nature have made changes enabling us to go before a tribunal which has not committed itself." Every effort will be made in 1932 to put a President in the White House who will appoint an Anti-Prohibitionist to the Supreme Court.

Every effort is being made to discredit the law and to convince the people that it cannot be enforced. The A. A. P. A. maintains a news office in Washington and gives a wet slant to every piece of government news that goes out. They now have on a regular campaign for discrediting men and women who are working for prohibition. Detectives are sent to hunt a skeleton in the family closet and bring it out to public gaze. If no skeleton is to be found, one is manufactured.

Mr. Buck of Baltimore, a director of the Association is quoted as saying: "The practical way to repeal the law is to organize for the fight, to put a wet in place of a dry member of Congress; ultimately we should be able to cut off all appropriation to the Prohibition unit of the Federal government and sooner or later get rid of the Eighteenth Amendment." And he adds, "I believe that is the only way."

Mr. Curran says: "Our chief plan is to convince our dry Congress that the country is mostly wet by holding state referendums." Speaking of last year's effort, he said, "Massachusetts will come first and for this, over a million dollars will be required." Is it any wonder Massachusetts lost in its fight?

Information brought out in the Congressional hearings last year shows that insidious effort is being made to control school appointments. Mr. Staton conferred with Mr. Dupont regarding superintendency of schools for Wilmington, Delaware, saying: "It occurs to me that our association should endeavor to help select a new appointee—thereby prevent the teaching of dry propaganda."

The churches, too, are to be disciplined for their part in destroying the saloon. This is, also, information uncovered by Congressional Hearings, "The question was raised whether or not the A. A. P. A. should proceed in California with a campaign against the churches whose property is not taxed on the ground that such property is being used for purposes other than religious." Mr. Staton says, "Nothing should be done in that matter until we have been able to lay down a definite rule of policy concerning the whole question of church taxation." Thus we see there is not a sacred institution in our land that these nullifiers of the Constitution would not trample under foot.

The liquor forces for months have held the Wickersham Report as a cudgel over the heads of the dries. Now that the report has been made, declaring definitely against repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, modification of the Volstead Law, government control or revision, the enemy is busy trying to impress the country that the report does not give the opinion of the Commission. Since the election of President Hoover, the wet papers have insisted that Mr. Hoover has never declared himself on the side of Prohibition. However, when presenting the report to Congress he said, "The Commission by a large majority does not favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment as a method of cure for the inherent abuses of the liquor traffic; I am in accord with this view. I am in unity with the spirit of the report in seeking constructive steps to advance the national ideal of eradication of the social and economic and political evils of this traffic; to preserve the gains which have been made, and to eliminate the abuses which exist, at the same time facing with an open mind the difficulties which have arisen under this experiment." . . . "My own duty and that of all executive officials is clear—to enforce the law with all the means at our disposal without equivocation or reservation."

Now the wet papers have the effrontery to suggest that in this statement Mr. Hoover does not say what he means or does not mean what he says.

Enough has been said to show every thinking man and woman that we face a crisis today in our governmental affairs. Shall greed rule? Or shall God's people arise to the need of the hour and proclaim by their lives and by their vote that this is God's country and by his grace righteousness shall rule!

Fellowship.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

Fellowship implies oneness of interest and sympathy, being in mutual harmony. There is a great variety of fellowships. There is fellowship among bootleggers, though selfishness makes them war upon one another. There is fellowship among gamblers, even while they match wits and skill with each other. There is fellowship among physicians, teachers, farmers, etc. There is political fellowship, though it is said that politics makes strange bedfellows. Above all others, is Christian fellowship!

A speaker at a public gathering of a nation-wide organization said that the keynote of their organization is "fellowship." They include bootleggers and "temperance" folks, swearers and preachers, Jews, Catholics, Protestants, agnostics, etc. And yet those diverse elements get together and "fellowship"—so they claim! To do that, they must mutually submerge their differences in the interest of fraternity, fellowship—which they put down above everything else. To the carnal mind, that sounds attractive.

God asks, "Can two walk together, except they be agreed?" Enoch and Noah each "walked with God," because they agreed with God; and many since have done the same. Christians are "called unto the fellowship of his Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord." Can we "fellowship" with the heterogeneous bunch above? Again, God asks, "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial?" Even in the church, spiritually minded people have no real fellowship with many others in the church, because they are worldly minded.

Not a few preachers and other church people bemoan their lack of "power." And, many of them "fellowship" with lodges, fraternities, orders, which exclude the Name of Jesus Christ from their ritual, in deference to Jews, Unitarians, etc. How can they expect power with God and men while doing that? Jesus said, "I send the promise of My Father upon you. . . . Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit. . . . Ye shall receive power, the Holy Spirit having come upon you." At pentecost, Peter, speaking by the Holy Spirit, said of Jesus, "having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he hath shed forth this." "Power" is by the Holy Spirit, and he is the gift of the Father, sent by Jesus. May we "fellowship" with the deniers of Jesus, and at the same time have the power of the Holy Spirit which only Jesus sends?

We read of Methodists, Jews, Catholics, Unitarians, etc., fraternizing in public on religious occasions, speaking from the same platform to the same crowd. The promoters of that kind of thing say it means all of us being one, according to Christ's prayer. Can those who believe in Christ as the only begotten Son of God, be one in Christ with those who reject Christ? Absolutely impossible! Jesus himself repudiates that! "Whoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." Christ's prayer for unity was limited to "those which shall believe on me. . . . that they may be one in us (the Father and the Son), that the world (of unbelievers) may believe that Thou didst send me." Will fellowshiping with the rejecters of Christ cause the unbelieving world to believe that he was sent to God? Yet, we are asked to subscribe to a "unity" of Christ and anti-christ!

Whatever "fellowship" there may be in these lodges, and in such conglomerate gatherings, is out of Christ, not in him. The Jews rejected and crucified Christ, and still reject him; and are now rejected of God, "broken off by unbelief" in him. The Unitarians, are no better. And the Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, etc., are ditto. We are sent to evangelize Jews and Gentiles alike. Bootleggers, gamblers, thugs, prostitutes, all kinds of sinners, are our responsibility before God. But, we cannot "fellowship" with any of them in sin, nor in rejecting the Deity of Jesus!

Sowing The Gospel Seed.

Oh who will help to sow the seed
That lost and guilty sinners need,
And which revival fires will feed?
Yes, in the lofty work make speed
And thus to Jesus' word give heed,
And thou shalt have reward indeed.

A. W. ORWIG.

"Speaking for myself"—do that just as little as you can. Speak for Christ.

It is possible that these meetings helped the cause of temperance by fixing the attention of those engaged in rum selling and soul ruining, while the secret mine was being prepared, and trains laid that should in a moment, utterly destroy their business. At none of these meetings was it even hinted that any other means than that of moral suasion and educating the people along moral lines was contemplated. It had even been hinted—if not broadly stated—that no permanent reformation could be accomplished until the public conscience was aroused and quickened.

That the public conscience was being aroused might have dawned upon the minds of those whose business was most likely to suffer from the awakening, if they had not been so successful hitherto in counteracting the influences set in motion through such matters. It is a safe prediction, however, that they will be the most surprised persons in the city when the hidden mine is exploded under them. For once, at least, the cunning of the rum-seller and his aids had been over-matched by the grim determination and patient labor of the better element in society.

It is a question easily answered, we think, as to the outcome of a struggle between virtue and vice, where the virtuous are as much in earnest and as well organized to do something as are the vicious.

God is always on the side of virtue, and he will bring the devices of wicked men to naught if his people will be earnest and consistent. But until men are brought face to face with their responsibility as keepers of their brethren, the wicked will continue to triumph in their wickedness, and the cause of righteousness suffer defeat. That reforms have succeeded has ever been because of the earnestness and persistence of the reformer, who will not be discouraged and turned aside by opposition and repeated failure.

The people of Glenview who were foremost in hunting down the destroyers of the young men and women, who had been decoyed into the dens of iniquity which did business in reading rooms, were devoted to the work as a Christian duty which must not be neglected or left for someone else to look after. When each individual soldier feels that the issue of battle to be fought depends largely upon his prowess, defeat will not often discourage the great army.

At last the day dawned that was to witness the first well organized effort to overthrow the hosts of the enemy of civic righteousness and social purity. A large number of special police had been secretly sworn in and carefully instructed as to their duties and the places of rendezvous and the moment of concerted action.

Twelve o'clock, midnight, was the hour set, and as the great clock in the tower of the city hall sent forth its deep-toned announcement that a new day was being born, Sept. 11, 18—, twenty-seven squads of armed police were quietly admitted by friends within, into as many resorts that had been marked for destruction by the city government. In everyone of these places were found, not only some young men and women who ought not to have been there, and had hitherto seemed quite respectable, but absolute proof of the character of the place and the wide extent of its ruinous influence.

A preliminary examination was had in the case of each, which consisted merely in the sworn statement of the police, and the remanding of the accused to prison pending efforts to obtain adequate bonds for their appearance in court to answer to a criminal charge.

As the whole "tough element" in the city stood behind the accused men and women, and money was plenty among their friends, it did not take long to procure the necessary bail, and they were released on bonds amply sufficient to secure their appearance at court.

Of course their first effort was to secure the best legal talent to manage their cases. Their surprise can be imagined when they discovered that every respectable lawyer in the city had been retained by the prosecution. Visits and telegrams to neighboring cities disclosed the fact that the best legal talent in those cities found it impossible, from the press of their present business, to undertake their defense, or were retained by the prosecution.

But vice is determined and obdurate, and though unable to secure the services of the greatest legal luminaries, the accused succeeded in enlisting an array of talent of no inconsiderable proportions. A few took the wiser course of pleading guilty and throwing themselves upon the mercy of the court, and were fined and admonished as the court seemed fit and right.

Excitement ran high while the preliminary examinations were being held, and increased greatly whenever any of the accused were held to answer to the next term of court. The trials were veritable battles of giants, and taxed the skill and eloquence of the counsel engaged on either side. It was felt to be a crisis in municipal affairs; the was like the awful stillness that sometimes prefaces the destructive tornado.

Space will not permit us to give a detailed account of the several trials, which owing to the thorough work of detectives and others, and the untiring vigilance of counsel for the state, resulted in conviction in every instance. It is needless to say that no single jury was allowed to sit on more than one case; that changes of venue were taken from time to time, and finally motions for new trials having been argued and denied by the court, notice of appeal to the higher court was given. It is sufficient to say that the higher court, having examined the evidence carefully, fully sustained the lower court in its findings, and the men were committed to prison to serve sentence pronounced by the court.

Enroute to the Orient.

In the year 1927 the writer stepped out by faith, resigning his position as Vice-President and Director in two of the leading banks in the city of Detroit, promising God at that time to step into any open door for real Gospel service.

Three years ago, in the providence of God, the Oriental Missionary Society with headquarters at 832 North Hobart Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., elected the writer as one of its trustees and also as its Secretary and Treasurer. For the past three years we have been busy in the office of the Society and doing deputational work with our various missionaries in the summer months. Now the door is open whereby Mrs. Rice and I are able to make the trip and visit the fields of our work, this having been made possible by some friends so that our entire steamship fare both going and coming has been provided for, for which we praise God.

We expect to attend the Spring Conventions of the Oriental Missionary Society's work at Tokyo, Japan, Seoul, Korea, Shanghai and Canton, China, where the Society maintains large Bible Institutes for the training of the natives. Since the founding of the work these Bible Institutes have trained over seventeen hundred ministers and Bible workers.

We sail from Los Angeles, Jan. 28, at four P. M., on the Tatsuta Maru—a large steamship owned and operated by a Japanese corporation known as the N. Y. K. line. We expect to return sometime during the month of May so that we will be back in this country in time for the various camp meetings where we have visited from time to time during the past three years in the interest of the great work of missions.

Just a word of testimony. How glad we are that we ever started out to walk with God, for as someone has said, "He who walks with God arrives at his destination." Years ago the Lord impressed upon my heart the cause of missions as one time in the city of Detroit I stated to a group of Christians that some day I was going to take a trip across the ocean in the interest of the Gospel. So this is just another incident of our God answering prayer.

Mrs. Rice and I solicit an interest in the prayers of the readers of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD and any of our friends desiring to write us can do so addressing us at 832 N. Hobart Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., or direct to our official headquarters in the Orient, P. O. Box 1489, Shanghai, China.

E. O. RICE.

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dries do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

WASHINGTON ON LAW OBSERVANCE.

This government, the offspring of our own choice uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, has a just claim to your confidence and support.—Respect for its authority, compliance with its Laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty.

The Constitution which at any time exists, 'til changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole People, is sacredly obligatory upon all.—The very idea of the power and the right of the People to establish Government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established Government.

—Washington's Farewell Address.

majesty of law against determined law breakers, and friends of law and good government gave themselves to the vindication of the right with hearty unanimity.

On the other hand the vicious element saw that the success of the prosecution meant the destruction of lawlessness and the suppression of vice, and were determined to contest every inch of the ground.

It is safe to say that never was a fiercer battle fought, nor stricter scrutiny exercised in the selection of jurors, than in the present cases. It required several days to complete the panel, and the strictest measures were taken to keep the jury out of hearing of the heated discussions which were carried on whenever a group of men were seen.

Repeated attempts were made, by the agents of the prisoners to reach the jury room, with the purpose of influencing the jurors by means of bribes. Several arrests were made by the vigilant officers before the attempt was abandoned and the prisoners resigned themselves to the inevitable.

Open threats of personal violence to the prime movers in the prosecution were repeatedly made. As the men who made these threats were arrested and bound over to keep the peace, it soon became evident that such course was injuring the cause so dear to the heart of the saloon keeper and his allies, and a sudden silence fell on the rabble, which

GOD'S MYSTERIOUS MOVING.

Dear Friends Scattered Abroad Everywhere:

I hunted around for some mission and found the C. I. M. and the Beacon Mission, but attended more or less the Beacon Mission. I had been taking two young men with me, the sons of the lady with whom I was stopping, yet there was that longing in my heart to be gone from China. One day a man by the name of Marble called to see a young lady at the home where I lived. I was introduced to him, and excusing herself, the young lady left the room. While talking to this young man, I found out that he was a backslidden missionary. I preached to him and he, like the Samaritan woman of old, published me abroad. He told a Mr. McNair about me, and one night as I walked into the Beacon Mission, a gentleman asked me if I was Mr. Carter. I replied I was. He asked me if I had seen Mr. McNair. I told him I did not even know the man. "Well," he said, "Mr. McNair will be here to see you tonight." Friends, God had great things ahead for me here in China, that I knew not of. During the meeting Mr. McNair came in, made himself known to me and said he would speak to me after the meeting. He then invited me to dinner the next evening to a Missionary Home. At the appointed time I arrived there with my children. Quite a number of people had gathered there. After dinner I was asked to speak and also to sing, and God gave me liberty as I preached that night. I was invited to speak again the next evening, and then it was arranged that I should begin evangelistic meetings at the Chinese Y. M. C. A. Truly God gave me an abundant entrance into Shanghai. For five weeks I labored at the Chinese Y. M. C. A. to a packed house, many times the people were unable to get into the auditorium. From there I went to the London Mission Church, then to the Christian Alliance Church, and wherever I was the people flocked by the hundreds to the meetings, and standing room was always at a premium. Then I was at Bethel where Dr. Stone and Miss Hughes are in charge. In this place especially the power of God was manifested in a remarkable way; in three days' meeting in this place two hundred souls found the Lord. After that I went into the interior to the cities of Nanking, Ningpo and Yuyao, where the people came by the thousands to the meetings, some walking from twenty to forty li. In Ningpo they stood in the snow to hear the Gospel message, and slept in covered boats so eager they were to hear the Gospel message. Truly God was working in a marvelous way, Hallelujah, all glory to his Name. Through God's grace many of the churches in and around Shanghai were opened to me for services, and a marvelous thing was, all the time I was preaching through Chinese interpreters, whom the Lord used in getting the Gospel message through to the people.

I was constantly busy, from four to five meetings a day. In the following year I was invited to hold meetings for the Friends' Mission in Luho, which is a day's journey from Nanking by small houseboat. Again the Lord blessed in a marvelous way, and many souls found the Lord. It was touching to see how earnest these simple country people were, and how they praised the Lord when they came to the knowledge that their sins had been forgiven. Truly I do praise the Lord for the way he has led me. Since then I have been back at Luho again for a twelve-days evangelistic campaign. Each time the Lord has worked in a wonderful way, getting glory to himself. Three times I have returned to Nanking for evangelistic meetings and also twice to Ningpo, where God graciously manifested himself. During the first meetings the Lord wonderfully opened the way for my children to enter a Christian American School, of which Mr. and Mrs. B. Surtees were principals at that time. They are still attending this school.

This year the Lord gave me the glorious privilege of witnessing to some of the high officials of China. I am sure the following incident will be of interest to those of you who are praying for China and the salvation of her people. In the beginning of this year I was called to pray for a very sick daughter of Dr. H. H. Kung, Minister of industry, commerce and labor. This sick girl is the niece of General Chiang Kai-shek, the President of China. Eight of the best doctors of China attended her, but there did not seem to be any hope for her recovery. When I arrived there, I went right to prayer with the family, beseeching the Lord to heal this child. While we were praying the doctors were holding a consultation and then went in to examine the child, but found that the fever had vanished, and she was able to talk and wanted food. The doctors were so astonished, which gave me an opportunity to testify to the saving and healing power of our Lord Jesus Christ. They were not satisfied and on the next day they took an X-ray picture, but found there were no symptoms of the disease which they all thought the child had. While we were all rejoicing over the wonderful miracle that had just been performed, the President of China entered the room—of course I did not know who it was—but they told him about the healing of his niece and that it was I who had prayed for her. He then came over to me and shook hands with me. He and his wife went into the room to see the child and found it was so.

The next day I had the wonderful opportunity of telling the President of China about Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world. As the President does not speak very much English, I spoke through his brother-in-law, Mr. T. A. Soong, who interpreted for me. President Chiang accepted the truth as I expounded it to him and he seemed to be very much impressed; the next day he sent me his autographed photo. A short time after he had the idols in his home destroyed, and just a few days ago he accepted the Christian faith and was baptized in the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. K. T. Soong. All glory be to Jesus. Amen.

The Lord is doing business in the same old way; regardless of the opposition of Satan, precious souls are being saved in China.

I covet an interest in your prayers, as a missionary walking by faith here in this benighted, heathen land of China. Should the Lord move upon your heart at any time concerning the work here in China, I should be glad to hear from you at any time. I shall promise to answer all letters by the help of God.

Yours for the lost of China.

Evangelist E. A. Carter.

INTERIOR CHINA.

To the Friends of The Herald Family:

Centuries before Christ, as Isaiah stood in Palestine proclaiming with thundering tones, the judgments and prophecies of God, some of the cities and villages here in China were at the height of their glory. As we have labored in some of these villages during the past weeks it has been almost impossible for us to realize how ancient this land is.

Even today all the cities in this section of China are walled and even the smaller villages and market towns have their areas inclosed. In Korea most of the walls have been torn down, but here walls can be seen everywhere. They are made by building two separate walls of mud faced brick imbedded in Chinese cement foundations about twelve feet more or less apart. As these are erected the space in between is packed solid with mud to a height of thirty feet or more. There are usually four gates, one on each side of the city. Every evening as darkness approaches the ponderous gates swing shut and are locked for the night. To get into a city after dark is a very difficult task and the gates are only opened for those who have special permission to enter.

As we entered China from Korea by way of Manchuria we passed the great and famous wall which stretches across north China. This mammoth wall was erected centuries ago to protect China from her northern enemies. It is seventeen miles long and is considered one of the seven wonders of the ancient world.

This afternoon we visited a very interesting Buddhist temple and saw a large assortment of heathen gods. Among the displays were graphic pictures and models, portraying the eighteen sections of punishment in Hades according to Buddhism. Gruesome and horrible pictures they were. Some were being ground between two huge millstones, others were forced to sit on huge spikes and many were being thrown into boiling kettles of water. Every fearful form of punishment that the human mind can imagine is embodied in their conception of Hades. As we left this temple we realized that even as abhorrent as these scenes were the awfulness of a lost soul in Hell cannot be pictured by the human mind, and our hearts rejoiced that our gospel is able to deliver from the fear and reality of punishment in the life hereafter.

We are holding three day meetings at the various stations of the National Holiness Association. This work was started about twenty years ago by Brothers Woodford Taylor and Cecil Troxel with their good wives, and God has wonderfully poured out his blessings upon them. The strenuous times in China have been times of peril for their missionaries but God in a very miraculous way has kept them in danger and though at times it looked as if some of their missionaries would be harmed or even killed God always opened a way of escape. Their property has also been preserved in a very remarkable way, and they attribute this to the fact that God answers prayer. Praise God.

Brother Cecil Troxel has been our interpreter and we have not met a foreign missionary anywhere in China who has a better grip on the Chinese language than he has. In fact the Chinese say he talks like a Chinese. It is a great blessing to work with this man of God and our lives have been inspired by this contact.

The other day while we were in Yangfu, where Misses Kortmeyer, and Congdon are stationed, Brother Troxel told us of his first meeting there some years ago. One day after he had finished his sermon a fine intelligent Chinese man came up to him and said, "Who is Jesus?" Seeing he was asking the question out of a sincere heart Brother Troxel took considerable time to explain fully to him the answer to his question. After he had finished the man said, "Oh then, Jesus is not just for the Americans, but for the whole world. Since this is so we need him here in this city and want you to come and start a church here." Through the influence of this man the door was opened for the starting of a church in Yangfu. Today a nice building has been erected and is called the "Henry Clay Morrison Memorial" in honor of the beloved editor of The Pentecostal Herald. God is raising up some saints who are proving a great blessing to this community. Our days of fellowship with this group were days of victory and salvation.

God is answering your prayers. Please continue to hold us up before the throne.

TRAVEL LETTER—TILDEN H. GADDIS.

Dear Herald Family:

The campaign at Motherwell, Scotland, closed with thirty-eight seeking the Lord the last day, and great glory on the people. Following this we engaged in the annual New Year convention at the Christian Institute which is sponsored by the British Isles District of the Church of the Nazarene. The interest and attendance have increased from year to year and this was no exception. A wonderful spirit was on the people and they sang, shouted, rejoiced and responded until Brother Sharpe, the Superintendent, said, "Our American friends will think that they are in a camp meeting at home." There was good liberty in singing and preaching and fruitage in a goodly number seeking the Lord.

The preachers of this district are loyal, sacrificing and hard-working men who seem willing to do anything and everything in their power to spread scriptural holiness over this needy land. Their efforts to maintain the work against obstacles and difficulties that seemed insurmountable are heroic, but God is blessing them with a general forward movement. They marched through the streets with banners and music, singing and testimony drawing the attention of the crowds on the streets to the services. This convention climaxed three months of labor on this district with hundreds finding the Lord, and we trust you will meet a number of these good old Scotch saints in heaven.

Old Scotch whiskey flowed plentifully here during the holiday season, with drunken men and women on the streets, on the cars and in the saloons, having a grand jubilee in the Devil's fashion. It is a custom here to clean every nook and corner of the home, have everything washed clean; they have on clean clothes when the New Year comes in, and to that end they labor for days. If all were just as careful to have their hearts cleansed what a blessed holiday it would be. Santa Claus has it easy here, as the chimney sweeps have the soot cleaned out thus making his descent more enjoyable, so the kiddies believe. In the good home of Brother and Sister Sharpe we had an American Christmas dinner with turkey, cranberry sauce, plum pudding and all that goes with it which, of course, made us aliens feel as much at home as possible. I forgot to tell you—we sleep here with pigs in our beds. A pig is an earthenware, oblong jug with a funny little snout filled with hot water to keep one warm.

We have closed another year of labor with 22 campaigns, traveling 20,000 miles over 10 states and 10 foreign countries, broadcasting some services over the largest radio stations of the world, and seeing more people find the Lord than in any other year. We began the New Year with a four-day convention at the "Bethel," Glasgow. Brother Hart, the godly little Superintendent, had much prayer and advertising in advance and the building was filled the first night. On the second night they moved the platform back and gained every foot of space to let in the many who desired to hear, and God moved among us. At first call, about eighteen sought the Lord and from that on, strong men, hard cases, many who had been the subject of prayer for years, came crying and pleading until the last night, which was the best of the feast, with every person packed in that could be squeezed in and such glory. We are now in London with the "Home Mission."

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI.

It has been months and months since I reported to you, notwithstanding that I have not been idle. I have seen hundreds and hundreds saved at the mourners' bench. After spending some fifteen years with the Church of the Nazarene in her college work and city pastoral work from New York City to Texas, and working with as fine people as the land affords and seeing hundreds kneel at her altars for either pardon or purity, I have united with the Methodist Protestant Church. I have seen hundreds saved in the last few months. In one meeting in the south there were many who found pardon and entire families joined the church. I have never seen the folks as hungry for God as they are in these last days. I will be available for either camp meetings or church revivals. I am slating my meetings for the summer, and I can give a few dates between now and the camp meeting season. I am finding that the glory holds, even in these last dark days. I will hold meetings for any evangelical church of any faith. I am a member of the City Pastors' Association, of Jackson, Miss. If you are Baptist I refer you to Dr. H. M. King, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church; if you are Methodist, I refer you to Dr. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Jackson District, whose addresses are Jackson, Miss. If you are Nazarene, I refer you to most any Nazarene official of the Church. Pray for your humble servant.

the sincerity of themselves and their teachers, but they haven't fallen on their faces at Sinai; they haven't been transformed in their minds and hearts at Calvary; they haven't yet found their Pentecost in the glorious baptism with the Holy Ghost. We are in great need of a revival of Christian experience. The men who preach and teach ought not to be giving out second-hand statements; they ought to get to Sinai, to Calvary, and to Pentecost.

There are Thirteen Hundred Million Babies Due to be Born in The Next Four Decades.

WHAT WILL BE THEIR COLOR?

CHAPTER V.

HERE are some interesting facts with regard to the war now going on to give the colored race control of the world government.

It is safe to say that the colored races of the world are not going to be dictated to by the white race any longer. Japan is entirely free from such dictation. China is to be reckoned with seriously. No one of the great white nations dare to slap China in the face. The present disturbance in India will never be settled until India practically has self-government.

There is springing up an educated caste in these United States. Those with university degrees are the Brahmins; those without them are the "untouchables." The young people of this nation have a passion for education and university degrees. Not a few of them, the more degrees they get the less practical they are, and the more conceited and impudent.

There is one thing certain: the highly educated have few, if any, children. A recent careful investigation reveals the fact that the members of the graduating class of Yale University in the year 1917, up to date, average one child per graduate; one, you understand, in fourteen years. The graduates from Princeton of the same year average one and one-fifth child per graduate. No doubt most all of these university people believe themselves to have evolved from some lower animal, and they have neither conscience or intelligence on the subject of reproducing the species.

Some sort of resolutions have been passed by a number of annual conferences of the M. E. Church favoring birth control. Among them, I am informed, is the New York Conference, Southern California and one of the Ohio Conferences. The Universalists General Conference, the Unitarian Association, and many other organizations have done the same thing.

One thing that is interfering with the birth of white babies is the apartment living in the cities. In the first place, there is no room for children in them. Second, place, owners do not want to rent to people who have children; some of them will rent only to the childless.

Another thing in the way of white children being born in the cities is the immense expense attached. The specialist in obstetrics is an expensive man. The woman, to become a mother, must go to the hospital, and suppose she remains there three weeks. Her husband will pay $5.00 per day for the room, $6.00 per day for the nurse, while there are numerous other expenses; figure it at $13.00 per day. Then the specialist must have a good fee. To be well born in the city you must pay from $250 to $500. In the large cities, with great specialists, it will be far more than that amount. If you don't believe me, ask the doctors. When I was a boy it was a dollar per head, ten to fourteen heads per family, with healthy mothers and robust children.

Well, why write all of this? To give you something to think about and talk about beside the movies, and to show you that the evolutionist is wrong in looking forward to the hundreds of thousands of years of development of a race of supermen, and to call your attention to the fact that modern education with its boasted science will eliminate the white race.

When people eliminate God from their thought, disregard his warnings, laws and love, in time they will eliminate themselves. Let the skeptical universities, the evolutionists, Judge Lindseys, modernistic preachers, dog-lovers and baby-hating women control the destinies of the white race for, say five thousand years, and I can easily conceive of a few white specimens being secured at great cost for exhibition at world expositions. They will say, "Step this way, ladies and gentlemen, we have a few specimens of what was once known as the white race. It can be easily demonstrated from the remains of ancient cities, libraries and museums, that this race was once numerous on the earth. The student of history is convinced that the white race was once the dominating race of mankind. 'Stand up there Jocco, and let the ladies and gentlemen look you over.'"

There can be no question about the importance of the due consideration of the mothers of humanity. Their health and comfort should be of first and honest consideration. But birth control is one of the fads of the present time. There are features of the subject that call for serious reflection; but there is a seriously selfish feature that is a menace to piety and the existence of the white race. This boasted, godless, scientific age has in it elements that will destroy morals, destroy reverence, kill faith in God, purity in woman, honor in men and in time to come, wipe out the existence of the white race.

The next great war will be white men killing white men, and they will employ all the colored men they can to assist in killing white men and forever retiring the white race from the rulership of the world.

FINIS

An exuberant crop of reputation will not bring as much in heaven's market as a small bed of humble.

What the Report Should Have Been

NO doubt the President of the United States used his best judgment in selecting the various members of the Commission who, recently, after much investigation and delay, handed him their report on crime and law enforcement, with special reference to prohibition of the liquor traffic.

It is quite evident that some of the men on that Commission are sympathizers with the enemies of prohibition, which disqualified them for unprejudiced jurors. It appears from the report that they make practically no suggestion with regard to the improvement of the curtail of illegal manufacture and sale of intoxicants.

The President at once detects the entirely impractical suggestion that the matter of legislation, manipulation, control and direction of the whole question of the traffic in ardent spirits be placed in the hands of Congress. That would mean a battle between the wets and dries in the election of every congressman now, and henceforth.

There should have been a preamble plainly written to this report, setting forth something of the lawless spirit that has always characterized the liquor traffic. They should have called attention to the fact that the traffic in intoxicants has always been entirely selfish—the appeal of avarice to the weakness of men.

That those engaged in the liquor traffic have ever sought to dominate the politics of county, city, state and nation, and when they could not frame the laws to suit themselves, that they have not hesitated to evade and violate any and every law that interfered with their traffic.

They should have called attention to the fact that when liquors could be legally manufactured and sold, the government had to keep hired agents in all distilleries in order to watch the distillers and prevent them from disposing of their products without paying taxes on the same.

They should have written in a paragraph stating that even when the traffic flourished, with distilleries in every direction, and saloons on every corner, village and crossroads, moonshine stills and bootleggers were common; that no suggestion offered by the opposers of the present prohibition laws would do away with illicit stills and bootleggers.

They should have said: On the most thorough and painstaking examination we find that a large percent, perhaps two-thirds, of the violation of our prohibition laws is done especially in large cities, by foreigners, many of them aliens, who have never become American citizens.

If Congress should at once enact some drastic law for the arrest and deporting of all foreign persons who were caught making, conveying, or selling intoxicants, and such law should be stringently enforced, the whole problem of the enforcement of our prohibition laws would be two-thirds solved.

The Commission should have written a paragraph of this character: "There has been much newspaper outcry, especially on the part of the wet propaganda, because of the fact, in some unfortunate instances, the officers appointed for the arrest of those violating our prohibition laws, have shot those who resisted arrest, or tried to make their escape, either before, or after, arrest."

In the criticism of these officers it should be remembered that any man who undertakes the arrest of men engaged in the illicit liquor traffic, takes his life in his hand. It is a well known fact that violators of the prohibition laws are in open and defiant rebellion against the government, heavily armed, often strongly barricaded with large supplies of arms and ammunition, eager to give battle against the representatives of the government. They do not hesitate to commit the most shocking murder of representatives of the law; they beat and intimidate any one who informs against them, when they can lay hands on them. There is, nor can be, no more conscienceless and dangerous class of criminals than those violators of the prohibition laws.

It is most unfortunate that a considerable percent of the daily press of the country is opposed to the prohibition of the liquor traffic. Their attitude has been such as to create an unwholesome civic atmosphere and encourage law violation. Some means ought to be found to stop this sort of newspaper propaganda.

We suggest that the United States Navy be utilized to patrol and protect our coasts from the crafts of foreign countries who undertake to ship intoxicants into our territory. We suggest that the United States soldiers guard our borders from those who would bring intoxicants within our jurisdiction.

We believe it would be wise on the part of the President to call upon the good citizens in every county in the nation to organize for the suppression of crime, for the arrest and punishment of all classes of criminals, and for the enforcement of all law, especially the law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, because the liquor traffic fosters and breeds every sort of crime.

If the Commission had prepared a report embracing the above facts and suggestions, it would have been of incalculable value. Such a paper would have brought down upon the members of the Commission the curse and hatred of the wets, but it would have brought to them the gratitude and thanks of the best citizens of the nation.

Yours truly,

H. C. MORRISON.

A True Soldier of The Cross.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

BISHOP F. W. Warne, for many years missionary to India, was one of the most tireless, devout, consecrated souls that ever set foot on heathen soil. He and Bishop Oldham planted a work in India that shall continue to grow until Jesus comes to take charge of this earth. These soldiers of the cross were entirely consecrated to the salvation of souls, and both experience the blessing of entire sanctification. This power accounts for the marvelous work they accomplished in that darkened land of 300,000,000 people.

In a recent issue of The Christian Advocate, Central Division, there is an interesting bit of Bishop Warne's religious experience which I feel would be a spiritual tonic for the readers of THE HERALD, so am passing it on. Friends, whatever else we may have, if we do not know Christ in his cleansing from all sin, we are living that far beneath our privileges in the atonement made on Calvary for us. But Bishop Warne gives us a glimpse of his magnanimous work in an article entitled "THE SECRET OF A JOYFUL SPIRITUAL LIFE," in which he says:

"I have had a long, joyful, spiritual life, which as I grow older is becoming better and better with blessings heaped on blessings in this life and glory just ahead. I therefore feel impelled to tell something of the why and how with the hope that some who have yet the journey to make may be helped in living the joyful spiritual life.

"I was reared on a farm where we kept sheep, and I had the normal experiences of a shepherd boy. I was also at that time seeking for a personal, conscious fellowship with the Good Shepherd. Therefore the announcement of Jesus which captivated my youthful imagination most of all was, 'I am the good shepherd.' This was so real to me that I began to build my life around the teachings in the tenth chapter of John.

"He calleth his own sheep by name.' 'By name' has always meant to me that I was not simply one of millions; but that Jesus knew me by name; that I have been having a 'personally conducted' journey through life by the Christ of infinite love and wisdom. This assured me that I could not fail, and such companionship has filled my life with triumphant joy. Early in my spiritual life these words were given me as in a peculiar sense mine: 'Even as the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you.' Therefore for many years not 'John 3:16,' but 'John 15:9' has been to me the most comforting revelation of love in all the blessed Book. While yet a young man, I wrote my name over the pronoun 'you' in this passage, and so may you, and your revision will be as true as anything within the covers of the Bible.

"He goeth before and leadeth them out.' Not into a narrowing life; but 'OUT,' 'OUT,' into an ever-enlarging joyous life. I have been trying to imagine what a comparatively fruitless, narrow, useless life I would have lived if I had not as a youth decided to follow the 'Good Shepherd.' But following him life has been gloriously worth while, with yet a more hopeful, inspiring outlook into life eternal. Even with all this as life draws toward a close, one is conscious of having accomplished so little and of leaving so much to be done.

"My joy has been in an inner consciousness that I have gone through life not self-assigned, but following the leadership of the 'Good Shepherd,' and that I have in some measure helped to 'fill up' that which is behind in the sufferings of Christ.' Not that Christ did not perfect his redemptive work, but his gospel needed a herald, his salvation needed an evangelist.

"How carefully for many months I went over my call to the ministry so that I might be absolutely certain through life that I was following the voice of the 'Good Shepherd.' A mistake here would have thrown my whole life out of God's plan, which to anyone is a calamity beyond expression. But thank God I was saved from that by keeping my resolve not to be more foolish than a sheep.

"My call to India seemed perfectly clear, but I tested the inner voice for many months. Oh, the strength in such certainty! For many times in India when the problems and the burdens were infinitely beyond me, I would fall on my knees and say, 'Lord, Thou didst bring me here; help me through,' and he always did.

"Over forty years ago, when I went to India, educated audiences hissed speakers who named the name of Christ. Present changed conditions mark the growth of Christ's influence in the Orient. Then India's mass movement among the outcasts was just beginning. Christ's Nazareth program accurately describes India's untouchables. Envisage them and read:

'He hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor.'

'He hath sent me to proclaim release to the captives.'

'Recovery of sight to the blind—to set at liberty them that are bruised.'

"Of more than five million Christians in India (of all denominations, including Roman Catholics), it is estimated that at least ninety per cent are mass movement Christians. Hinduism taught that they were where they were as punishment for sins of a former existence, and that nothing could be done for them. Christ has done the impossible in India, and now a great Christian community is being educated and uplifted. New Testament history is being repeated in India, for they 'Who in time past were no people . . . are the people of God.' Beyond all, sixty million untouchables are seeing hope through the gospel. Never in history was it truer than now in India, 'They that have turned the world upside down are come hither also.' It is my belief that the chief reason that India's intelligentsia now earnestly listen is because they want to know something about One who has accomplished the impossible.

"Oft when preaching to India's lowest of the low, it seemed to me that Jesus himself stood by my side identifying himself with these poor people, saying, 'Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even the least, ye did it unto me.' Was there ever such love? Well, forty years of companionship, fellowship, and co-operation like that with the Christ faintly hints at the joy I had in my missionary service."

The handful of meal is abundance to the Christian who obeys the prophet.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

Interesting Articles.

Recently, there was held in the city of Louisville, Ky., a Religious Forum in which the Jew, Protestant, Catholic and Agnostic were given thirty minutes, each to tell WHY they were of their respective faiths. Mrs. H. C. Morrison took the time of her Sunday school lesson at Crescent Hill to answer some of the most important objections the Agnostic used for his unbelief in God and the Bible.

Mrs. Morrison has decided to give her answer to these objections in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, hoping they may help to illuminate others who may be tangled up on some of the facts which they frequently hear questioned. The first article dealing with some of the miracles of the Old Testament, will begin in next issue of THE HERALD, followed by the second article dealing with some of the objections found in the New Testament.

Hurry up, and get us a new subscriber, and by doing so, get the wonderful Life of Christ we are offering for one new subscriber, plus 20 cents for postage, and also have the privilege of reading these articles by Mrs. Morrison.

Don't Forget

To order a copy of that wonderful book, Arnold's Practical Commentary, which is one of the most concise, instructive helps in studying the Sunday school lessons you will find. It has instruction for every department of the Sunday school, from Primary to Adult classes, and each is equally helpful and instructive. I think I am safe in saying that we sell more of these Commentaries than any other we handle. Order at once, so that you may get the full benefit of its helps for your Sunday school preparation. The price is another interesting feature—only $1.00 postpaid. Pentecostal Publishing Co., can furnish you with it.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

A Wonderful Opportunity.

For you to secure a copy of that remarkable book, "The Life of Christ," by Dean Farrar. This is one of the most concise books ever written on the Life of Christ, and is very helpful for any one, especially for teachers, pastors and religious workers. It has 710 pages of most interesting and informing reading matter, good clear type, splendid paper with beautiful green cloth binding, with extra paper cover.

In order to get this book circulated among our readers we are making the almost unbelievable offer to send it to any one for securing us one new subscriber for THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, and 20 cents extra to cover cost of postage. I could hardly believe it when told that we could offer this book for just the little effort it will require for most any reader of THE HERALD to go out and secure us one subscriber. But the offer will hold good, and when you send in the subscriber with $1.50 cash, plus 20 cents for postage, you will be surprised at the offer we have made you. Don't fail to be one of the number who will be fortunate enough to secure this wonderful Life of Christ, and you will always thank me.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

A LITTLE LAD OF LONG AGO.

Little Abe hurried home just as fast as his feet would carry him. Perhaps if he had worn soft wool stockings and finely fitting boots, like yours, he could have run faster. But instead of stockings he wore deerskin leggings, and pulled over these were clumsy moccasins of bearskin, which his mother had made for him.

Such a funny little figure as he was, trudging along across the rough fields. His suit was of warm gray homespun. His odd-shaped cap had once been on the back of a coon. The coon's tail flew out behind little Abe's head, as he went along, like a funny, furry tassel.

In one hand little Abe held something very precious. It wasn't a purse of gold, nor a bag of jewels. It was only a book, but little Abe thought more of the book in his hand than he would of gold or precious stones.

To know just what that book meant to this little lad you would need to be very fond of reading. You would need, too, to know how it would seem to live far away from all schools, to have no books of your own, and to see no books anywhere, except two or three very old ones of your mother's, which she had read to you, over and over, until you knew many of their pages by heart.

So when a neighbor had told Abe that he could take this book home and keep it until he had read every page, do you wonder that his eyes shone like stars?

Little Abe's home was built on a hillside. It was not much like yours. It was not built of stone or brick—not even of nice, smooth lumber, but of rough logs. When little Abe lay in his small bed, close to the roof, he could look through the chinks between the logs, and see the great white stars twinkling at him.

Tonight, after little Abe had crept up the steps of the loft, he put his precious book in a small crevice between the logs. When the first gray light came in the morning, he awoke, and read until his father called him to get up. This he did, day after day, until the book was nearly finished.

One night he slipped the book away as usual and fell asleep to dream of his wonderful story. He woke very early, but there was no golden sunbeam to peep through the chinks and play across his pillow this morning. The loft was dark and cold. Little Abe could hear the wind whistling out-of-doors. He reached out his hand for the book, and—what do you think? He put it into a pile of something lying, white and cold, on the bed. His little bed was covered with an outside blanket of soft snow!

Poor little Abe! He sat up in his cold little bed, and brushed off the snow as best he could. He tried hard to keep back the tears; but there was a big lump in his throat and a big ache in his heart.

As soon as he could, little Abe set off across the fields to the house of the neighbor. It was more than a mile away, but he trudged along, not thinking of the wind, nor the cold, but only of the borrowed book.

When little Abe found the neighbor, he held out the poor, spoiled book, and looking straight up into the man's face with clear, honest eyes, he told his sad little story.

"Well, my boy," said the man, smiling down into the sober little face, "so my book is spoiled. Will you work for me to pay for it?"

"I will do anything for you, sir," said the little fellow.

"Well, then, I will ask you to pull fodder corn for me three days," said the man.

Little Abe looked up into the kind face. "Then, sir," he said, wistfully, "will the book be all mine?"

"Why, yes, of course, you can have the book—you will earn it," said the man, good-naturedly.

So little Abe went to work. For three days he pulled corn for the cattle. He was cold, his back ached, he was tired all over. But he was too happy to mind, for that precious book was soon to be his own, his very own.

What was the book for which little Abe worked so long and faithfully? Was it a book of wonderful adventures? Or a story of the sea, or a book of beautiful fairy tales? The book was the Life of George Washington. And, long years afterward, when our little friend of the honest blue eyes had become Abraham Lincoln, the great and good president of our nation, he used to tell the story of his first book, and say, "That book—the Life of Washington—helped to make me president of the United States!"—By Alice E. Allen.

THE FIRST GREAT TEACHER.

Mrs. Geneva Mendenhall.

PART I.

When the children of Israel first came to Egypt, they were guests of the country, but they stayed there for a great many years and became so rich and numerous that the Egyptians feared them lest they should become greater in numbers and power than they.

So, strict laws were passed making slaves of the Israelites, heavy burdens were placed upon them and a cruel law was passed ordering that every boy baby born to them should be put to death.

But one little boy who was born in those dreadful days was so lovely that his mother hid him away for three months, so the wicked soldiers could not find him. Once when she could hide him no longer, she made a little basket-boat for him and set him afloat on the river near the place where the king's daughter came each day to bathe.

Before very long the Princess came down to the river with her maids, and right away she saw the tiny boat drifting on the water. One of her maids waded out and brought the basket and the baby to the Princess. Reaching out its little arms, the babe cried to be taken up, and as soon as the princess took him in her arms, she wanted to keep him for her own. Just then a little girl ran up, (she was really the baby's sister who had been anxiously watching him all the time), and looking at the baby, she asked, "Would you like for me to find him a nurse from among his own people?"

And when the princess said that she would, the little girl ran quickly and brought the baby's very own mama. So this brave Hebrew mother not only was allowed to nurse and rear her own little boy, but the daughter of the king paid her well to do it.

When he was older, the princess took him to live in the beautiful palace, among the nobles of the land, as her own son.

There he studied, and grew strong, and brave, and wise. And the king's daughter called him a name that means "Drawn Out," because she had taken him up out of the water.

Note—I would suggest that the children clip the story out, each week. After awhile we will paste them in a book in the order in which they occurred in Bible history. Meanwhile, we should watch everywhere for suitable pictures to paste in with them.—G. M.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Have been taking The Pentecostal Herald for over four years and think it is a splendid paper. The continued story is great. I also liked "The Mills of The Gods." The stories are the best I've ever read. Wish there were more stories like them. I am very fond of good books. I'd rather stay at home any time than to go to a show, ball game, or swimming pool; in fact, I don't attend any of those things. I don't think a swimming pool is a decent place for any Christian to go. I see so many of you girls are letting your hair grow. Have been letting mine grow for over four years. I have a Sunday school class in the Primary Department, the first and second grades. I have taught for eight years and love the work, especially the children. I think I have the best friends on earth. They are Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Bartlett. He was my pastor four years ago and I was sanctified while they were here. They are planning on going to Africa as soon as the way opens. They have had the children's work at the camp meeting the last four years. The camp meeting is held in Beulah Park at Wichita, Kan., and there have been several hundred boys and girls saved and sanctified during the time they have had the services. They have taken me and my girl friend with them; it was my first camp meeting. I used to make fun of that camp meeting because I didn't know anything about it, but I love it and always shall. I've received several letters from Heath King, and surely do enjoy them. They are regular sermons. I've not heard from her for some time; hope she isn't sick.

Viva Breidenstein.
Arlington, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I was twelve Dec. 27, 1930. I live in Edgewood, Ind. My eyes are turning brown. I have light brown hair. I was just about to go to sleep when mother said, "Naomi, don't you want to read The Pentecostal Herald?" I said "Yes." I read a letter which said, if any one guess my middle name that she would answer our letter. Her name began on M and ended on E. I guessed Marie. Am I right? If any one can guess my middle name and writes, I will answer. It begins in L and ends on R. I love Jesus.

Naomi Pierson.
1407 Dudley Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am writing my first letter. I enjoy reading page ten. I am nine years old. I go to school every day and like my teacher fine. My teacher is Mrs. Ava Adams. My first name is Warren. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with H and ends with E.

Warren H. Smith.
Rt. 1, Flemingsburg, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am thirteen years old and I am in the eighth grade. My birthday is July 25. I am five feet tall and have black curly hair and light complexion. Have I a twin? I go to Wesley Chapel Methodist Church. Our pastor is Rev. T. E. Brady and I like to hear him preach very much. Mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I hope to see my letter in print.

Nanie Faye Cooper.
Coleman, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl follow the path of Jesus with the other Herald children? I am sixteen years old, and a freshman in high school. I have two brothers and one sister. I am a Christian and belong to the Nazarene Church. I have been reading The Herald for several months, and I enjoy reading it. My desire is to work for the Lord and help others to work for him. I love Christ, and I hope I can live the way he wants me to. It seems as if many of the young people had rather take pleasures of the world than to go to Church. If we young people do not work for Jesus, I don't see what our land will come to. I want my grandmother to see this in print. I will answer all letters received. Mary Elizabeth Williams.
Buena Vista, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I haven't written you for a long time. I still love my Lord and am doing my best to live as he would have me. Friends, if you were walking down the road and you would meet Christ coming from the opposite direction and he would ask you to walk with him, would you deny him, or rather yourself, of this great privilege? Suppose you would be in great trouble and this same Christ would come along and you would ask him to help you and he would walk silently on and not notice you. Would you not be hurt? That is the way we hurt Christ when he wants to be our friend and help us and we go on and not accept his friendship.

haven't forgotten you. I have a little money for your great work. There is a revival meeting in progress at the M. E. Church in Smithville. I haven't attended very much as I am taking care of one of my sisters who is sick. Myrtle Heath, what became of you? Have you gone to the mission fields yet? I would love to hear from you. I wish to ask every one to please remember me in your prayers.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and hope to see it in print. I go to Whaleyville high school and am in the fifth grade. I like my teacher very well. Her name is Mrs. Savage. Frances McCoy, I guess your first name to be Mary. Am I right or not? Don't forget your promise. Will ring off as this is my first letter. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with B and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. The one who guesses it I will write them. Will answer all letters I receive. Minnie B. Taylor.
Rt. 1, Whaleyville, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. Mother takes The Pentecostal Herald and I enjoy reading page ten very much. I am ten years old and in the fourth grade. My teacher is Miss Aline Farris. She is a fine teacher. I go to the M. E. Church, South and I enjoy going very much. To the one who guesses my first name I will write them a special letter. It begins with F and ends with S, and has seven letters in it. I would like to see my letter in print.

F. Evelyn Gibson.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wrote to the page before. I am a Salvationist, 29 years of age. I enjoy red-hot meetings. Would like to hear from young people. About fifteen answered my other letter. I live thirty miles from Pittsburgh, by rail. My favorite verse is St. John 14:14. Oh, that we might believe this verse. God is true. He cannot lie. Arthur Grunden.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have enlisted in the army of the Lord, and may I ever stand true, to be a light in this dark, sinful world. I have been a reader of page ten for sometime, and enjoy all the letters. I am a school girl, and had the privilege of going to Mount Carmel high school (baby Asbury) for two terms. I enjoy reading letters and would like to hear from boys and girls near my age from all states, but most of all from Kentucky. I am eighteen years old. Aunt Bettie, as this is my first letter I would like to see it in print.

Sarah A. Maloney.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Tennessee girl join your band of boys and girls? I am eight years old and in the second grade at school. I go to Sunday school and preaching. My father takes The Herald, and I enjoy reading page ten. My father and mother are singers. Who can guess how many times mother is used in the Bible? How many times grandmother is used? Edna England.
Rt. 1, Sugar Camp Farm, Manchester, Tennessee.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Jersey girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am fifteen years old. I am five feet, two and one-half inches tall and weigh 98 pounds. I have blue eyes and long blond, wavy hair. I am very interested in missionary work and hope some day to be one. I have often led meetings at our church and at our E. H. Mission. I go to the Union Methodist Episcopal Church. Our pastor is K. P. Stevens. We had Robert Fraser, widely known blind radio gospel singer, conduct evangelistic services. I was at Fairview, N. J., and heard him preach. He was wonderful. I want the cousins to guess my middle name. It begins with E and ends with R. I would like to correspond and change snapshots with boys and girls everywhere.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and all the cousins? I am a little country boy. I live on a 1500-acre farm. My age is between four and eight years. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with V and ends with T, and has seven letters in it. The one who guesses it, I will write to them. How many of you cousins have pets? I have two dogs, named Chum and Lindy.

FALLEN ASLEEP

HARRIS.

Mrs. Jennie Harris died at her home near Elkton, Ky., Jan. 12, of typhoid fever, being 43 years of age. She professed faith in Christ in girlhood, uniting with the Methodist Church. All that loving hands could do was done to minister to her needs, but to no avail. She was patient throughout all of her affliction, but prayed that she might be spared to raise her children.

She leaves to mourn their loss, a husband, six children, an aged father, one brother and one sister. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Bogard, pastor of Providence Church. She was laid to rest by the side of her mother to await the resurrection morn. May the remaining members of the family so live that they shall meet their loved one in that land where partings shall be no more.

Mrs. A. N. Hurt.

WILSON.

The life of Brother S. P. Wilson came to a peaceful end on October 20, when he was promoted to the realms of Eternal Glory. He was born Nov. 20, 1861. Was married to Miss Lizzie V. Paul, April 14, 1880. To this union God gave four children, two girls and two boys. He is survived by all the children, widow, five grandchildren and many relatives. Brother Wilson joined Center Ridge M. P. Church, Pike Co., July 7, 1898. He has been a most faithful member ever since. He was confined to his bed more than seven months. He was fortunate in that time to have suffered little.

A beautiful coincident happened a few months before he died. Brother Lonnie Lowery was greatly impressed while in his field that he should go immediately to Brother Wilson's. He found him worrying. Brother Lowery gave him some instructive counsel concerning the importance of taking his mind off his business worries and think on Heaven only, in his evening-tide. Immediately after that the writer, his pastor, read the last two chapters in Revelations and commented slightly on the statements about Heaven. After this he gave the most beautiful testimonies and expressed the brightest hopes of Heaven we have ever heard. He talked of death as "Going Home." Few days before death, when nearly unconscious, he had them put his hat on his head and lay there smiling saying how happy he was to get to go home.

May the Lord strengthen his faithful Christian widow and grant her the desires of the parent's hearts to see every child and grandchild surrender their hearts and lives completely to Christ and the Church. May he also grant to all bereaved ones the comfort of the Holy Spirit.

T. W. Eddins, Pastor.

TALKING FOR GOD.

Bethel Cook.

Texts.—"Ye shall be witnesses." Acts 1:8. "Known and read of all men." 2 Cor. 3:2.

I.

Our lives are living witnesses

Of divine or wrong;

Of selfishness, and greed and sin,

Of lives both weak and strong.

II.

We do not need to cry aloud

And tell the world our heart;

For they can see our interest

In higher things above.

III.

By looking in our envelopes

Each blessed Sabbath day;

And see how much we spend for self,

And how much to God we pay.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

J. M. Hively: "I am a retired preacher. I ask the prayers of The Herald readers that God may sanctify me wholly. I am seeking it as a definite work of grace. It is a shame that I have neglected it so long. Please to pray for me."

Pray for the salvation of a neighbor; also that he may be healed, and that his wife may be saved.

L. B.: "For more than two years I have been down with nervous prostration. I desire the prayers of devout Christians for the restoration of my health, so that I can return to work."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VIII.—February 22, 1931.

Subject.—Jesus Bearing the Good Tidings. Luke 8:1-15.

Golden Text.—He went through every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Luke 8:1.

Time.—Autumn of A. D. 28.

Place.—Around the Sea of Galilee.

Introduction.—“An honest confession is good for the soul.” I do not know how others feel about the matter; but when I contemplate the Master's zeal in preaching the Gospel, and then think of my own sluggishness, I feel ashamed of myself. Such men as Wesley and Paul, Livingstone and Asbury, and a few others here and there, seem to have caught the vision; but most of us are fast asleep on the job. I am rather inclined to think that we do not more than half believe what we are pretending to preach. A pastor who smoked more than fifty dollars worth of cigars in one year preached to his flock on consecration, and begged them to economize in order that they might be able to send the Gospel to the heathen; but he was living so loud that many could make nothing out of his plea. “Persons who inhabit domiciles of vitreous structure should be careful not to project missiles of granitic formation.” Some one says that a genuine revival will improve our preaching. No doubt that is true; but we shall have to improve our preaching in order to promote a genuine revival. It simply cannot come through our present style of preaching. We need to catch the spirit of the Master Preacher. When the zeal for God's house consumes us preachers, we shall be able to reach the world for Christ.

The Master had two purposes in his parabolic teaching: (1) There were many wilful, hypocritical followers about him, who had no notion or desire for the truth. These he intended to keep in the dark as to his meaning. He would not give holy things to dogs, nor cast pearls before swine. Such hearers had hardened their hearts and stiffened their necks with a determination not to yield to him; (2) Teaching in parables would make the truth plain and forceful to such as desired to be saved. When it became necessary, as in the present case, to make his teaching clearer, he did so in private conversation with those who were sinners. I wonder if we preachers would not do some good work by following this example. No sermon that is worth while is finished when the benediction is pronounced. It should be followed by careful private teaching in the homes of our people. A successful preacher must be a pastor.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. He went throughout every city and village.—This was strenuous work to be done on foot. Jesus had a consuming zeal for preaching, because he had an awful realization of the lost condition of men. No one is prepared to preach until he sees the fearful need of a lost world. The Glad tidings.—That is the meaning of the word Gospel which comes from two Anglo-Saxon words: Good and spel, the latter word meaning news, or tidings. The twelve were with him.—His was a travelling school of theology.

2. Certain women.—This little group would have been counted small in what is termed cultured society; but those women were tremendous for righteousness. Mary called Magdalene.—There is no evidence that she had ever been a fallen woman. Magdalene simply indicates the place of her nativity. Seven devils.—Seven demons. Demon possession was common in Palestine at that time, just as it now is among the Chinese.

3. Which ministered unto him of their substance.—They did not beg their way, but used what they had of this world's goods to care for the needs of the Master and his disciples while he was travelling and preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God.

4. He spake by a parable.—I do not suppose that the Lord had in mind any one particular farmer. In that rocky land men were doing just this very thing every year that came. No doubt the Master Teacher formed his own parables from many facts with which his hearers were familiar. He built them as frames on which to hang the mighty truths contained in his talks to the people. The multitudes gathered about him from many towns and cities; and he used this form of speech to give force to his teachings. Men would remember the stories, and thereby keep the truth.

5. A sower went out to sow his seed.—Preachers make a big mistake when they use classical illustrations in preaching to uncultured people. The Master Teacher knew better and did better. In all his teaching we find him drawing his figures and illustrations from things with which the hearers were perfectly familiar. Some fell by the wayside.—It is the picture of a roadway running through the field; and as the farmer sowed his seed some fell on the hard roadbed. Fowls of the air devoured it.—Those farmers had all witnessed this. They knew that grain could not be grown on the roadbed where men and animals were continually tramping.

6. Some fell upon a rock.—There was just a thin layer of soil on the top of the rock, just enough to make the grain sprout; but the moisture was limited; and a little heat from the sun soon drove away what there was, and the plants died before they could mature.

7. Some fell among thorns.—The thorny acanthus is meant here, a plant of quick and vigorous growth. Being of more rapid growth than the grain, the latter was choked by it, and made no crop.

8. Other fell on good ground.—That was encouraging to the sower. The crop would not be a total failure. An hundredfold.—This is only an indefinite term to express an abundant yield. One grain of wheat or corn will produce many hundred grains in a single season. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.—The Master calls special attention to his message, lest the hearers should let it slip from them. I may add, that a real preacher will so speak that his auditors shall get every word without any effort on their part; for if they have to strain to hear what is being said, much of the force of the sermon will be lost. Some of our preachers need to study the art of public speaking.

9. What might this parable be?—The lesson of the parable is so plain, that one feels as though the disciples were dull of understanding, if not of hearing; and really the Master's reference in the eighth verse was rather to the understanding of the meaning than to the mere words that he had used. The apostles themselves had heard the words, but missed the meaning.

10. The mysteries of the kingdom of God.—In New Testament teaching a mystery is not something that cannot be understood, but a hidden truth that can be revealed. That seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.—These were such as steeled themselves against all truth, and were determined not to be saved. Jesus would waste no time with them. There are some such everywhere. No one need bother with them.

11. The seed is the word of God.—I suppose that Jesus was here referring to the Old Testament, or maybe to himself as embodied in that word. True preaching is preaching Jesus Christ and him crucified. That theme is big enough for all time and all places.

12. Those by the wayside.—They are careless, shallow-brained souls who have no place to keep the truth. They are listless while the preacher is giving his message; and as soon as it is given the Devil snatches away what little may have found lodgment. Their name is legion, for they are many. They have almost no prospect of ever being saved. God would save them; but they are too silly to yield to the overtures of grace.

13. They on the rock.—These are to be pitied. As a rule they have but little sense and are almost minus moral character. It is easy to make an impression upon them; but it will not last. The only hope for such souls is to get them saved, and then rush them immediately into entire sanctification. If that can be done, some of them will stand. To use a horseman's parlance, “They lack bottom.” They cannot endure temptation.

14. That which fell among thorns.—Now we are dealing with a vast multitude that no man can number. These are they who wish to go to heaven on a compromise. They are perfectly willing to belong to some church that will permit them to dance, play cards, run after the movies, attend the circus, use tobacco, belong to lodges, take a drink occasionally, etc., etc.—O they must be allowed to have a good time in worldly things—they want nothing to do with a religion that travels the highway of holiness. Some of them, like Sister Martha, are cumbered with so many cares—so much serving, that they have no time to serve the Lord, and soon fall away; they are choked to death. Some others would hold out faithful, if they were not in such a hurry to get rich. They get a nickel so close to one eye and a dime so close to the other, that they cannot see their obligation to God; they strangle to death on dollars and cents. God alone knows how many souls are almost saved, but will not quite let go of this world.

15. That on the good ground.—It makes one sick to think that “many are called, but few are chosen,” and that we make our own choice; but, thank God, a host is coming up from every clime. It looks sad to see the babies die; but I have a conviction that it is best. God takes the little ones home to himself; but most of the adults are lost forever. But we shall

ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

We opened our Mission June 22, 1930, and have not missed a service. We have preaching every night and every Sunday afternoon. We have had continual revival since we opened. Some one saved at nearly every service. We had Dr. Morrison two days in August and looking for him to come again soon. We had Rev. John F. Owen in October, two weeks, and had a very fruitful revival.

We are doing full mission work and ask the prayers of all God's people everywhere. Our services are planned along the same kind of service we have at Indian Springs Camp, and our God is blessing. Please pray that God will have his way.

PERSONALS.

Harry G. Kaye: "I have open dates for a few evangelistic meetings in February and March in Eastern Pennsylvania or New Jersey. I preach real gospel sermons, and work among the young people, asking only freewill offering and expenses. Address me Box 33, Canaseraga, N. Y."

E. G. Grimes: "Just closed a meeting in the Holiness Methodist Church at Danville, Ill., with Rev. E. Reed. There were 22 conversions and 18 united with the church. We began a meeting in the M. E. Church, January 29."

The friends of Rev. W. W. McCord and wife will be glad to know they are at their home in Sale City, Ga., after having spent five months in the hospital. They are not prepared to travel yet in the ministry of holding divine healing services, but hope to do so later on.

Rev. C. B. Stephens: "I wish to say a word concerning Miss Gladys White. She is a graduate of both Ohio Northern University, Ada, O., and Cleveland Bible School, Cleveland, Ohio. She is a public school teacher in the schools of Dennison, Ohio, and desires calls for either evangelistic singing, or Daily Vacation Bible School teaching after June 1. Miss White has assisted me in my work a number of times. I have always found her to be a consistent, Christian worker, fully devoted to the cause of the Kingdom of her Lord. She also plays the piano. Address her either 115 First Street, Dennison, Ohio, or 546 Pearl Street, Marion, Ohio."

Rev. W. J. Harney, owing to a cancellation of a meeting, has the month of March open for revival work. Bro. Harney has held some remarkable revivals, and it is a good opportunity for some pastors who may wish a revival to secure the services of Brother Harney. Address him, Wilmore, Ky.

Laura Belle Stephens: "Sometime ago I had my letter in this paper telling of my entering the evangelistic field. Since that time I have been in a number of meetings, and have had good success in each one. I have just closed my last meeting in the New Rumley, Ohio, Methodist Church. This meeting was a real victory for the church. I would be pleased to get in touch with any pastors desiring assistance in revival meetings; especially those having young people of goodly numbers in their congregations. If any would desire references, please write me, and I will have them sent by those with whom I have labored. Address me either at Ashley, Ohio, or Germano, Ohio."

Rev. E. L. Sanford: "We commenced a meeting New Year's day with Rev. J. E. Schenley, in the First Church of the Nazarene, Georgetown, Ky. Great grace was upon all while we prayed to God for the salvation of souls. After the first service, there were seekers and a goodly number converted and sanctified. It was said to have been the best meeting in the history of the church; thirteen members were added to the church. Rev. Schenley will be with us at the Union Gospel Mission, 351 W. Short St., Lexington, Ky., beginning February 15, continuing until March 1. Pray for an old-time revival to break out in this city."

At the close of a meeting held by Guy W. Green, layman of Kansas City, Mo., at the First Presbyterian Church, Byers, Colo., Jan. 14-25, the church received 14 adults into membership. Ten of them came by confession and reaffirmation of faith. Sixteen young people who made confession of faith during the meeting will be received on Easter Sunday after a period of instruction by the pastor, Dr. U. G. Schell. Mr. Green spoke in the public schools of Byers and nearby towns. These talks greatly helped the attendance at the meeting, which was so large that extra chairs in the aisles were necessary nightly.

THE MOUNTAIN TABERNACLE.

For a number of years we have desired to build a camp meeting and gospel Tabernacle on Terrill's Creek, our old home community in eastern Kentucky. A plot of land was deeded to us by Uncle Bob Johnson and his son, Powell Johnson, for this purpose. It is a beautiful, well-wooded and conical-shaped hill, carved and marked out by two roads and ravines, commanding a splendid view up and down the valley. It is an ideal spot for a camp meeting in a community of fine people. The greatest drawback is the lack of good roads, churches and gospel privileges. In a few years they will have good roads through that neglected part of the country and a new day of opportunity will dawn upon the rising generation. It is fortunate and providential that the gospel of full salvation is making its way in advance of the great modern improvements which will evidently accompany the construction of good roads. The spiritual should always maintain the priority and superiority over the physical or material. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. 6:3.

True to this ideal, and under the guidance of divine Providence, we launched a gospel campaign in a tent last September, (and have done so for the last four years) but this year the meeting culminated in the construction of the long-looked for tabernacle. We were ably assisted in this worthy enterprise by the indomitable Charles B. Kolb, of Elgin, Tenn., who has had a wide experience in pioneer mountain work. He brought with him for the task two fine boys from the state of Ohio, Rev. Chaney and Mr. Galliger. They worked faithfully. In the short space of three weeks the tabernacle arose, as by magic, to the great surprise of the whole community. The Bond-Foley Lumber Co., of Bond, Ky., furnished the material at a very reasonable rate. A number of men, anxious for the success of the enterprise, volunteered their services and as a result the Tabernacle was ready for services Sunday, Oct. 5th. A large crowd from various sections of the surrounding country was present. It was a red-letter day in the history of old Terrill's Creek and marked the beginning of a new era of religious opportunity and spiritual welfare for all the people.

This great home missionary work in the mountains of Kentucky must by all means be perpetuated and perfected. There remains much more work to be done. The Tabernacle needs a floor in it so the people can start a Sunday school for the children and young people. It must be painted soon so as to preserve the building. A road must be made around the rear of the hill so as to give access to the grounds. During the recent meeting the people came on foot and mule back and wagons and "hitched" to the trees. We need concrete steps leading up the hill to the Tabernacle. The people have not been properly taught the great privilege of proportionate giving, hence the public offering for the expense of the building was not sufficient. We still owe nearly $200 on the material. The writer assumed responsibility for the remainder of the lumber bill which was $157. If we can carry on a great camp meeting every September it will mean the salvation of hundreds of souls in that remote community. Then a live Sunday school during the entire year will be of untold blessing to the children.

I am specially interested in this work because I was born on Terrill's Creek. As it is my native "land" and the community of my early childhood I want to see a great camp meeting firmly established on the sacred grounds for the glory of God and the salvation of my own people. Let all the good people to whom my humble ministry may have been a blessing rally in this great gospel work. I shall be glad to hear from you.

Andrew Johnson, Evangelist.

WE SHALL NEVER CEASE TO BE.

By The Editor.

AS I write, I am burdened with the thought that the writer and reader can never cease to exist.

*****
Somewhere in God's vast universe we shall possess our personality, consciousness, memory and powers to enjoy, or to suffer, forever.

*****
A billion of years from now we shall still possess something of the character we are building here. We shall no doubt be rising into higher heights, or sinking into deeper depths of an existence that can never end.

*****
Let us ponder the thought that death is simply the release of our real selves from a decaying habitation into a larger life. A far vaster state of being and activity awaits us, where untrammelled with many things that circumscribe us here, we shall rise into possibilities of progress and development beyond the sweep of our present powers of conception.

*****
In view of these tremendous facts, shall we sin? God forbid! The very thought that we can never cease to have a conscious personal existence ought to banish all desire from sin, ought to create in us such a hungering and thirsting after righteousness, such urgent desire for holiness of heart and life that we be forever freed from all desire for sin.

*****
The thought of an eternity in hell, with all of its deepening, ever increasing horrors, ought to awaken every sinful soul to cry in ceaseless call upon God for mercy and salvation. The Scriptures being true, and they are, no more fearful doom can be imagined as possible, than that a being who can never cease to exist should fall into the hell described in the teachings of Jesus Christ.

*****
With the fact of immortality before us, and all it involves for time and eternity, it would seem that our one consuming desire would be to secure holiness of heart provided in the atonement made by Christ and, having secured it, our master passion would be to bring our fellowbeings into a state of salvation. In the language of an old hymn I would repeat,

"Religion is the chief concern
Of mortals here below;
May I its great importance learn,
Its sovereign virtue know!

"Oh may my heart, by grace renewed,
Be my Redeemer's throne;
And be my stubborn will subdued,
His government to own!

"Let lively hope my soul inspire;
Let warm affections rise;
And may I wait with strong desire
To mount above the skies."

There is no power in the Jesus preached by H. E. Fosdick, to save the soul of John D. Rockefeller. It takes the Jesus Christ pre-existent, born of the Virgin Mary, revealed in prophecy and the gospels to save the souls of lost men.

*****
The Jesus conceived in the minds of modernistic preachers is not, in the nature of things, cannot be, an object of worship. The men who manufactured him, neither trust in him or worship him.

*****
There is a Christ mighty to save to the uttermost. He is from everlasting to everlasting. He was with the Father before the world was. He was incarnated in the form of a man—a sinless Christ—who died for sinful men. He arose from the dead. He will come again in glory. In HIM alone is salvation.

Monthly Sermon.

THE PERFECTING OF THE SAINTS.

(Substance of a sermon preached at Asbury College.)

Text: "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." Eph. 4:11.

We find in Ephesians, 4th chapter, from the 11th to the 16th verse, a divine program laid out for the perfecting of the saints, that is, the perfecting of the children of God.

God deals with individuals. There is quite a tendency on our part to sink ourselves in the mass of humanity rather than to think of ourselves as individuals standing separate from the multitude and facing God in our personal responsibility.

This perfecting of the saints must be an individual, personal cleansing from sin. First of all, perfect purity, a heart from sin set free. This calls for the atoning blood of Christ; the only atonement for sin and cleansing from sin is found in the sacrificial death of our Lord Jesus. We read from the beloved John, "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth from all sin." There is no other cleansing. We shall have to come to the cleansing blood of Christ or go to the judgment bar of God in our sins.

Then there is an establishing perfection. We read of it in the first Epistle of Peter, fifth chapter, tenth verse: "But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you." You will see here that the perfect cleansing, which comes to the child of God, introduces us into a program of life that leads on to an additional perfecting. It is a stablishing which comes through suffering for Christ's sake. I cannot believe that anything brings one into such close and blessed fellowship with Christ as the privilege of suffering for him, for his truth. It is by this means, the Apostle Peter tells us, that we become stablished, strengthened, settled.

No doubt many people enter into the experience of entire sanctification, but when suffering comes they haven't fortitude. They will not endure reproach, ridicule, persecution. They are unwilling to suffer and soon drift away. There is a wonderful comfort in becoming stablished, fixed in one's intellectual faith, a firm grip not only upon the truth of the Scriptures, but the God who has given us the Scriptures. The Scriptures have led us to Christ and we are able to lay hold upon him at all times with an unhesitating faith; no man or devil can shake us for a moment. Then comes growth, like the great oak which roots itself in the crevices of the rocks and holds firmly through the storm, strengthened, settled.

There are some Christians who remain in the childhood state all their lives. They will become enthusiastic over any teacher that comes along, carried about by every wind of doctrine. Wind is a good word here. The winds are constantly changing,—too cold from the north, too hot from the south, no good in an east wind, and the west wind brings sleet and snow, and the whirlwind brings destruction.

Do not fail to notice that there are men who lie in wait to deceive. He has the thought here of the hidden robber lying concealed on the highway to pounce upon a victim. He tells us they are cunning and crafty; some of them will come to us in the guise of intellectuality. They will claim to be scholarly. They pity us because of our ignorance. They want to lead us out into the high realms of an intellectual life. They have much to say of an open mind. So far as these men are concerned a farmer had just as well expect to raise a good crop of corn with an open gate on the highway, to let the hogs, the lean cattle, and the hungry mules come in and feed upon his growing crops, as for a Christian to expect to grow in the grace of God under their instruction.

Then there are other deceivers who will come to us claiming to have made wonderful discoveries in the deeper and higher things of religious experience. This is one of the shrewdest schemes of Satan, always seeking to betray hungry souls who are eager for religious progress and a better and closer communion with Christ. These false teachers have a wonderful way of putting on a sanctimonious face. They have learned to use smooth words and unctuous tones. They are so sorry that all you have is regenerating grace and the baptism with the Holy Ghost in sanctifying power, when there is so much else for you that you have never been taught. They are amazed at your ignorance and poverty of spirit. Is it possible that you are

PANAMA AND THE GREAT CANAL.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Panama has had a unique history stretching into centuries. Its narrow neck of land called the Isthmus has been the subject of thought, fancy, imagination, discussion, planning, surveying for ages. From the days of Philip the Second, of Spain, right on down to Roosevelt's day, the nations and Navies, navigators and merchants have considered the matter of digging a canal across that neck of land but it took a man of iron and vision like Theodore Roosevelt to do it, and he brought to a head the planning, resolving and dreaming of centuries, and in 1914, the year of the great War, President Wilson, in Washington, touched a button which started the machinery going and the Panama Canal stands as one of the greatest engineering feats of all time. It is a monument to Roosevelt and the American people. The Suez Canal is a great ditch through the Desert. Panama Canal is a great engineering triumph.

I stood one day after coming through the Suez Canal, before the great Monument of DeLesseps, at Port Said, Egypt—the entrance to the Suez Canal, and looked with wonder and admiration at the colossal figure of DeLesseps, the man who dug the Suez Canal; but since coming to Panama my estimate and admiration of DeLesseps has diminished greatly; he undertook Panama but proved a miserable failure, not only a failure in building the Canal, but he lent himself to all manner of graft and crookedness and corruption, so much so, that in his old age he and others were tried in the high courts of France for his perfidy and only escaped being sent to prison because of his age and feebleness.

The French people put so much confidence in DeLesseps that they bought his Canal Bonds to the extent of over two hundred million dollars, and it is estimated that about one-third of this money was spent on graft, one-third in extravagance, and only one-third was actually spent in digging the Canal. When the U. S. A. bought out the French rights and property for forty million dollars it was found that the amount of digging the French did was only 66,000,000 cubic yards, which cost $260,000,000. The Americans dug 232,000,000 cubic yards and finished it completely for $375,000,000, and no graft. The finest job, the biggest job, the cleanest job America ever undertook.

To give my readers some idea of what the Canal saves to the ships and their owners, let me remind them of that time during the Spanish-American War when the Battleship Oregon was ordered from San Francisco to Cuba. The Oregon had to sail 13,000 miles. Had the Canal been opened she would have saved 10,000 miles and about thirty days in time. Ships sailing between New York and San Francisco save 7,873 miles by coming through the Canal, which is less than forty miles in length. When we passed through the Canal we came by one of the Panama mail steamers. We passed through the Canal in about seven hours; the tolls cost the Steamship Company about $4,000, but that was cheap compared to the 10,000 miles and the time which the Canal route saved the Steamship Company.

It is true we owe the Canal largely to Theodore Roosevelt and a few great engineers like Wallace, Shonts, and Goethals, but none of these men would have made the thing possible if it had not been for Dr. Gorgas, that great man of Medical Science; the man who cleaned up Havana, Cuba, of the deadly yellow fever and made that city of filth and disease and death as clean as a pin and made it one of the cleanest cities of the Caribbean. The thing that defeated the French at Panama was General Yellow Fever. Malaria had slain its thousands; yellow fever its tens of thousands, and if Gorgas had not cleaned up the Isthmus first, it is a grave question if the Canal had ever been built! A Frenchman remarked to DeLesseps when he went to Panama that he would not find trees enough to make wood for the coffins of the dead. His prophecy was almost true. The French died by the thousands, other workers died by thousands. It was disheartening; yellow fever conquered and it took the Americans not only to build the Canal but to conquer yellow fever, and they did it so effectively that Panama now is a garden of the Tropics; a great resort for winter tourists. During the weeks I have been working in Panama and the Canal Zone I have met no misquitos, flies; there are none, and everything is as clean as a whistle. I presume the American flag floating over Panama Canal Zone floats over the cleanest bit of the world to be met on the Western Hemisphere.

Now let me give a few concrete facts about the Canal.

Length of the Canal, from deep water to deep water, 50.76 statute miles, length of sea-level approaches 15.02 miles, of lake and locks sections, 35.74 miles, airline distance across the Isthmus, shore to shore, 34 miles.

Depth of the Canal: Atlantic channel 42 feet at mean tide; Pacific channel 45 feet (being deepened); lake and cut sections 45 to 85 feet. Bottom of Gaillard Cut above mean sea level, 40 feet (least width 300 feet).

Excavations from the Canal (about 350,000,000 cubic yards) represent as much material as would come from a hole 15 feet square driven clear through the earth. This material would make a cube 2,132 feet on each side, and would build 106 pyramids as large as the largest at Gizeh.

Not less than 4,500,000 cubic yards of concrete, requiring the same number of barrels of cement, were used in building the Canal locks.

In the fiscal year, commercial vessels made 6,413 transits of the Canal, carrying 30,663,006 tons of cargo. About 250,000 travelers visit the Canal in a year. Of these, about 160,000 pass through en route to other points.

The capacity of the Canal is estimated at 17,000 transits a year, or about three times as many as were made in 1929. It is believed, however, that the Canal locks must be enlarged in thirty years, and the water supply in Gatun Lake increased in five years.

Income of the Canal is about $50,000,000 a year.

Population of the Canal Zone includes several thousand soldiers at the various U. S. Army posts, crews of naval vessels stationed at the Canal, and a civilian population of 28,000, composed chiefly of Canal employees and their dependents. There are about 3,000 skilled ("gold") employees, and about 10,700 unskilled ("silver") on the Canal and Panama Railroad payroll, which amounts annually to about $14,500,000. "Silver" employees are natives and West Indians, formerly paid in Panama silver dollars, or pecos, worth 50 cents each in American money. Prices in silver are double those in gold.

Distances saved by ships using the Canal over old routes are very great. Between New York and San Francisco the distance of 13,135 nautical miles by way of the Strait of Magellan has been reduced to 5,262 miles by way of the Canal, a saving of 7,873 miles.

To May 31, 1930, tolls-paying traffic through the Canal had aggregated 58,953 vessels, of 335,284,711 gross registered tons, 261,596,759 Panama Canal net tons; tolls paid amounted to $245,411,000.22. For the five years ended June 30, 1929, such traffic averaged 5,643 vessels, $24,526,457.26 tolls, 27,607,643 tons of cargo per year. In these five years ships of 29 nationalities passed through the Canal; American ships were about 42 per cent of the total, British about 27 per cent. About 36 per cent of the cargo was in the United States intercoastal trade.

The color line is handled at the Canal very wisely. The white employees (Americans) are paid in gold, the colored are paid in silver. So when you go into any public building you will not find signs "white," "colored," but the words "silver" and "gold" suffice for the purpose.

There are two seasons—the wet and the dry. The wet season begins about May and lasts eight months. The dry season of four months, beginning in January, is a most delightful time—rather warm in the middle of the day, but always a good breeze at night. No day in the Zone is as hot as New York, Philadelphia, or Chicago in August. In the wet season, the houses become damp, and clothes, shoes and other articles of apparel become mildewed unless kept in a dry closet.

The fact is that there are burning lights in the closets throughout the whole of the wet season and often in the dry season. An electric light is kept burning in practically every piano. Between the wet and dry seasons it is disagreeable, for there is little breeze and the humidity is great. Energy is at a low ebb. It is this depressing time, and the fact that it is warm at all times, that makes an annual vacation a necessity. Generally, women suffer more than men.

The Government operates stores which handle all sorts of foodstuffs and supplies for the ships and their personnel. These supply 35,000 people on the Isthmus regularly, and have ample reserve stocks. Cold storage plants and a modern abattoir and packing-house are operated. Approximately 8,500 head of cattle, maintained on 40,000 acres of cleared pastures, are consumed annually. Two large ice plants supply the local demand and the ship trade. Thoroughly modern hotels, restaurants, hospitals, and laundries accommodate the traveling public as well as Government employees, including the Army and Navy forces stationed on the Isthmus.

Dry-docks, repair shops, salvage equipment.—The repair facilities include a dry-dock, 1,000 feet long by 110 feet in width, with a depth over keel blocks at normal high tide of 43 feet, and a 300-foot dry-dock for smaller vessels. The large dry-dock is one of the largest in the world; it can receive any ship afloat. Extensive foundries and shops are operated in connection with the dry-docks and have performed repair and manufacturing and construction work on a wide scale. Floating cranes, tug boats, and a salvage steamer assist in repair and salvage.

The Government has followed a policy of making the Canal route attractive as well as feasible and of coupling with it many features of assistance to shipping.

In a previous article I wrote about the Revolution in Panama I witnessed; indeed, I was very close to it, as the Spanish-speaking church where I was holding the revival was near the Palace where early in the morning of Jan. 2, the Revolution broke out. Yesterday I was again in Panama City and witnessed the inauguration of the new President of Panama. The speeches were in Spanish, but I could apprehend sufficient to know from the speakers that they are in earnest to give Panama a decent, honest government. Of course, Panama as a Republic, owes its life to President Roosevelt, who was determined to build the Canal. The only way it could be done was by way of a Revolution and breaking Panama away from Colombia. The United States had absolutely nothing to do in bringing on the Revolution. The Panamaians handled that matter themselves but it did not take Roosevelt long in recognizing the new-born Republic, and effecting a Treaty with it. Panama was born with a gold spoon in its mouth or, in other words, it started its life, not with a debt, but with an endowment of ten million dollars which the U. S. A. paid Panama for the right of way for the great Canal. Ever since that Panama has prospered. It has been raised from an unclean hot-house of disease and death to one of the healthiest cities in this part of the world, and Uncle Sam takes care to keep it clean. Both of the cities of Panama and Colon are kept clean through American inspection. The water system is under the U. S. A., especially the sanitation. The Canal Zone where the American operatives of the Canal live, is kept spotlessly clean. The Canal Zone is well supplied with churches. We have recently held a series of meetings in the Union Church at Balboa. It was our privilege to preach night after night the precious old gospel of full redemption, and the people responded, on the whole, I think, better than was expected. We have some more work ahead of us in the Canal Zone and then we go over again to Panama to preach among the West Indians, of whom there are many thousands in this section. Pray for us in this work.

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

By Rev. A. D. Shockley.

CHAPTER XVI.

PANDEMONIUM REIGNS.

ND now the city was a perfect pandemonium. The better element rejoiced—as was fitting—in the triumph of right, while the vicious were wild with rage, in view of their occupation being gone.

While church services for a Sunday or two, had in them a note of victory for righteousness, the midnight orgies held in saloons and dives gave premonition of desperate lawlessness soon to break out.

To hear these "toughs" talk, one might have inferred that the enforcement of law was the highest offence of which an officer could be guilty, while the men and women who had planned and prayed for the protection of their homes, and the purity of life of their sons and daughters, were anathematized beyond all comparison.

However, in the course of time the city seemed to settle down to its usual quiet, and the events which had so stirred the people seemed likely to be forgotten or only remembered dimly by the average citizen.

The saloons whose proprietors professed to do a legitimate business, such as the city council authorized them to do, selling soft drinks, cigars, etc., were careful to give no occasion for the law to deal with them as it had done with the others.

It goes without saying that the object lesson just given was enough to warn anyone of the consequences of acting in opposition to the awakened public conscience. But if we are understood as hinting that the city had been wholly purged of vice and lawlessness, and that there was none who was ready to take desperate chances to gratify their greed or get even with the leaders in the crusade against sin, we have simply to relate certain facts which came into prominence by the display of the fiendishness of some of the parties who had lost in the legal battle, some three months before, of which we have already spoken. Before we enter into this history, however, we will say that between the disclosures which Ralph Upright made on his release from prison and the termination of the trials spoken of in this chapter three years have passed.

Jessie had been found, and restored to her family; Mrs. Upright had come into possession of her father's estate; Deacon Upright and his family had planned and provided a place in which the fallen might be wooed and won to better lives; Rev. Silsbee had wooed and wedded "only a dressmaker," Miss Holly.

This delay in meting out justice to the evil-doer was due to several causes, among which may be mentioned the long illness of Mrs. Upright, demanding the attention of the deacon day and night, the slow process involved in secretly securing absolute proof of guilt and the technicalities with which the defendant's attorneys sought to obstruct or escape the trial of the cases against them.

Rev. Paxton and Deacon Upright were called one afternoon to the bedside of a man who had been severely injured in a railroad accident, in which several had been killed and scores of others severely injured. They found him in a very critical condition, a fracture of the skull having been sustained, and an injury to the brain resulting.

It was past the hour of midnight when, having seen the injured man relieved by a surgical operation, which relieved the pressure on the brain and restored consciousness, the two gentlemen started to their homes in another part of the city. As they were passing near the railroad shops, through a part of the city but dimly lighted and not very densely populated, they were set upon by some half-score of ruffians with clubs and stones and beaten into insensibility. It is supposed that their assailants must have thought them dead, or had been frightened off before they had finished their fiendish work. At any rate, they were discovered by the patrol, within whose district the assault was made, and they were removed to police headquarters, where they were recognized and prompt measures employed to restore them to consciousness and to secure the capture and punishment of their assailants.

Almost simultaneously with this attack on the two unarmed citizens, men highly esteemed for their philanthropy and Christian character—the home for the friendless, of which Jessie Upright was the head, was set on fire and in spite of every effort on the part of the fire department and citizens, totally consumed. A terrific explosion, directly after the fire was discovered, gave ground for the belief that the building had been undermined and a bomb placed beneath it to insure its destruction should it become apparent that the fire department was about to subdue the flames.

Fortunately the inmates of the house had been removed before the explosion and no lives were lost, except that of one person who could not be identified. His body was found in the basement horribly mangled, and charred by the heat. It was supposed that it was the man who had placed the bomb and had not had time to escape before the explosion.

This affair, following the discovery of the bodies of Paxton and Upright, caused great excitement in the city, and it seemed for a time that a riot would be precipitated. But the counsels of the more conservative citizens prevailed and the riot was averted.

It required careful nursing for nearly a month before Mr. Paxton was able to resume even the lighter labors of his pastorate. As for Deacon Upright, a broken arm and the loss of an eye laid him off duty, so far as physical effort was concerned, for three months. But it is not to be supposed that a man of his resolute will and resourceful character would lose so much time in fruitless repining. The enforced idleness of the hands afforded an opportunity for the mind to mature plans, which should largely increase the efficiency of future activities in his chosen field. He planned and directed, while others enthusiastically gave themselves to the work he set for them to do. It may be said also that there was no lack of funds to carry on the work so dear to the hearts of fathers and mothers, whose children had been turned into the paths of sin, or were in danger from that source.

Before Deacon Upright was able to personally visit the sight of the "home," a larger and more fully equipped building was completed and furnished, largely through the freewill offerings of those who had been moved by sympathy for the Upright family in their deep sorrow and affliction.

The gentleman, from whose bedside Mr. Paxton and Deacon Upright had gone on the night of the assault upon them, had been removed within a week by his friends, who neither told from whence they came nor where they were taking him. It was only known that they had bought tickets to Santa Fe, New Mexico. As the gentleman seemed to have been traveling alone, and none of his effects gave any clew to either his name, his business, or his residence, and his condition when regaining consciousness seemed to render it unwise to try to ascertain these, he left behind him nothing upon which to begin an inquiry as to his past or his future.

From the description Deacon Upright was able to give of his personal appearance, Jessie had a suspicion that he was her recreant husband, and wondered whether if so they might not meet some time and have the relation between them definitely settled.

In her deep humility she realized that she was not entirely guiltless, and hoped that he was not so wholly bad as his conduct had seemed to imply. But at present nothing could be done to clear up the matter, and she turned to her work for others with a softened, chastened spirit.

REPENTANCE.

Text: "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." Luke 13:3.

Repentance is a divine requirement laid upon the sinner as an entrance into fellowship with God.

It is the sorrowful acknowledgment of man that he has estranged himself from his Creator, and bespeaks a willingness to adjust his life to the loving requirements of God.

It is a requirement for which there is no substitute.

However, it is very generally conceded that we have left it out of the requirements for church membership in these days.

Preachers do not preach it, therefore people do not practice it. If you have not repented of your sins do so at once if you do not want to miss heaven.

It takes a lot of grace to keep our loved one's wrinkles from hurting our dignity. Doesn't it?

UNCONSCIOUS BACKSLIDING.

Rev. E. E. Shelhamer.

Text: "And he awoke out of his sleep and said, 'I will go out as at other times before and shake myself,' and he wist not that the Lord was departed from him."

WHEN we speak of Bible characters, especially if they are listed with the worthies mentioned in Hebrews 11, we must tread softly, for in this age of disrespect for the Word of God, the tendency is to be too free in criticising, especially the Old Testament saints. One reason I believe the Bible is God's book, not a man-made book, is that it records not only the good deeds but the frailties of men.

Here was Samson, a child of promise, well born, well trained, but, he became a trifter. It is a wonderful thing to be well born. His parents prayed for an heir. He was a welcomed child. It might be embarrassing if I asked how many of you could testify that all the children in your home were prayed for and gladly welcomed. Poor little things! Don't scold, slap, and jerk them around because they are given to irritability, thievery or sensuality! They cannot help it! They are the unhappy combination of two dispositions that perhaps ought never to have been united. God in mercy has forgiven you and perhaps sanctified you, but nevertheless some of your children are obstinate and rebellious because way back there during the prenatal period the parents were careless and prayerless.

I knew a lovely couple, well saved and sanctified. The man was a good preacher. They had four or five children, one of which was a thief, a liar, and very unclean. The father told me he had whipped this boy more than all the other children put together, but he continued bad. I asked for an explanation. In reply he said, that before this boy was born he and the mother spent the evenings reading that book, "Peck's Bad Boy" and roared and laughed while doing so. Later on it was not "Peck's Bad Boy," but "His—Bad Boy." This was not the case with Samson, he had a good start, but he did three things:

First: Trifled with God.

Second: Trifled with a Woman.

Third: Trifled with Himself.

First: He trifled with a covenant that he and his parents had made. It is a wonderful thing to make a covenant. Many times we receive great blessings, great manifestations of the Spirit. And yet they pass with the using. Not so with a covenant. A special covenantal relationship with God may not be very ecstatic in itself, and yet there is an abiding, far reaching outcome. You may receive a hundred blessings that, good as they are, may not be equal to one or two covenants. Samson's parents entered into a Nazaritish covenant that this boy should not drink wine, nor eat of those meats that were pronounced unclean, nor allow his head to be shaven. For some reason this peculiar covenant implied great blessing and especially physical power. I do not believe Samson was a giant, but just an ordinary man of stature. This is why the Philistines could not account for his supernatural strength.

Samson being perhaps the only child, he grew up doubtless to be more or less self-willed and spoiled. True, he delivered Israel, true he did many remarkable things, not because he was eccentric or amative, but in spite of his inconsistencies. God does the same today: Uses some men mightily, not because they are odd and queer, but in spite of it. Perhaps he might use some of us in a greater measure if we were more evenly balanced.

But, let us make the application! Do not be too severe on Samson. Brother, are you quite sure you have never trifled? Look back in your life and see how you promised God, if he would only help you get out of debt you would do thus and so. He heard your cry and helped you in various ways. Did you keep your promise? Perhaps you became more careless and extravagant since you have had a little surplus than when you were poor. I heard Sam Jones say that when he was a poor circuit preacher and could scarcely buy food and clothes for his family, that he was a much better man then than later when his lectures brought him $30,000 a year besides his evangelistic campaigns. He died of "tobacco heart," smoking 25c cigars—a big man, a wonderful man—but not big enough to quit tobacco.

Brother, do you remember back there when you, or your property were in great danger from disease, fire, or flood? Do you remember how you covenanted with yourself and God, that if you could only get well again, or if your child would be saved from death you would do thus and so? If God would only spare you or give you good crops you would tithe, you would support a missionary; you would let your darling child go as a missionary; yea, you would do a number of things. God in mercy heard your plea. Things turned and came your way, but you have forgotten all about those former convictions. Like Samson, you have trifled with your God.

Second, he trifled with a woman not his equal, and irreligious at that. I tell you it is a serious thing to take advantage of the stranger, the orphan, the widow, or any one who is more or less helpless. Have you ever noticed how often God in warning his chosen people, told them to be kind to the strangers, to the poor, to the fatherless, and then wound up by saying, "For ye were strangers in Egypt." If we are not careful after health, wealth and popularity have smiled upon us more or less, we will cease to be tender, loving, and considerate toward our inferiors.

This is an age of trifling with human affections. Young lovers, yea, sometimes older ones, think it a light thing to have two or three on the string at the same time. Engagements and marriages are hurriedly entered into. Then because of the slightest offense a separation and divorce can be had. This is one reason we have taught our children not to think of getting married under twenty-two or twenty-three. Yea, young people ought not even to keep company under eighteen or twenty. Why? Because they are going over fool's hill from about fifteen to eighteen, and they cannot properly judge at this age who will make a life-long companion. A girl ought to keep that wonderful first kiss and embrace for the man with whom she expects to live the rest of her days. Too bad if she allows Tom, Dick and Harry too much liberty in slobbering around over her and then later on, hand her husband a peach with all the tender, delicate fuzz rubbed off. The same thing ought to apply to a young man. He has no right to demand of his sweetheart what he cannot furnish himself. If he demands that she give a clean bill of health that she always has been pure and unsullied, he ought to give as good as he demands.

I have known young fellows, yea preachers, to be overly anxious for a wife, and in so doing, seemed to lose all self respect and honor. In nearly every town he honeyed around those of the fairer sex. He kept a number "on the string," so to speak, so that if one failed him, he was sure of another. Say, this is wicked and he who does it will surely be punished sooner or later, in one way or another. God help us to be consistent and behave in such a way that later on there will be no embarrassment if we should introduce our companion to a former lover. It is a wonderful thing to be able to demand full respect from that former sweetheart.

I well remember a beautiful young man and his sweetheart who attended my meeting. At first I thought they were newly wedded. Later, I found they were not, but felt sure that they would soon be husband and wife. The courtship continued and finally after months, the young lady was preparing to go a long distance to her northern home. We remarked to her that perhaps the next time we saw them together her name would be changed. "Oh, no!" she replied. "Why! aren't you engaged? Do you not expect to marry this young man?" "Oh, no! we're just friends." Then we became serious and said, "What is this thing you are doing? Accepting presents, yea, costly presents from him and giving him reason to believe you love him and expect to live with him? This is dishonorable! You ought to tell him so." Accordingly, she mustered up enough courage the day before leaving to enter into a plain understanding that the courtship was ended. What was the result? He went raving mad, had to be locked up and was finally taken to the insane asylum, where in three month's time he died of a broken heart. She, as far as I know, continues to profess to be saved and sanctified. Great God! What a settlement awaits some people when they come to the judgment seat of Christ!

Third. Samson trifled not only with his covenant and a woman's affections, but he also trifled with himself—his own personal strength. It is a wonderful thing to be blessed with beauty, or a fine physique, but it is more wonderful to always feel that this is the temple of God and we should keep it clean and holy; for the Holy Spirit does not want to dwell in an unclean house. How sad it is to see beautiful maidens and stalwart young men abuse the temple of the Holy Ghost. Medical statistics show that about 85 per cent of the young men today are not fit to marry, and were it not for the pure blood in the veins of the young mothers, in the next generation half the children would be blind or idiotic. What an awful state of affairs! But how long can we hope for the young mothers to be fit to marry? Look at them! How bold, defiant and half nude they appear! I do not say that they are already fallen, but I do say that they have lost something very essential that belongs to pure womanhood.

Again I say, do not blame Samson too severely. In this age we put a premium on beastiality rather than on intelligence. If a young man can furnish bone and muscle so as to be a good athlete, his professors will give him better marks and pass him more readily than others. When a bunch of these "rough necks" board a street car or train, everything is turned over to them and modest women and ministers must take a back seat.

Men trifle not only with their strength, but with time and money. Oh, the wasted evenings! Oh, the wasted money! We are a nation of spendthrifts! That is one reason we have so many divorces; these young people have never been taught to economize time, strength, or money, then later on when they marry and expenses begin to pile up, the quarrel begins.

But, though I have given you a dark picture, I see a rift in the cloud through which the light begins to break forth. Samson said he would "go out as at other times before and shake himself"; he had done so many times before, he had defied nearly everything under the sun. We are told several times previous to this that the "Spirit of the Lord came upon him." But remember, there is a vast difference between the Spirit of God coming upon a person from without, and the Spirit taking up his abode within. Lots of preachers can pray and preach with a great deal of apparent unction, and yet it may not be because they are in Divine favor. But because God is pleased to put his Spirit upon them, irrespective of their true heart condition.

We are also told that "he wist not that the Lord was departed from him." So, friends, according to this it seems possible that one can lose out unconsciously and hardly realize that he has broken step with God until a crucial test comes and down he goes. This is an age of respectable backsliding! One can continue to pray and testify so that his own companion, yea, he himself will hardly entertain the thought that he has severed connection with God.

They say that out on the level prairie, a railroad engine can run at high speed, at forty or fifty miles per hour, and then with the steam suddenly cut off, continue to run on its own momentum for fifteen miles. My Lord! I wonder if any of these upon this platform are praying or preaching or singing on past unction and past momentum! We can make a fair show in the flesh because back there when we were mightily anointed we learned how to do it, but since then I wonder if any of us have been running on the momentum we had while the fire of God was at white heat in the soul.

We continue to read the sad story that the "Philistines took him and put his eyes out" and brought him down to Gaza and bound him with fetters of brass, and he did grind in the prison house. See him! The mighty giant, once irresistible, but now in bondage, grinding and making "sport" for the unsaved. Poor Samson! Punished through the same channel through which he sinned. Two or three times are we told that he "went down to Timnath and saw a woman." "Went to Gaza and saw there a harlot." We hope that Adam Clarke is correct when he says that this woman was not a bad character, but just an innkeeper. Be that as it may, poor Samson saw entirely too much, and now these eyes have been gouged out and we see him grinding like a horse in the prison house.

Yes, I say, a sad picture, but let us get away from it! Listen to a hopeful note: "Howbeit the hair of his head began to grow again after that he was shaven." No doubt while he grinds, he has time to think and repent. I hear him say to himself and his God, "Oh, I'm so sorry that I trifled with Thee, my God! I'm so sorry I trifled with that wonderful covenant and considered it a light thing! I'm so sorry I was not real obedient to my parents, when I grieved them by taking a wife from the unsaved, rather than the people of God! I'm so sorry I allowed my eyes to wander! I'm so sorry I allowed my head to get into Delilah's lap! I'm so sorry that little by little I hinted the cause of my great strength!"

And you precious soul, you dear distressed and discouraged backslider, will you not here and now bemoan your wanderings? Will you not pledge yourself anew to walk in all the light and be his obedient child once more? If you, like the prodigal, will say, "I will arise and go to my father," I can see the Father of all mercies coming in your direction. An anxious God and an anxious penitent will soon meet each other, for he will take a dozen steps to your one. And methinks, he will hardly let you finish your confession before he places upon your cheek the kiss of reconciliation. God grant that your sad failures may be capitalized, so to speak, and enable you to profit, and cause others to profit in a way that would not have been possible had it not been for your bleak and bitter lesson.

Let us stand and sing that good old hymn composed by William Cowper, same author of "There is a Fountain Filled with Blood."

"O for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame,

A light to shine upon the road
That leads me to the Lamb.

"Where is the blessedness I knew
When first I saw the Lord?
Where is the soul refreshing view
Of Jesus and his Word?"

"What peaceful hours I once enjoyed
How sweet their memory still!
But they have left an aching void
The world can never fill.

"Return, O holy Dove, return
Sweet messenger of rest:
I hate the sins that made thee mourn
And drove thee from my breast."

"The Victory of Jesus Over Sin."

A. L. DICKERSON.

"So the Devil, having fully tried every form of temptation, left him for a time."—Luke 4:13. (Weymouth's translation).

I should never be thought that this temptation of Jesus, by Satan, was not real to him. The onslaught of Satan was so fierce that Luke enters it into the record "being tempted of the devil forty days. And in those days he did eat nothing." Moffat and Weymouth use very descriptive words in their translations of this text. Weymouth translates "Having fully tried every form of temptation," Moffat translates it "After exhausting every kind of temptation." We shudder to think of going through the same thing ourselves. But Satan is attentive unto us also, and attacks us in the same manner. So that if we can learn the secret of the victory of Jesus, we will be better prepared to withstand the onslaught.

First of all, Jesus was conscious of his relationship to the Father. He realized whose Son he was. The story is told that a certain young man was leaving for college. His father went to the station with him, and just as the train was fixing to leave, the father put his arm about the lad's shoulder and said, "My son, do not at any time forget whose son you are." The prince of a royal family is given specific training, so that no matter where he may chance to be he may always conduct himself as becoming a son of the king. The thought that he was the Son of God, that "The Father and I are one" seems never to have been out of the mind of Jesus. Sometimes young people look on parents with a certain amount of contempt and think of them as being backnumbers. But not so with Jesus. He had the profoundest respect for his heavenly Father seeking at all times to do things pleasing unto the Father. The disciples received a similar temptation, arguing among themselves as to who would be the greatest in the kingdom. Because they yielded to this temptation, neither would wash the feet of the other. But Jesus knowing that God had put all things into his hand and that he was come from God and went to God, he riseth from supper and laid aside his garment and took a towel and girded himself . . . and began to wash the disciples' feet." Jesus shared the Jewish conception of the holiness of God, and therefore as God's Son, it was a repulsive suggestion Satan made to him to yield to sin.

Then too, Jesus was conscious of his relationship to his fellowman. He was not only the begotten Son of the Father, but also the Elder Brother of all mankind. He felt that the most lowly and needy were but his closest kin. Paul expressed the attitude of Jesus in 1 Cor. 8:13: "If meat maketh my brother to offend I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." Jesus was acquainted with the fact that men are already sinful enough, and that any excuse given would be taken to go further into sin. The worshippers of other gods thought of their gods as being guilty of the most vile of practices. Thus the worship of these gods was not a deterrent to sin. Jesus had too high a regard for his fellowman to allow himself to be the cause of their further degradation. One reason a preacher must be careful of his conduct—other than the welfare of his own soul—is the fact that others are watching him, ready to enter wherever a gap has been let down. If the public sees the preacher entering questionable places, or doing questionable things, they will reason that if the preacher does it, it must be alright. In like manner children are watching their parents. If, for instance, a father makes and drinks home brew, he must realize that he is weakening the moral stamina of his son. For the son will reason that if dad does it, it must be alright, and if this be not so bad other things cannot be much worse. With the possibility that the son will take the forbidden step. There is no doubt but that a great obligation rests upon each of us to live right for the sake of others. Jesus realized this and strongly resisted the attack of Satan.

He was also conscious of his mission in the world. He came to seek and to save the lost. To do this meant going to the cross. He could not save himself and others at the same time. Satan was tempting him to take the easy way and to suffer nothing. A person seeking notoriety and fame may take the easy road to its accomplishment, but one who sees a goal, will set his face toward it and count not the cost. Nehemiah, rebuilding the walls in the ancient city, was tempted by Sanballat to come down into the valley to talk things over. Nehemiah sent messengers unto them saying, "I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: Why should the work cease whilst I leave it and come down to you?" Somehow I have a greater appreciation of Jesus, when I realize that he did without things which he might have wanted in order to go to the cross for me. When we take the sacrament we must be conscious of the fact that we were in the mind of Jesus when he was fighting Satan for our salvation. John 15:13, we are told that "Greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his life for his friends." This Jesus did, refusing to yield to temptation. He seems to have had always in mind "Other sheep have I which are not of this fold, them also I must bring." Jesus was afraid of sin because it would interfere with the plan of salvation. I wonder if we too, are not willing to forego the pleasures of sin for a season, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, for the sake of those we might be able to help along the highway of God. Jesus was afraid of the effect of sin on himself personally. This is no matter to be taken lightly. Did you ever see a fastidious person who was given to cleanliness in the extreme, and notice how they avoided contact with filth and dirt? That is all sin is, just so much filth and dirt and foulness. The clean soul of Jesus avoided sin as such. A foul leper he did not shun, but sin was a plague to be avoided. He willingly carried the sins of the whole world and made atonement for them, but the very thought of sin for himself in experience was to be put aside. I am wondering if having the mind of Christ, does not also include for us, having the attitude of Jesus toward sin. If so, sin is not something to be winked at nor taken lightly, but a curse to cause us to shudder and to be viewed with alarm.

Feeling as he did, Jesus, therefore used everything possible to overcome. First of all, he kept close to the Father in prayer. There is strength in prayer not to be found elsewhere. He also had recourse to the Scripture. There is strength in God's word, especially to us now in the promises of Jesus. As a child I wondered what pleading the promises of Jesus meant to older people, but I have a better appreciation and under-

This and That—Here and There.

THOMAS CLARK HENDERSON.

I do not like that word tact. I know that it is a perfectly good word and has a very useful place to serve; but I dislike it anyway. The tactful person is able to discern what is the fit and proper thing to do in approaching a person or a situation or a problem. Most of us should have more of such ability. About that fact I raise no debate. But I do not like the word because it is very likely to keep company with detestable folk. It is like the color grey, it is neither black nor white, and more often than not tact is more intimate with black than with white. It has no definite and strong moral loyalties. It is nice, but not clean-cut and positive. It so often is simply a thin veil covering, though not hiding, moral compromise and slick cowardice. As a word it is something like the much stronger word courage. One can be courageous in a bad cause, or one may be courageous in a good cause. Tact may be shown in a noble purpose and task, or in an evil intention. The trouble with so many dangerous teachers, leaders and champions is that they are so proper, so nice, so skillful in their address and approach, while the glory and strength of so many heroic prophets of truth is that they do not have a nickel's worth of tact. The prophet of God is usually rough and irregular and outside the circle of polite respectability. Saintry Samuel Chadwick of England said recently that "the modern church is vainly trying to make God respectable, and God will not be respectable." Christ was not careless, nor was he daintily tactful. Truth is truth, and its demands are usually so radical and so blunt that it is rejected by those who care much for delicate proprieties. I am glad that the word tact is not in the New Testament!

A young lady, of possibly twenty years, was gloriously converted in one of our recent revivals, and, when given a chance to testify, she stood before the congregation and with an indescribable tenderness and awe in her voice she said, "I am so thankful that God has saved me IN TIME!" Her statement with its positive accents gripped me. I cannot know what was in her mind when she said that, and to guess would be foolish, but I know that she had occasion to be grateful to God that he saved her from sin before it got in its deadly work in her character, and before the lure of the deceitful teachings of the day had blinded her to the charm of the narrow way of eternal life. I could not escape thinking of many others who will come to the hour when they will be compelled to regret that, when it is too late, they see the worth of salvation and the deadly, soul-damning work of sin and popular worldliness. Hours of great opportunities do not often repeat themselves. Youth is the time to seek salvation. John Wesley must have been seeing something of this truth when he pointed to the poor convict on his way to the gallows and said: "But for the grace of God, there goes John Wesley."

As long as a man will use money to buy himself some cigarettes, he is still some little distance from where he needs help without having to work for it. Driving through the country one sees numbers of men, young and old, beckoning for a free ride, while they gaily suck a cigarette or a cigar. I for one refuse to knowingly give free help to those who will use the aid given them to indulge in more tobacco.

By the way, a lot of preachers should be ashamed of themselves for not definitely voicing their protest against cigarettes in general, and specifically against their own churchmen using them. It certainly looks worse for a woman to smoke cigarettes than for a man to do it, but until we protest out loud and clearly against men doing it, we can never consistently condemn the shameless women and girls who do it. No man is following Christ while he smokes a cigarette. If we are going to save the boy from the use of cigarettes and cigars, we will have to first save his daddy.

It is interesting to note how a real revival attracts people. There is something about a soul-saving revival which is super-denominational and which excites the interest of people of any sect or creed. In one of the more recent revival crusades in which Mrs. Henderson and I labored, the pastor took a census of the audience one night and discovered that in that audience of not more than six hundred persons there were representatives of 22 different churches and 11 different denominations. I was told that in that same audience there was one man who was publicly recognized as an atheist. People were getting saved night after night. The plain and rugged Gospel of Christ was being fearlessly preached. Testimonies were being joyfully given. Not one "stunt" was "pulled off" and absolutely nothing was done to court popular favor. The attraction was the revival of soul-saving, sin-killing Christianity. There is nothing new about what I am here reporting, of course, but it needs to be said again and again for the sake of the churches which are giving up their Sunday night services because they cannot attract the people—and, talk as they please, they would have Sunday night services if they could get a crowd. If such churches would get life enough to try to get sinners converted instead of displaying a lot of cheap dignity and poise, they would certainly get a hearing for their preacher.

I cannot but conclude that altogether too many of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church do not have a clean-cut faith in the rugged and unpopular truths of the Gospel of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, or else that they are so friendly with the enemies of Christ that they fear to offend them by saying anything definite and radical against the liberal theology of the present day. They seem much more apologetic for orthodoxy than for doubt and unbelief. However, here is a bit of right thinking that is refreshing from the pen of Bishop Thomas Nicholson, and it may earn him the disdain of some of his colleagues: "We may become so tolerant that we stand for nothing vital. We may so interpret the scientific temper and attitude that we have no convictions. We need the note of Pauline certainty in all our teaching. We may secure it by the same methods by which he attained it. Not until our religious education enthrones Jesus as THE Redeemer of the world, and not, as Mr. Gandhi is reported to have said, A Redeemer: not until it enthrones HIM as the one who has power to regenerate men and to give each and every human being power to become a son of God, has our religious education reached its goal."

The Christian workers of England frequently use a parade of Christian people to give publicity to their evangelistic crusades or other religious gatherings. A few hundred people are marshalled into a parade, with banners, musical instruments, singing and megaphone announcements, to march through the streets of city or village. Mrs. Henderson and I have been trying the same thing in connection with some of our evangelistic meetings and find that it is not at all hard to do, and it does a fine bit of wholesome advertising for the revival. We have the parade on the first Monday night of our crusade. We ask the Sunday school and the young people's society to share it with us, and wherever we can we ask the Salvation Army to join with us, bringing their band. It is not difficult to get two hundred persons to join in such a parade. And it is a thrilling sight to see that many men, women, girls and boys gleefully singing and marching for Jesus Christ. So far we have used only one hymn in the singing of the marchers—Brother George Bennard's famous hymn, "The Old Rugged Cross." We often notice the people on their porches or standing on the street corners join in singing with us as we pass them. Some thrilling things happen in connection with these rather spectacular parades. We borrowed the idea from the old country, and we hope that others will find it as useful and possible as we have. I think I should add that in threatening weather we have used trucks to carry musicians and singers, and the people ride in automobiles.

The true Evangelist is a warrior for souls. He is never content except when he is in the battle for souls. As the regular pastorates of our churches are carried on now, they are like a prison to him. To settle down and be content to teach and make preaching and teaching an end in itself seems like putting out the fires of life to him. If he is not bringing men and women to God, he is restless and makes others restless. Finney tried to be a teacher of theology in Oberlin and to give his time to the leading of the great school there, but he could not stay there constantly, and so he spent nearly six months of each year in evangelistic work. Even his ministry in Oberlin was dominantly evangelistic. The evangelist could be content to take and stay with a regular pulpit and shepherd a flock of believers, if they would be active with him in trying to get sinners converted, but not otherwise. I am thinking of two men who have spent many years in fruitful evangelism who are now giving all their time to the directing of strong city Missions. The churches are shutting their doors to evangelists of the old type, and these men knew enough not to accept a berth where they would have to bank their fiery passion for men, so they started a revival-center where every day in the year they can do the work of an evangelist. God is blessing them, the people are supporting them and men and women are being saved and sanctified through their labors. That is exactly as it should be.

Dr. Morrison Says:

Every one should read a "Life of Christ."

We have been very fortunate in picking up a few hundred copies of Farrar's Life of Christ which is said to be one of the greatest on the market. It is a large, attractive, cloth-bound volume of 744 large pages, good print, good paper. Regular net retail price of $3.00.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

CAMP SYCHAR.

It is Bethel, and Jabbok, and Transfiguration;
Conviction, Conversion, and Sanctification;
Poor Jacob has pilloved his head on a stone,
And he dreams of a ladder that reaches the throne

He knows he is guilty of cheating his brother;
He is trying to unload his guilt upon mother;
But when he is ready to die in despair,
The promise of Abraham "gets on the air."

He clings to the promise and builds him an altar;
One battle is fought, but he postpones Gibraltar;
He clings to his Birth-right, and goes on his way,
But puts off his Jabbok to some later day.

He never has reached the fullness of God;
He is walking a little too close to the sod;
But in all his domestic and business affairs,
He hungers for victory over the tares.

At last he is making a full consecration;
He is counting the cost, with no reservation;
If Esau approaches, and cuts off his head,
Don't say that a holiness seeker is dead.

Camp Sychar is worthy of victory fame;
And many a Jacob is changing his name;
And when the carnality comes to an end,
Quite often an enemy turns to a friend.

Camp Sychar is teaching that Jabbok is yours,
Without asking Jacob about the detours;
And children are learning the way to the cross,
Without all those years of sinning and loss.

Oh, see the young people in triumphal tramp;
Just singing and shouting about Sychar Camp;
The angels are singing and shouting above,
To see the young people so filled with God's love.

Ten days at Camp Sychar, and five hundred souls
Have bowed at the altar, and felt the "live coals";
A Bethel, a JABBOK, and soul Tribulation,
Then a glad PENTECOST, and a TRANSFIGURA-TION.

TIENTSIN, CHINA.

Dear Friends of The Herald Family:

On Christmas morning we were invited to take part in a program to be given that night in the newly opened mission hall of the National Holiness Association at Tientsin. Fifteen minutes before time to open the service we found the little hall filled with a motley crowd of raw heathen who had gathered in off the streets, mostly men and older children. When the singing began more crowded in until every available space from the platform to the back of the hall was literally packed. Still more tried to get in and the pressure became so great that a window was broken. Some tried to force their way to the front and quarrels ensued. A group of newly converted boys and girls were to sing, "Joy to the World," but the crowd was so thick that the boys in the back couldn't get through so the girls sang by themselves. Confusion increased until it was impossible to continue the program. The speaker's efforts to quiet them did little good. Once he clapped his hands for attention but the congregation took it as a sign of applause and joined in loudly. Things had become somewhat quieter and the preacher started his message when the lights went out. Investigation proved that someone had pulled the switch. A few became frightened and went out. When the lights were turned on again we were able to close the door, however, those on the outside kept knocking for admittance.

The situation was plainly beyond the control of man. Some who knew how to pray silently looked to God to quiet the confusion so that those who were eager to hear might receive the gospel. Almost instantly a change took place and better attention was given the message. One little girl sitting on the edge of the platform pulled Byron's trouser leg until she gained his attention, then pointed both thumbs upward to indicate that what the speaker said pleased her. It was noticed that throughout the service a group of six or eight older boys were very orderly and listened with rapt attention. These, we learned, had given their hearts to Christ a few days before and had already developed a respect and reverence for the Christian service. They, with ten or fifteen others, also newly converted, were the only Christians in the entire mass.

The cities of China are unusually fertile fields for street and slum mission work. No matter where the hall is located along the busy streets, at almost any hour of the day or night it will be filled to overflowing. For the most part the congregations are made up of raw heathen who know little, if anything, of the gospel. We have found them ready listeners. Great numbers of them are from the poorer classes that must continually struggle against unbelievable poverty to keep soul and body together. Many have never felt the gladdening touch of the hand of love, so when they become convinced that God cares for them and that Christ died to save their souls they turn eagerly to the refuge of the Cross. They come from the lowest but the power of the gospel lifts them to the highest. In mission after mission we meet preachers and Bible women who have come in off the streets to find Christ in some slum mission.

Tonight we closed a series of meetings in Wesley Methodist Chapel. It is one of the older churches of Methodism in this section. Political disturbances and anti-christian propaganda, together with the chilly blasts of modernism, have so stifled spiritual life that for years the church has been cold and formal. We praise God that the Holy Spirit has been working, and the last two nights some fifty came to the altar. There was much earnest praying and some clear testimonies.

Next Sunday we will enter a two-weeks' campaign in Peking with Methodists, Presbyterians, and China Independent Church uniting. We feel that this is a wonderful opportunity to preach "Holiness unto the Lord." Friends have told us that other than the Salvation Army, no exponents of the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification have worked in Peking for decades. Pray that God will enable us to go through these open doors in his name.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' CONVENTION.

Every evangelist in America should have attended the recent Convention in Chicago. Under the leadership of Evangelist Harry W. Vom Bruch, president of the Interdenominational Evangelistic Association, this convention was a great time of inspiration and blessing. From the start, the note of spirituality was sounded and all through the eight days the tide rose. Prayer for a great revival was offered and on several occasions these times of heart-searching prayer lasted until the early hours of the morning. The attendance grew steadily throughout the week until on the last day at the afternoon session 5,000 were in attendance and hundreds were turned away. Many people hearing part of the sessions broadcast over station WMBI drove many miles to Chicago to be present at some of the services. A number of listeners over the air were converted as they sat before the loud-speaker.

Many churches in the Chicago area were supplied by Evangelists on the Sundays of the convention. A record was kept of the conversions and a total of 768 was recorded for the week. It was voted to make this an annual meeting. Many cities sent in invitations for 1932 but to date none have been accepted. Announcement will be made later. In these times when America stands in such need of a great spiritual awakening it behooves us all to stand together and declare the Gospel—the power of God unto salvation. Not creed, but Christ; not sect, but Saviour; not denomination, but Deliverer."

Paul White, Song Evangelist.

JACKSON, MICHIGAN.

Dear old Herald: How I revel in the good things you bring to my door every week. I have concluded to never be without you as long as dear Brother Morrison graces your pages. How his articles stir the soul and what an inspiration they are to us in these days of flabby morals. Dr. Ridout, too, is doing a wonderful work and his weekly page is eagerly read. In fact, all the contributors are doing an excellent work that only eternity can measure.

Last August I closed my pastorate and re-entered the evangelistic field. My District Assembly very kindly granted me an Evangelistic Commission not only for the Michigan District but to the "region beyond." My first engagement with the church and on the battlefield of action was with the Pilgrim Holiness Church in this city. Rev. E. F. Ewers is its good pastor. He stands by you in a royal manner no matter how hot the shots fly or how loud the shells boom when they burst. He does not "pussy-foot," if you please. The battle was hot and furious although the enemy was not "like grasshoppers" for multitude. A few sought the Lord. Some found and others did not. Just the usual, you know. There does not seem to be any brotherly co-operation in this town among the holiness churches. No matter who is the evangelist the motto seems to be "every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost." How this must pain the great heart of the Master who prayed, "Sanctify them wholly that they may be ONE that the world may know—that the world may believe" (John 17). Jackson is noted as a hard field and I do not wonder. I am sure it would be a great victory here if us holiness people could get the vision of brotherliness. Amen!

I am just home from Bay City. We conducted a prayer convocation in the Church of the Nazarene there. This was my third visit to this good folk and every time I hold a meeting there it gets better and better. The last night many said they hoped I would return again. How the Lord did bless us during the week, especially the last night. The church had been passing through a dry spell for some time and there had not been much visible fruit. They had recently closed a meeting with a splendid evangelist but with little visible fruit. But the truth had been preached and the people had been helped and it was our good fortune to see some of the results. Praise the Lord! We did not give any call until the last service and it resulted in eleven souls coming to God. There were ten young people and one aged mother who said she had never sought before. I cannot tell when I have seen real soul travail before, but I am certain I saw it that night. It came upon two of the most devout and spiritual young women of the church. They were women of prayer and deep piety. Their very souls seemed to be torn with agony and despair. It was wonderful indeed! All we need, and oh, how badly we need it, is good old-fashioned praying. I may be wrong in my conclusion, but I do not believe I am, when I say that good old times will return anywhere when the people take unto themselves the ministry of prayer. "We have not because we ask not," says practical James. Old-fashioned revivals are not out of date, only as the people neglect to pray through.

I am now at home giving myself to prayer and the ministry of the word (Acts 4:6). I am whetting the old Damascus blade for greater victories than ever in all my existence. Satan does not love me any too well, and has tried to close my ministry on all sides for quite a while, "But God, who is rich in mercy" has defeated him, so far, and "I continue unto this day." He does not seem to love the way God leads me to give out the unpopular truths of the Word, minus compromise. I am not asking anything but the prayers of earnest men and women that God will continue to set before me open doors where I can utter the truth as it is in his Word. "I am debtor" (Rom. 1:14). "I am ready" (Rom. 1:15). "I am not ashamed" (Rom. 1:16).

Evangelist E. E. Wood, Jackson, Mich.

CHICAGO CENTRAL DISTRICT HOME MISSIONS.

We are now getting ready for another great year of Home Missions in our denomination on our District. Among our 11,000,000 souls in Illinois, Chicago and Wisconsin, we are practically certain that more than three out of every five of the people of these 11,000,000 have no religious connection of any kind—neither Protestant, or Catholic or Jewish. Then when it comes to real vital salvation as set forth and held by the Church of the Nazarene and holiness people in general, the number is wonderfully reduced again and our hearts cry out, "Oh, for soul-saving institutions where there is a real Christ!" There are hundreds of cities, towns and hamlets, where there is no soul-saving mission or church in this great territory.

To that end we are praying and planning for God to help us to get this great work on the minds and hearts of God's true saints so that we will go out into God's great white harvest field and reach the perishing and the dying who are dropping into eternity with no loving God and saving Christ in the awful age in which we live.

Our District-Wide revival that we are now putting on in this territory will help to solve this Home Missionary problem as much as anything we know—for the Bible says, "But ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you; and ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." Acts 1:8. Here is Home Missionary work.

First—We Nazarenes should have just one revival a year—that is all year! When that takes place—we are seized with that mighty initial passion that every truly and genuinely sanctified soul possesses, that causes them to go after lost and dying souls. It will also cause God's people to go out into the highways and hedges and bring people to the feet of Jesus Christ.

That mighty consuming, burning passion for a lost and dying world is the dynamic of Home Missions. Here is a demonstration of what I am talking about: Oliver Morgan, a student of Olivet College, went to the Northeast section of Danville, Ill., and in a good residential district found a good church building closed. This wide-awake young man burning with a holy passion for God and a lost world, opened up the church, secured some good singing, did some good preaching and in a short time had a crowd—more than enough to fill the church. Recently President Willingham of Olivet College, organized a church with thirty-eight members—they have a Sunday school of 150. That is home missions according to good Nazarenism and the old-fashioned Bible way. First—here's the situation in a nutshell! A holiness college producing a preacher with good education, burning, consuming passion, a young man not afraid to go out into the highways, clean up the old building, buy some coal, get a crowd, begin to sing, preach and shout, and call mourners and have a revival!

Men! Men! Men! That is our greatest need. It is reported that Wesley said: "Give me twenty men who fear nothing but God and I will make the gates of hell tremble." It is true in the twentieth century. The world was never so hungry for Jesus Christ as it is today. The world is not gospel-hardened. The question is—Men!—who love Jesus Christ so well that they would go out and die for him. It is reported that John Wesley, after preaching to multiplied thousands one day, retired to an old building with his co-worker, and slept on a board. In the night he asked his fellow-worker how he was resting. He replied, "I am not resting." Wesley said: "Take courage, for I have one whole side on which the skin remains." But following this, Wesley went out and preached to ten thousand at five o'clock in the morning, and he thanked God that there were plenty of blackberries in that country. Men with passion, sane vision, willing sacrifice, who are willing to die for Jesus Christ and his cause, are our great need in this twentieth century. Any one wishing to start a Church of the Nazarene in Illinois, Wisconsin or Chicago will please write me, E. O. Chalfant, General Delivery, Danville, Ill.

only wholly sanctified and filled with the Holy Ghost? They grieve that your teachers and leaders have been so ignorant and want you to join with them in prayer that these poor, dull brethren may be illuminated and come up into the high regions where they dwell; and so on; and so on. Wind of doctrine! This sort of thing has wrought havoc in the Holiness Movement from the days of John Wesley to the present time and no doubt will continue to do so. It is because of this that we find the instruction and exhortation in the Scriptures under discussion.

Let us notice this sixteenth verse. Here we find that the whole body of perfected believers is to be united, joined together and compacted in order to the edification of every member in love. It is thus that the church, with all of its members, or the school with its officials, from president to sexton, faculty and student body, especially a holiness school, is united like a victorious army.

No army can approach perfection that does not have quite a number of separate organizations united into one harmonious whole. There must be the solid columns of infantry, but they would be practically helpless without the artillery. There must be the cavalry for scouting, spying out the movements of the enemy and reporting to headquarters. There must be the airplane corps, both for discovery and dropping of destructive bombs. There must be the engineering organization for the measuring of distances, the bridging of streams. How helpless an army would be without such an organization. And there must be the commissary department; the soldiers must have food. And each one of these organizations must work in perfect harmony in the support of every other organization. Many a battle has been lost because the artillery did not come up in time or the engineering corps did not get the river bridged in order to bring up the enforcements or, for some cause, the cavalry at the psychic moment failed to charge.

So it is with the church when it lacks proper spiritual union. The church should be baptized with the Holy Ghost into one body with one supreme purpose. As we have in our lesson, "The whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth."

All of this leads up to the higher perfection, a spiritual union, which increases the strength of all and gives the strength that each one possesses into a united strength that lifts the whole body into a power and sufficiency which otherwise is quite impossible.

These suggestions are especially true of the holiness people. Nothing quite so important as harmony. First, the harmony that comes from a like experience of cleansing, a holy fraternity that exists among those who, however different the paths over which they have travelled may be, have converged to one great center of perfect cleansing and perfect love. Let us be thus united and each one of us in a mystical and peculiar sense receives additional strength, perfecting and power from every other one, and we become a gracious influence, a center of power, a spiritual magnet that radiates light, life, and an attraction which draws to us from the ends of the earth sympathy and assistance.

Rising in this perfection we have a union with God which gives us a power beyond our conception that in a sense is irresistible. Selfishness can easily destroy this power, break our force, ruin us. God cannot bless selfishness or wastefulness or extravagance. No true soul that lives in communion with God can pray for or expect his blessing where selfishness is indulged or finds a place. The selfishness and theft of one man, Aiken, in the Hebrew camp, brought defeat and death to the hosts of Israel. How very careful we should be, and must be, or bring upon us the displeasure of God and the contempt of men. I have known some holiness schools that drifted away into self-seeking and became desolations, a reproach and a sneer among the enemies of God, and the whole teaching of full salvation. May the Holy Spirit guide and save us from all selfishness, and pride or boasting of any kind in this great crisis in world history.

We learn from the Apostle in this lesson, that God's great objective is "the perfecting of the saints, the edifying of the body of Christ," which is the church, and it is to this end that Christ, not only gave himself to die upon the cross, but he has given to the church a group of workers consisting of prophets, apostles, evangelists, pastors, and teachers, all of these agencies working to one great end—the perfecting of the saints.

How important is this perfecting of our consecration, faith, purity, and love. Jesus has gone to prepare a place for those who have been perfected in these essentials of Christian character. We may be imperfect in many things while in this body. No doubt there will be much to learn of growth, development and aggressiveness in that future life that extends in the aeons beyond the curtain of death, but in order to enter upon that life we must be brought into a perfect obedience, a perfect trust and a perfect purity from all sin in this life. This is the divine objective. For this purpose Jesus came into this world, died, arose from the dead, organized the church and anointed his servants to lead us on to perfection of purity and love.

What Is Happening!

There has been, and still is, much discussion going on with reference to evangelists, the value of revival meetings, the best methods of bringing people into the church, and this one great matter of bringing souls to Christ.

Come to think of it, is much being done and said about saving the lost? We hear of decisions, of people being visited and induced to unite with the church, of people deciding to accept Christ! What about Christ accepting the people? Think of that for a minute, perhaps, several minutes.

In the salvation of souls there must be repentance; there must be broken-hearted sorrow and a contrite spirit. There must be the humble prayer of the sinner for Christ to accept me. The salvation of human souls is not a transaction between mere human beings. If the Holy Spirit is not present regenerating a penitent heart, it is all a sad and empty transaction, and of more hurt than help.

But what is actually happening is this: Thousands of people are being brought into the Methodist Church without hearing earnest gospel preaching; preaching without repentance, without regeneration, without any thought of pressing on to a pure heart and a holy life. Deny this statement, if you choose, but God knows it is true.

HEAR ME!

There is a place in this world, and tremendous need of a Methodist Church that believes intensely in revivals of religion, and holds them: that believes in evangelists and uses them; that believes in the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost for the individual, and insists on it; that believes in the sanctifying power of Jesus' blood and leads the people into this cleansing and establishing grace. The world is in need of a body of Methodist people who are saved from sin, and the love of sin; who are done with all desire for the amusements that the sinful, lost souls entertain and amuse themselves with as they hasten down to hell. Just such a Methodist Church as this is one of the greatest needs of the world.

WHO SAYS AMEN!

Agnosticism versus Gnosticism; or Infidelity or Christianity.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HERE was recently held in our city a Religious Forum in which the Jewish, Catholic, Christian and Agnostic faiths were presented. The Jewish faith was represented by a Rabbi of this city, whose name has escaped me, the Catholic faith was represented by Mr. O'Brien, of Chicago, the Christian faith by Rev. Welch, of this city, and the Agnostic platform was represented by Clarence Darrow, the famous criminal lawyer of Chicago.

Each speaker was allowed thirty minutes in which to represent his phase of the question, whose places in the program were according to the result of a drawing, which gave the Protestant speaker the last place.

It occurred to me to give our readers some of the arguments of the agnostic, Mr. Darrow, and try to answer them as best I may, in THE HERALD. I shall divide my discussion into two parts, the first part dealing with the miracles of the Old Testament, and the second article dealing with the miracles of the New Testament.

DEFINITIONS.

The word "agnostic" means ag, no, and gnostic, knowledge—NO KNOWLEDGE. In other words, one who knows nothing.

Webster says: "It is that doctrine, professing ignorance, neither asserts nor denies. The Theological doctrine that the existence of a personal Deity, an unseen world, etc., can neither be proved nor disproved—the opposite of dogmatic theism."

Gnostic means sagacious, wise—to know. One of the ancient sect who claimed a true interpretation of Christianity.

In order to be a witness whose evidence is taken at par value, we must know something about the facts in the case. To talk about a thing while you confess that you do not know what that thing is, is to admit that you do not know what you are talking about. Upon these premises the Agnostic disqualifies as a witness. It is difficult to argue with a person who knows nothing of the subject under discussion and does not care to know.

Huxley, English biologist, said, "Agnosticism came to him as suggestively antithetic to the Gnostic of Church history who knew too much."

Let us begin where the Agnostic begins—"In the beginning!" They ask who is God? And how did he come to be? The Bible nowhere tries to prove that there is a God; it simply takes it as a fact evidenced by the works of creation, and the harmonious workings of creation since time began. It is not necessary to undertake to prove that the sun is shining on a cloudless day at twelve o'clock noon.

God is spoken of in the Bible as the one "who inhabiteth eternity"—the eternities before the world was formed and time began. God is the eternal, independent, self-existent One, known only to himself, fully. A being who cannot err or be deceived; infinite in goodness, and can do nothing but what is just and right. "In the beginning" is before, by creative act, he made the world and all that therein is.

The Agnostic makes light of the fact that the Bible says that in "six days God created the heavens and the earth." Time could not begin until the creative works of God began to function. It is the minority who believes that six days of 24 hours each is the length of day that God used in his creation. It was doubtless periods, or cycles of time, perhaps millions of years in duration. With God, a thousand years is as a day. Or, so far as I am concerned, he could have created them in any length of time he chose, be it long or short. With God all things are possible.

THE RIB STORY.

It is said, "The Lord caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept, and he took one of his ribs and closed up the flesh instead thereof." "It is immaterial," says Adam Clarke, "whether it was a rib or part of his side; some part of man was to be used, whether bone or flesh, it matters not. God could have formed woman out of the dust of the earth, but had he done so, she must have appeared in Adam's eyes as a distinct being, to whom he had no natural relation. But God formed her out of part of man, he saw she was of the same nature, the same flesh and blood, consequently having equal powers, faculties and rights. This insured his affection and excited his esteem."

There is a wonderful lesson to be derived from this making woman from a part of man. In making humanity in God's own image, and likeness, he must make the second human person proceed from the first, as the second divine person proceeds from the first, and the third human person from the first and second, as the third divine person proceeds from the first and second. Here we have the Trinity of Divinity and the trinity of humanity paralleled in this method of woman's creation.

The Bible states one of the most profound facts of all time, a fact which images forth that eternal relation which exists between the three Divine persons, when it says, "Let us make man—humanity—in our own image and likeness." Like many other things to which the unbeliever objects, this creation of woman transcends the intellectual, not to say, spiritual, acumen of our would-be scientists, philosophers and biologists. Of course, they stagger at this act of God, as told in his Word, because they have no roots of faith in which to grow spiritual discernment and spontaneous credibility.

THE JONAH STORY.

Agnosticism ridicules the miracles of the Old Testament and New, and by keen sarcasm, so characteristic of their unbelief, they sneer at what they cannot account for by natural processes. They do not try to account for the story of Jonah, because he never was, they say. He is a myth, unbelievable and absurd. We admit that it is a miracle from beginning to end, just such a miracle as our God can perform when he wants to teach one of his disobedient children the lesson they need to learn. God had to teach Jonah that disobedience to his commands brought disaster, loss and disappointment.

He "prepared a great fish"—just as easy to do as to create the smallest fish that swims the sea—just the dimensions that would suit Jonah's necessities; and he kept Jonah in this submarine until he shouted, "salvation is of the Lord!" And when the fish deposited him on the shore the first place he struck for was Nineveh, God's destination for him.

Christ distinctly refers to this incident in Noah's life when he said, "As Jonah was three days and nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Then he goes on to tell how the people of Nineveh received the preaching of Jonah; and yet our agnostics tell us that there was no such person. Well, I shall believe Christ's testimony, notwithstanding. No other evidence is needed to prove the trustworthiness of this Old Testament miracle than this attestation of Christ. Jonah is a striking example of the frailty of human nature, but it shows that a man can be whipped into line if the right methods are used.

JOSHUA AND THE SUN.

The Agnostics cite the incident of where Joshua prayed to the Lord and "the sun stood still." To them, this is ridiculous, silly and unreasonable! Of course, viewing it from their standpoint of not believing anything, it is incomprehensible, but to us who believe that God is able to command his creation to serve his purposes, it is a most interesting and encouraging lesson. It was a case of where God, rather than fail his servant who was fighting his battle, ordered the sun to cease his activities until the enemy was defeated. The Agnostic says the sun does not move; that the earth revolves around the sun. True! But what makes the earth revolve around the sun? What makes day and night? It is the solar influence of the sun, and it was that which took place when what is spoken of as the "sun standing still" occurred. The sun ceased his activities. The marginal reading is "be silent." In other words, be inactive, so the day shall be lengthened out that the enemy of the Lord might be defeated. When the sun ceased his activities that affected the earth, and the earth in turn affected the moon, so the whole natural order paused until the faith of God's servant should be duly rewarded by a signal victory over his foes. Another miracle! Yes, for God was back of the miracle, and Joshua's prayer and faith were back of God's marvelous intervention. Deep, profound and encouraging lesson for the believer, but to the Agnostic only ridicule, because he does not understand the modus operandi. We have but to remind you of the first sentence in Genesis to explain the whole thing—In the beginning—God! There is all the difference in the one who keeps his eyes upon things earthly and the one who looks beyond the stars to HIM who, in the beginning, spoke to chaos and order came forth, spoke to darkness and light appeared, spoke to the watery deep and land emerged—all of this when "God's Spirit brooded over the face of the waters."

We shall now leave you to reflect on these items until next week, when we shall take up the miracles of the New Testament which they meet with the same ridicule as they do the ones in the Old Testament.

Wanted—A razor for the soul.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

A Most Important Appeal.

In response to the spirit of the Bishops' Message to the church at the General Conference which met in Dallas, Tex., last May, the General Conference issued the following appeal to the ministry and laity of the M. E. Church, South, which is worthy of careful and prayerful consideration.—Editor.

"By every token we are called to a ministry of vigorous spiritual emphasis. The crass materialism of our times, the seductions and allurements of sin in modern forms, the rapid growth of strange and fantastic religions, the increasing advantages of new and adequate physical equipment throughout our Church, the growing range and significance of our educational program—all these challenge us to put first things first and preach Christ as Lord and pray for a baptism of the Holy Ghost that shall light a flame of radiant power upon every altar and in every heart in Methodism.

"Let this be a quadrennium in which there shall be one dominant note, a passion for souls. Let us regard every financial campaign and promotional adventure as secondary to the main purpose of preaching and living Christ. Let our whole educational process, from the smallest Sunday School to the largest university, feel the thrill of a genuine spiritual call until men and women shall confess their sins and seek the Lord and find him, and our young men shall see visions and our old men shall dream dreams and Pentecostal power shall break out upon us in gracious and overflowing measure. With nothing less can we be content. God waits to give us the outpouring of his spirit. Shall not his people be willing in the day of his power?"

Moreover, the Bishops were directed to appoint a special "Commission on Spiritual Life" to lead in a movement for a Pentecostal revival; and such a Commission was duly appointed.

With the Commission we now unite in calling all our ministers and members to lives of renewed consecrations to God and to a mighty return to the original mission of Methodism "to spread Scriptural holiness" over our own country and throughout all lands. We entreat you to make this matter of supreme importance the uppermost concern of all your lives and efforts and prayers.

"We beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

Signed by order and on behalf of the College of Bishops.

William B. Beauchamp, Chairman.
John M. Moore, Secretary.

"THE VICTORY OF JESUS OVER SIN."

standing now of these promises and what they can mean to a distracted soul. We can win great victories by making the promises of Jesus our own. Jesus had a determination not to yield; this in itself gave him strength. So must we determine by the grace of God that we too shall live clean lives, and the results will justify the experiment. Jesus was too full of something else to yield to sin. Being filled with the Spirit of God precludes the possibility of sin. Sin must have a proper soil in order to grow. A soul filled with God's presence is not such proper soil. Clemenceau told his doctor, "I am not a sick man. I am a dying man trying to finish a task." We are dying men, but let us finish the task of living for God.

"Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin, Each victory will help you, some other to win.

Fight manfully onward, dark passions subdue,

Look ever to Jesus; he will carry you through."

Place a conservative estimate upon your own importance. Very! Very!

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE FIRST GREAT TEACHER. Mrs. Geneva Mendenhall.

Part II.

Although young Prince "Drawn Out" grew up in the court of Egypt's king with every privilege and every prospect for which a young man might wish, still he was not happy. During those early years when his mother had cared for him she had taught him many strange and wonderful things. She had told him of the greatness and nobility of his kinsmen who had come to the land of Egypt four hundred years before. And of that famous ancestor, Israel, whom the Lord had promised that his descendants should inherit a rich land where they should live in peace and plenty. As the young Prince grew older he longed to lead his people away from their cruel slavery.

One day when he found one of the king's officers giving one of his fellows a dreadful beating, he fought the officer—and finally killed him.

Then for fear that the Egyptian's death should be discovered, and traced to him, he fled into a far wilderness country, where wandering bands of Arabs kept great flocks of sheep on the grassy plain. So young Prince "Drawn Out" was no longer a noble in the king's palace in Egypt, but was now a humble shepherd on the plains of Midian. After forty years spent in idleness, luxury and ease as the son of the king's daughter, he spent forty other years dressed in the coarse mantle of a hired shepherd, spending a great deal of time alone and often sleeping out-of-doors with his flock.

One day while he was with his flock on the side of a great mountain, he saw a bush which seemed to burn with a blinding blaze and yet the bush was not consumed. And a voice spoke from the bush, telling him to go down to the land of the Nile and lead out the children of Israel from their bitter bondage. At first he was afraid to undertake such a great task, for he knew the power of the Egyptian king, but the Lord, for it was he, promised to go with him and help him set his people free. So he took his flocks back to the home of Jethro, the good Arab with whom he had lived, and set out on his long journey back to the land of the Nile. On the way he met his brother, Aaron coming to meet him.

Dear Aunt Bettie: My father is pastor of First Church of the Nazarene, Columbus, O. I have friends that live on Linden Avenue, and I went to see them yesterday. Their house is stucco and is very pretty. They have a dog and a cat. I had a great time. Ah me, I forgot to tell you my name. It is this, Ruth Bowling. I have a white rabbit. My father gave me for my birthday in September. It got so cold I had to bring him in the house. He is a very nice gentleman. I have a baby sister, her name is Molly Joanne. She is five months old. She can coo and even tries to sing. We often take her to the piano and play it and she tries to sing. Daddy got her a red rattle and she hates to let loose of it. She is very sweet. Don't forget to have my cousins write to me. My address is 146 King Ave., Columbus, Ohio. I am eight years old. I love God.

Ruth Bowling.

Dear Aunt Bettie: You probably do not remember that in the Thanksgiving issue of The Pentecostal Herald three years ago, was a letter from Eugenia Broadfoote. On Thanksgiving Day Rev. Paul John Pappas answered that letter. I think you know him personally, I know Dr. Morrison does. From Thanksgiving day in 1927, Paul and I corresponded until Feb. 14, 1928, when he came over to my house in Cairo, Ill., and we were married in my home on the 15th. I think I have met you at Asbury College, Aunt Bettie, the same year we were married, my husband graduated from Seminary in '28, too. We are now doing mission work here in Tarpon Springs among the Greeks.

We do not have a place to worship in yet. Paul preaches on the street four times every Tuesday night. We are hoping and praying that many of our friends will remember this Greek Gospel Mission by helping us to build a small, comfortable chapel where the Greeks can come and hear the old story of Jesus. They are becoming more interested at nearly every service. You know what a wonderful Christian Paul is, and these past three years have been the most pleasant and happy years of my life. We now have a youngster that will be two years old on March 19. His name is John Harris. I thought I was the only one that had gotten married by the influence of The Herald, but I see that there are others. May The Herald keep up the good work of uniting Christian men and women. With love to all the cousins, I remain.

Mrs. Paul John Pappas.
534 Grand Blvd., Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would be glad for you to move over and let a Kentucky boy join your happy band of boys and girls. I am four feet, nine inches tall, have black hair, black eyes and weigh 85 pounds. My teacher is Miss Temple Bell. I am in the seventh grade. I am eleven years old. Guess my first name. It starts with V and ends with Y; it has six letters in it. I do not take The Herald but one of my friends takes it. To any one who writes to me and guesses my name I will write to them.

V. Gordon Meredith.
Higdon, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Louisiana boy join your happy band of boys and girls? We take The Pentecostal Herald and I enjoy reading it, especially page ten. I go to Sunday school every Sunday that I can. I am sixteen years old. I am in the ninth grade at school. I like to go to school fine. I have light blue eyes, fair complexion and curly hair, and weigh 126 pounds. I will write to the one that guesses my middle name. It starts with E and ends with N, and has seven letters in it. I will close with a riddle. "The man that made it doesn't want it, the man that bought it doesn't use it, and the man that used it, doesn't know it." Answer—a coffin.

Martin Griffin.
Box 336, Athens, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a Kentucky Girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eleven years of age, have gray eyes and blond hair. I am glad there are so many Christians. Would like to have a letter from some of the little Christians. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends in Y. I will write to the one that guesses it. I hope Mr. Waste-basket is gone bird hunting when my letter arrives. I will answer all letters received.

Geneva L. Curry.
Pierce, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let me in with your boys and girls? This is my first letter. Grandmother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I am ten years old, have blue eyes and light brown hair. I go to school and am in the fifth grade. My teacher is Mr. Caulk. He is a fine teacher. We don't have Sunday school in the winter but we have prayer meeting once a week. I always say a Bible verse. I don't belong to any church yet but I intend to. My mother and daddy belong to the M. E. Church.

Ivana Ewing.
Bradfordsville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I feel like you are all good or you would not be reading this dear good paper. I have been reading the paper forty-three years. It is next to the Bible. I am superintendent of the Junior Missionary Society and like to make a missionary quilt. How many of you would like to send a square of some solid color eight inches square with your name written on it, and we will embroider your names on the square, for a dime, to help carry on the society. Would it not be nice to make a missionary quilt with so many little cousins' names on it? I have such a sweet bunch of children and want the cousins to pray that I may help them to be Christians. I am also superintendent of our Sunday school of over one hundred members. I have heard Bro. H. C. M. preach, and he had lunch with us. He sure likes chicken and corn. God bless such a wonderful man. Mrs. S. H. Craig.

Dyer, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Georgia boy join your band of happy boys and girls? I am trying to live a Christian life. My father took brother and me to Indian Springs and we were converted. I enjoy reading The Herald, especially page ten. I want you all to pray for me that I might lead others to Jesus. Have I a twin? I have light brown hair, fair complexion, blue eyes. I am in the sixth grade. I weigh seventy pounds. I am glad Dr. Morrison's health is improving. Can you guess what my middle name is? It starts with M and ends with S. It has six letters in it. I will be twelve May 3.

Sidney M. Gay.
Barnett, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am glad to have the chance to write to you. Cousins, I certainly am encouraged to see so many of you living a Christian life. Do you remember what I wrote in my last letter to The Herald? I wrote, "I am not a Christian but hope to be." Thank God, he has forgiven me of my sins. Cousins, a Christian life is the only life worth living. I was converted December 8. If you aren't a Christian you are in a very dangerous condition. I am twelve years old and in the seventh grade at school. I will close now, as I am very sleepy. I would like for all you cousins to write to me. Aunt Bettie, I ask you and all the Christian cousins to pray for me and I will pray for you.

Ruby Hearn.
Rt. 1, Box 64, Louann, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me visit you another time? I am the crippled girl that wrote once before, and I am writing to let all The Herald readers and cousins know what God has done for me. I had gotten back into the sinful world but I am glad I was wonderfully saved Dec. 9, and God healed my body Sunday evening the 14th. It seemed to start at the top of my head and go clear through to the end of my toes. Praise the Lord for his healing power. The Lord has blessed me wonderfully the last few weeks and days. God bless all who prayed for my healing. I am glad to say your prayers were answered.

Pauline Harner.
Rt. 3, Celina, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you move over and let a Texas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have never written before, but I thought I would try my luck. I read page ten and have always liked it. My father is a subscriber of The Pentecostal Herald. My father is a minister of the M. E. Church, South and is on the Dimmitt circuit. I am a Christian and have been for about seven or eight years. I have a sister and brother older than I, and they are Christians too. I am thirteen years of age and in the sixth grade. I have four teachers. My room teacher is Miss Ethel Womble. I have brown hair, grey eyes, and fair complexion. Have I a twin? My middle name begins with E and ends with E. Can anyone guess it? I hope Mr. and Mrs. W. B. have gone visiting when this letter arrives.

Sylvia E. Peters.
Box 270, Dimmitt, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please let a New Mexico girl join your happy band of girls and boys. This is my first letter to The Herald, although I take it and enjoy reading it very much, especially page ten. I am so glad that there are so many young folks that are Christians. I go to high school and am the only one in school that professes religion, so you can imagine how I often feel. I am twenty years old, have blue eyes, brown, long hair, weigh about 150 pounds, and about five feet high. I gave my heart to Jesus over a year ago in one of Bro. H. A. Gregory's revivals. He is a wonderful preacher. I am a member of the Nazarene Church, and enjoy singing in revival meetings, and seeing people saved. I am looking forward to the time when I can sing for the glory of God. If any of the cousins would like to correspond I would gladly answer all letters received.

Rose Hutchison.
Quay, N. Mex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come with a few words of advice to the cousins. "Children obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right. Honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise; that it may be well with thee." I promised to tell you about the things that happened to me in my boyhood days. I will tell you of an experience I had one Sunday evening when I was about twelve years old. Father and mother went out for a short visit somewhere in the neighborhood leaving my two brothers and little sister and I at home. I was left in charge of the home and instructed to look after everything, especially my little brother and sister. Of course, I was not expected to look after my older brother for he was about ten years old and too much of a man to take my advice. After father and mother left that evening some boy friend came over to spend the evening and after we had played several games some one suggested that we go down to the landing and go in bathing. This landing was at the Albermarle Sound one mile from home. It was a very warm day in June in the year 1893. I told the boys that I didn't want to go, but I went anyway and we went in bathing and after we had played along the shore for a while, we larger boys decided to see how far out we could wade. Little brother was near me and I told him to go out and put his clothes on. He said, "I shan't do it." That was the last word that I ever heard him speak. We boys went out as far as we could wade and when I looked ashore for my little brother and sister brother was nowhere to be seen. I called him but he never answered. Oh what fear came into my young heart as we boys neared the place where we had left little brother, for it was there that we found his lifeless body in water only about ten inches deep. Oh the sorrow and fear that came into my heart. I was to blame for the death of my brother because I had disobeyed my parents. After we boys had taken his little body out of the water and laid it out on the sand, I had to go for my parents and tell them what had happened. Before I went after them I went in the woods with the intention of taking my life rather than to face my parents with such a crime. I met father and mother on their way home. I hope you will never have a feeling in your heart like I had when I met my father and mother. I will never in this life forget what my father said when he was told what had happened. The only word that he said was, "My God!" Bless his dear soul. He never did bring accusation against me like I expected.

Dear cousins, the Lord Jesus has left the commandment with you and me to repent, believe and to be baptized, and if you will do it the promise is that you shall be saved. If we are disobedient we will have to tell him all about it some time. May I ask you to pray for me that I may some day meet that dear little brother and father and mother and other loved ones in that beautiful city where there is no sorrow, nor crying, but all is joy and peace. This little story is true and I hope and pray that there may be some little word in it that will help some one that may read it, to give his or her heart to Jesus.

WHY GRIEVE.

Clyde Edwin Tuck.

Why should we for the sainted dead
repine,
Friends who no longer journey with us here?
Though here no more their happy faces shine,
We feel, at times, they may be very near.

They wait ahead, and are not lost, we know,
Except to mortal sense—somehow, somewhere
They live and love again, while here below
We glimpses catch of their celestial sphere.

For love can never change in influence,
It reaches out from Heaven to our earth,
All suffering and care to recompense,
And to the darkened soul brings a new birth.

Love that rejoices in another's good,
Like that our friends departed for us bore,
And meekly all the darts of hate withstood,
Can perish not, but lives for evermore.

It still enfolds us, and would light our way,
Would act as anchor to our faith and hope;
It bids us doubt not, but to watch and pray
Until truth's dawn breaks on life's higher slope.

VAUGHT.

A saintly woman has gone to her reward. Mrs. Elisha P. Vaught, nee Martin, was born Oct. 1, 1851, and departed this life Jan. 15, 1931. She was married to Elisha P. Vaught in 1872. To this union were born five children, four of whom, a son and three daughters, are living to care for and comfort the aged father.
Sister Vaught was for many years a member of the Harrodsburg Methodist Church and enjoyed a very rich religious experience. She long professed the blessing of entire sanctification, and truly her fellowship was with the Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ. Many will remember her happy face and her shouts of praise at the camp meeting at Wilmore.
She was pre-eminently a woman of prayer and had the ministry of intercession. According to his own testimony, E. Stanley Jones is in India largely as the result of her prayers.
They were warm friends and whenever he has come back to America, he has found time to visit and pray with Sister Vaught. During her last illness, she triumphed over pain and weakness and was unspeakably happy in the prospect of seeing Jesus.
Of course she was ready when he called her. In the heavenly home she awaits the coming of family and friends and the many who have been touched and blessed by her saintly life.

Her pastor,
W. E. Arnold.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Rev. J. K. B.: "My wife has been in the hospital for 25 weeks. I desire the prayers of The Herald readers for her. She is at home now."

A Herald reader: "Please to pray that my hearing may be restored, that I may enjoy the church services."

Will the readers of The Herald pray earnestly for Mrs. Billington and Mrs. Bush and their brothers.

A mother requests prayer for her boys to be saved, and she and her laughter may live holy lives.

Mrs. E. R. M.: "Please to pray that my two children may be saved, and that I may receive a deeper work of grace, and that my body be healed."

B. W. W.: "Pray for a minister who wants to get closer to the Lord, and that he may be on fire for God's cause."

Sister W. E. Dunn asks prayer as she goes to the hospital for an operation on her eyes. Please to remember her in your prayers.

THINGS MOST SURELY BELIEVED.

By Clarence E. MacIntyre, First Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh.
This book, built around the eternal verities of the Apostles' Creed, is representative of the preaching of one of the great pulpit voices of Presbyterianism. Dr. Mac-Intyre's services are always well attended, and frequently special arrangements must be made to take care of overflow congregations. There is much vigor, strength, and appeal in these sermons—and an immediate usefulness to all Christian people.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IX.—March 1, 1931.

Subject.—Jesus sending forth missionaries. Luke 10:1-11; 10:17; 10:21, 22.

Golden Text.—The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest. Luke 10:2.

Time.—A. D. 29.

Place.—The northern part of Perea.

Introduction.—Our Lord conformed his church polity somewhat after the model of the old Jewish church. There were in the beginning of that organization twelve patriarchs who were the heads of the Church and of the nation; and Jesus chose twelve apostles to be the heads of the Christian Church. He also appointed seventy others to assist him in his work, as Moses appointed seventy elders to assist him in ruling the Jewish people. While he was beginning a new dispensation of grace in the Church, he was not beginning another church. The pattern of spiritual things had been given to Moses; and the Master, as far as was proper, conformed his work to the God-given pattern.

There was a difference between the office of the twelve apostles who were first ordained and sent out, and that of the seventy about whom we are studying in the lesson of today. The group of twelve were representative of ministers of the Gospel for all time; while the seventy were ordained and sent out for the express purpose of preparing the way before Jesus. Their office was somewhat akin to that of John the Baptist. They were to go into the cities, towns, and villages through which Jesus would pass on his last journey to Jerusalem; and by healing the sick, casting out demons, raising the dead to life, and cleansing lepers, they were to prepare the people for his coming. They were a committee of notification, a sort of advance guard.

It is a bit interesting to note that some brethren who are very bitterly opposed to entire sanctification as a second work of grace, are wont to proclaim from the pulpit that, "in their opinion," none of the one hundred and twenty disciples who received the baptism with the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, was really converted until that hour. But if that were true, we would be forced to admit that Jesus ordained unconverted men to preach his Gospel, and that he authorized them to heal the sick, cleanse lepers, cast out unclean spirits and raise the dead back to life; for certainly eleven of the first group were in the upper room; and I suppose that it is fair to assume that most of the seventy were there also. One thing is certain: Mary, the Lord's mother, was there; and she received the same sort of blessing that the others received. If they were not converted before that time, she was not. That forces one to admit that Jesus was born of an unconverted woman. Absurd to the limit! Those eighty-two men were good men, God's men—about the best that Jesus Christ could find among all the Jews.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Other seventy.—The wording is somewhat awkward. It would seem to indicate that he had before that time appointed seventy others who were different from these seventy. But the reference is to the twelve of whom we read in Matt. 10. Sent them two and two.—For several reasons. They would need each other's sympathy and help in many ways. They would need to learn how to work in harmony one with another. They would supplement each other. Two men working together in harmony can do more and better work than they can accomplish if each works by himself. Whither he himself would come.—This seems to indicate their special mission. He would not have to enter towns and cities unheralded. They were to prepare the people for his message.

2. The harvest truly is great.—The harvest field is the world of perishing souls. The language indicates that the Master intended to impress upon them the fact that the crop was about to be lost for want of harvesters, for "the laborers are few." Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest.—The Church has few greater interests than this. We have vast numbers of preachers just now, but it is sad beyond expression to realize how few of them are real soul-winners. The Church needs harvest hands in large numbers. Send forth laborers.—The original Greek is strong: "Thrust forth laborers."

3. As lambs among wolves.—Their work would be among dangerous men. Some of them might be killed; but go and do my bidding. No one who is sent forth by Jesus Christ has any business to confer with flesh and blood. His only safety is in doing the will of God.

4. Purse, nor scrip, nor shoes.—The purse was a bag for money; in the scrip one carried clothing and food. The Greek word here translated shoes may mean either sandals or shoes that covered the feet. I think it has the latter meaning in the text. Salute no man by the way.—An Oriental salutation would consume too much time. When Elisha sent his servant to lay his staff upon the face of a dead boy, he told him to salute no man by the way. He was in a hurry, and had no time for foolishness.

5. Peace be to this house.—That was a Jewish form of salutation. It was beautiful when spoken in sincerity.

6. The son of peace.—One who would receive Christ's messengers and their message in peace. Their presence would be a blessing of peace to such a house; but if they did not receive a peaceful welcome, they were to leave the house. No sadder day ever comes to any home than when a faithful servant of God is driven from its door.

7. In the same house remain.—This verse has a world of sense in it. While the preacher must do pastoral visiting, and must be willing to accept coarse fare, if need be, he has no business to be forever gadding about. He must take plenty of time for the cultivation of his brain and his soul. He must use time judiciously. The laborer is worthy of his hire.—But he must earn it by faithful service. He has no more right to play on his job than a hired plowman has to go to sleep in the field during work hours. The preacher's time is not his own; but belongs, under God, to his flock. Go not from house to house.—This is strictly Jewish. When a stranger entered one of their villages, every family in town was expected to invite him to take a meal with them. That would have consumed too much time for men sent out to do the work of the seventy.

9. Heal the sick.—That would make an open door for their message which follows: "The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." The Savior of men was following in their footsteps.

10. Receive you not.—Some cities would not permit them to deliver their message. Woe betide such places. But they were to be told that the kingdom of God had come nigh them. They were to wipe the dust from their feet as a testimony against such cities, and to tell them that it would be more tolerable for Sodom and for Tyre and Sidon than for that city in the day of Judgment. It is always dangerous to reject a true messenger of God.

17. The seventy returned—from their missionary labors in the regions whither he had sent them. The devils are subject unto us through thy name.—They had done exactly what he had commissioned them to do; and they were naturally much elated over it. The Master's reply is worth while: "In this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven." It is better to have one's name recorded in heaven than to be able to work miracles.

21 and 22. Men who are wise and prudent in their own conceit can receive no light from God. But he does graciously reveal his truth to such as have the humility of little children. Jesus was glad of this; and we should be also. My old colored friend, Aunt Creesy, of Waynesboro, Ga., who did not even know the alphabet, taught me more about God than almost any preacher that I have ever known. Her whole soul was surcharged with God. All the scholarship in the world cannot reveal a thing about God that will save a man's soul. How utterly blank it all is till the Divine Spirit turns upon us the light of salvation. No one can know God, except through a direct revelation from God. He must make himself known; or we shall never know him. And without this knowledge we can have no salvation. "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

A GOOD NAME vs. JOY RIDING.

Mrs. Claud Mingledorff.

Who is it that does not love a good name? Certainly it is not one who expects to be respected by decent people. Neither is it one who is ambitious to serve a noble purpose in the world. Solomon says, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

Now friends, if we love a good name let's think for a minute of one popular modern custom that is helping to cause a great host of young people as well as some older ones, to lose their good name. No one who is even half way keeping up with the times is ignorant of certain evils that result from automobile rides by unchaperoned courting couples, to say nothing of young men and women, and older ones as well, who are mere acquaintances.

There may have been a time when no one would have thought anything out of the way for a young man and woman to take a car ride alone, but not so now. When we see such parties, who are not closely related, taking a car ride alone, a question mark may easily be placed by the name of both parties. A young man who wants a good name must be just as careful in this respect as a young woman. God's standard is just as high for him as it is for her. His word says, "Thou shalt not commit adultery." So, ladies and gentlemen, if you do not wish to be classed with the adulterers and adulteresses you had better avoid the very appearance of such evils. This is plain talk, but no plainer than the scenes being enacted before the eyes of the public.

Fathers and mothers, it is time for us to begin teaching our sons and our daughters that unchaperoned car rides are no longer proper. Every young woman should consider it an insult for a young man to ask her to go riding with him alone. Let us do our utmost to produce a sentiment against this evil. It cannot be done all at once, but, "Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

The Late Dr. Marcus Dods says of Rev. David Smith's book, "The Days of His Flesh," advertised in this issue: "There is no life of Christ in which the whole Gospel narrative is reproduced in so readable and intelligent a form."

Lutheran Observer: "Dr. Smith writes from the standpoint of evangelical faith and reproduces the narrative of our Lord in intelligible and readable form."

Sunday School Times: "This is one of the later Lives of Jesus and has, therefore, the advantage of the most modern research and archaeology. The distinct advantage of this life, however, is the fine devotional flavor that it possesses."

Presbyterian: "Dr. Smith's reverent, thoughtful, and beautiful book will help Christians in very deed to 'see Jesus.'"

And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for thy strength is made perfect in weakness. 2 Cor. 12:9.

DIFFERENT.

Mrs. Jacob Hoffman.

"That ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk." Eph. 4:17.

God's standard for His people,
Has always been the same;
A call to separation
Down through the ages came.
He wants us to be holy,
This challenge still is hurled,
That His peculiar people,
Be different from the world.

Yes, different in our conduct
From others round about;
Our lives are speaking louder
Than sermon, song, or shout.
So let us then be careful
That all men in us find,
A life that speaks for Jesus,
Forgiving, courteous, kind.

And, different in our clothing.
We do not need to goss,
For God has plainly told us
How women ought to dress.
The woman shall not wear
A mannish garb, says He,
For all that do so, shall Abomination be.

He furthermore declares
That godly women dress
In modest, plain apparel,
And thus His Name confess.
No gold or pearls for Christians,
No bobbed hair, painted face,
No knee-length skirts; we're different,
Redeemed by saving grace.

In conversation also;
By this may all men know,
For from the heart's abundance,
The mouth will overflow.
The worldling's mouth is filthy,
His talk is foolish, light.
The Christian's talk is different,
Because his heart is right.

Companionships are different;
No fellowship have we
With those who walk in darkness;
What concord can there be?
In business, marriage, social life
(Oh, these are Satan's snares)
Come out and be ye separate,
The Word of God declares.

The reason we are different—
To God we give the praise—
He changed our hearts completely,
And orders all our ways.
Lord, keep us always different,
In conduct, dress, and talk,
Not walking, as the Scriptures warn,
As other Gentiles walk.

PERSONALS.

Beginning on Monday night, Feb. 16th, and running over two Sundays to March 1st, we will hold a revival campaign in the Austin Nazarene Church, 500 West Race Ave., Chicago, Ill. There will be services each night at 7:30 in addition to the regular Sunday services, and we will be glad to have our friends in the city whom we have met in person and through The Herald, attend these meetings. Information as to how to reach the church can be secured by phoning the pastor, Rev. G. B. Williamson, Austin 9120. Jarrette and Dell Aycock, Evangelists.

Pentecostal meetings, Bethany M. E. Church, Camden, North 10th street and Cooper street, began Sunday night, Feb. 1st, continuing nightly (except Saturday nights) until Sunday night, Feb. 15. Quaker evangelist, Chas. H. Stalker, of Columbus, Ohio, is the special preacher and worker, assisted by other workers.—Rev. John Norberry, Pastor.

The Rev. George Bennard, composer of "The Old Rugged Cross," will begin evangelistic meetings at the Oak Street M. E. Church, Binghamton, N. Y., on Sunday, Feb. 8, through March 1st. Rev. R. H. Williams is the minister.

Rev. Eula B. Crouch: "It has been sometime since I reported to The Herald, but I have not been idle very long at a time. I have held three meetings since our annual conference. God greatly blessed in these revivals. I am now arranging my slate for the coming months and will be glad to hear from any one desiring my assistance in revival work. I have had experience in evangelistic work in preaching, gospel singing and children's meetings. My terms are, traveling expenses, entertainment, and a free-will offering. Address me, Laurenceville, Ill., Rt. 1."

Charles H. Bay: "For years I have greatly desired a revival in Albia, Ia., and it grows on me that if people will get down before God in real intercession that he will answer prayer and send revivals fire. I feel that a body of Christian believers should get together in prayer and hold on night after night, in some home perhaps, as long as it takes to pray down conviction on the people in this needy town and community. God still answers prayer and sends revivals to needy fields and churches, showers of blessings fall and souls are saved and believers sanctified wholly. To this end I will promise to feed and provide a place for those to lay their heads, (and that is more than our Lord had), who have a real burden for the lost of earth and who would be willing to come and work hard on their knees to help bring this about, and for revival fire to fall. Let me hear from you, or just come on to 104 S. 10th St., Albia, Iowa."

Evangelist C. C. Davis has last part of February and all of March open. If you want his services for an old-time full gospel revival, address him, 2317 W. Delaware St., Evansville, Ind.

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister, evangelist, closed a four-weeks' tabernacle campaign in Phoenix, Arizona.

Rev. and Mrs. Henry F. Pollock are bereaved in the recent death of their second little son, Francis Asbury. Bro. Pollock is the son of the late Rev. Grant S. Pollock. He is a member of the Pittsburgh M. E. Conference, but now a senior in Asbury Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

C. K. Dickey: "It gives me pleasure to speak of the work of Mr. E. Clay Milby, Greensburg, Ky., evangelistic singer, who led the singing in the recent revival at Calhoun, Ky. He is a young man of unusual gifts and graces, very capable and tactful, willing to work and get under the burden of a revival. In my judgment he is as good as the best. He is in demand to lead the singing with our leading holiness evangelists. No pastor or evangelist will make a mistake to secure the services of Bro. Milby as singer in a soul-winning revival campaign. This is written without his knowledge or consent.

The Days of His Flesh:

The Earthly Life of Our Lord and Saviour
Jesus Christ

By Rev. David Smith

Fifteen large editions in a comparatively short period, together with words of highest appreciation from the leading Bible scholars, ministers, and editors throughout the English-speaking world proclaim this great work as the one outstanding Life of Christ for every man today. It offers a biography of the Master, elaborate in detail and extending through fifty masterful chapters and more than 500 pages, tracing every phase of our Saviour's earthly career. The author rests his case solidly upon the evangelical records. He adduces abundant evidence to show the historicity of Jesus and to confute those theories which would make Him a mere myth arising out of a haze of reverence and superstition. He is equally sound on the deity of Jesus and he shows conclusively that the acceptance of Christ as the Lord of Heaven must be regarded as the corner-stone of the Church.

He begins with the Wondrous Birth and then proceeds step by step, to the Resurrection, discussing with particular vividness "the silent years" and the part they played in the Messianic consciousness of Jesus. Even after he has completed the body of his remarkable work, the author does not lay down his pen until eight appendices have been written, each throwing light upon some important aspect of the record of Jesus' life and ministry. These appendices include such interesting subjects as, "Objections to the Miraculous Conception," "St. John's Method of Reckoning Time," "The Chronology of Passion Week," etc.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1931

By Amos R. Wells. Fifty-seventh Annual Volume.

To the many who are familiar with "PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES," it would be sufficient to say that the standard of excellence which has characterized the work for more than half a century is fully maintained in the new volume.

The analysis and treatment of the lessons are clear and informing, carrying quotations from great Bible teachers. It is for teachers of all grades and contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help so compiled and tabulated that it can be effectively used. It has maps, pictures, and charts alone worth the price of the book.

This book is invaluable for the study of the Uniform Lessons. Price $2.00.

THE BEAUTY OF HOLINESS.

By Rev. G. W. Ridout.

This book is prepared especially to help people lead a holy life. It takes up the sevenfold beauty of the Christian life. It is the only book of its kind for holiness people. Price 75c.

ARNOLD'S COMMENTARY

A very practical aid for the busy teacher. It is rich in suggestions and sets forth the lesson in a very pleasing manner. We consider this the most spiritual exposition of the Sunday school lesson. The hints to teachers, illustrations, blackboard exercises, questions, maps, etc., make this popular help a good all-round commentary at a popular price $1.00.

THE HOLY LAND AND THE BIBLE

By CUNNINGHAM GEIKIE
(In two volumes)

When one has referred to these volumes he feels that he has really visited the various places in the Holy Land. Dr. Geikie is so thoroughly familiar with almost every inch of the Holy Land that he adds local color to his description. By describing a custom here, or an incident there, he causes new light to break on many Bible passages.

At the back of volume two there are two very useful indexes; one listing the places, the other lists all texts referred to in the volumes.

In all there are more than eleven hundred pages. The volumes are attractively bound in green cloth.

The list price of Geikie's "Holy Land and the Bible" is $4.00.

You may have these two volumes absolutely FREE OF COST by selling FIVE of our Scripture Text Calendars.

A LIFE OF CHRIST

By DEAN F. W. FARRAR

This is another book that will prove especially useful to Christian Workers and Sunday School Teachers just at this time when the lessons are in the Gospel of Luke.

You will find it helpful to have in one volume, arranged in proper order, the events recorded by all four of the evangelists.

While the book is most interesting for regular reading, it is made valuable as a reference volume by means of a complete index of subjects treated.

This Life of Christ has always held its place among the finest books of its kind, and though many other lives of Our Lord have been written since this one, few have in any way surpassed it.

The list price of "The Life of Christ" by Farrar containing 744 pages is $3.00.

You may own a copy absolutely FREE OF CHARGE by selling only FOUR of our Scripture Text Calendars.

BY THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.

By The Editor.

NO preaching has saving power that leaves out Christ and him crucified. We would not intimate that there are not practical subjects to be discussed by the pastor in teaching and leading his people into all of the practical phases of Christian life and conduct; but, even the most practical sermon must lead up to Christ; He is the foundation, spirit and chief cornerstone of all gospel that saves, guides, illuminates and perfects in righteousness.

The Apostle Paul never meant to suggest that to preach Christ was to preach foolishness, but he simply suggested that the world in its wisdom would believe the preaching of Christ to be foolishness. What was true in his day is true today. What he said was applicable to all time. It seems that we have many men in our pulpits today who do not believe that the preaching of Christ will solve world problems, redeem and uplift the race.

Over against all unbelief, and the efforts being put forth to minimize the person of Christ, and the power of his gospel, we have Jesus saying, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." Jesus had infinite wisdom. He knew the needs of men, he knew his own power, he knew that in the creation of man God had put something into his constitution to which the preaching of Christ would appeal. Jesus knew that there was something in our nature, however fallen and depraved, that would awaken hunger and thirst after the divine power he had within himself to save from sin, and to satisfy the longings of the human soul.

The Apostle Paul was a learned man. He was acquainted with the philosophy, the law and literature of his times. He could argue any question with the strongest of his opponents; but he determined in his ministry to know nothing but Christ and him crucified. This is the most urgent need of today. The preaching of Jesus—the great need of the atonement, which the sinless Christ made for sinful men. The preaching of Christ's power over devils, over men, over sin, over disease, depravity, guilt, death and everything that separates men from God and makes them wicked and miserable.

The people of this generation need to be brought back to Christ; they need to hear the gospel of redemption from sin through the person of Christ, his sorrows, suffering, his groans and tears, his agony upon the cross, his blood and death, his resurrection and declaration that he had all power in earth and heaven. This generation needs to listen to ministers of the gospel who will place Christ on the cross and hold him there before them until they see Jesus made a sacrifice for their sins, his body lean with sorrow, fasting and prayer; his frame white with the sufferings of the cross, stained with the blood of the wounds made by sinful men.

BETTER HAVE A REVIVAL.

The enemies of revivals of religion are the enemies of God and humanity. There is not, and cannot be anything more sane and important in any community, than that at certain fixed and designated times all of the Christian forces of a church should be organized and devoted with love and zeal to the one greatest work in the world—bringing lost souls in said community to Christ.

The churches that do not have revivals dry up, become at ease in Zion, backslide, become worldly and, in the end, have neither power or concern for the salvation of the lost. In my long and varied experience in revival work I have found a fearful state of spiritual desolation in churches that had gone for years without revivals of religion. It means much to keep the soul aflame with divine love and eager for the salvation of the lost in this sinful, noisy world, so eager for the material things that perish.

Methodism must return to earnest revival efforts or her spiritual fires will go out and her house will become desolate. God will call into judgment those preachers and church officials who have opposed and shut their church doors against revival efforts, and let millions of human souls for whom Christ died, perish because of their unconcern and neglect.

Preachers, stewards, men and women of Methodism, you had better wake up! Judgment day is coming, when God will require the blood of lost souls at your hands. Your indifference and neglect are filling the pits of torment with lost souls whom you might have saved.

The people who living need to look at Jesus hanging upon the cross for their sins, that there by his death he paid their debt; that he made pardon and cleansing from all sins and sin a possibility. They need to pause, to wait, to become serious with their mind's eye to gaze upon the crucified Christ hanging there limp and dead, and to feel and know that he was nailed to that cross and died upon it, for their redemption.

How foolish and objectionable this sort of preaching may appear to many of your modern liberals who discount every fundamental teaching of the Scriptures with reference to the atonement. To them, this would be foolish preaching, indeed. But it is not. It is the power of God unto salvation. Let it not be supposed for a moment that we do not believe in scientific sewerage, playgrounds, healthful parks, soup, soap, comfortable housing, careful schooling, and all of the phases of social service which better the conditions of men, women and children in the world; but none of these things, nor all of them, can take the place of the preaching of a crucified Christ, of him who, in his death upon the cross, made an atonement for the sins of the people, provided the possibilities of a new birth, a change so deep, so powerful, that those who experience it are indeed in Christ new creatures. This preaching which looks like foolishness to philosophers who have no personal experience of divine grace is, nevertheless, the power of God unto salvation. Nothing else is, or can be. We must preach Christ as the only Saviour, and the all-sufficient Saviour, or darkness will cover the earth; the church will become a mere human organization, and in the end, death, unutterable, deep, eternal death and doom of outer darkness.

GLIDE MEMORIAL CHURCH.

I was invited to be present at the opening and dedication of the great Glide Memorial Church on the corner of Ellis and Taylor Streets, San Francisco, Calif. At the time I was confined with sickness in a Sanitarium near San Diego, but recuperated sufficiently to run up to San Francisco and spend my last Sabbath in California with the friends at this great, new evangelistic center.

It is indeed a remarkable building. One of the most beautiful auditoriums in its simplicity and comfort, and very easy to speak in. In addition to this handsome auditorium there is a very fine apartment for Bishop Arthur Moore, the bishop of that area; also a fine apartment for Rev. J. C. McPheeters, pastor of the church. In the rear, and connected with the church, is a beautiful dormitory for working girls, the rooms of which are rented to worthy young business women, and were all taken before the building was completed, with twenty applicants on the waiting list. There is an apartment for Dr. Sims and family, the presiding elder of the district, also offices for Dr. Nelson, editor of the Pacific Methodist. The church will have a large book store on the ground floor. There are six handsome stores beneath the auditorium, all of which have been leased. Back of these stores is a large and handsome mission room where evangelistic services are to be held every evening through the week. The building is of the best material, erected by the best mechanics, and is a beautiful structure; has a tall tower with as fine Deagan Chimes as you ever heard, sounding out the beautiful old hymns to the listening multitudes of the great roaring city.

I preached on Sunday morning to a large audience, which almost entirely filled the first floor, with a number in the gallery. I do not know when I ever spoke to a more responsive audience. They had the appearance of being a substantial and devout people. At the close of the service I was greeted by many friends of former years, whom I had not seen for a long while.

I felt a little bad to take the pulpit Sunday morning, with so great an audience, and so fine an opportunity for the pastor, who had only been in the new church a few Sabbaths, to deliver his message; as our readers know city people do not attend church much at the evening service. I was surprised and delighted to find a great audience present at the evening service, and Bro. McPheeters gave them an excellent sermon, which they seemed to appreciate very highly. He

AT THE CROSSROADS OF THE WORLD.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

In a previous article I described the Panama Canal and showed it to be one of the greatest engineering triumphs of the modern world. Before the Canal was built one of the poets wrote:

"Here the oceans twain have waited

All the ages to be mated—

Waited long and waited vainly

Though the script was written plainly:

This, the portal of the sea,

Ope's for him who holds the key;

Here the Empire of the Earth

Waits in patience for its birth."

but now, says a recent writer, "the Canal has wedded the two Oceans, and 'Panama,' the young child of this twain, is one of the strongest, most progressive republics on the Western Hemisphere." Anderson wrote, "Cacique and Conquistador, Buccaneer and Padre, Indian, Latin, Teuton, Negro and Asiatic have come and gone and, in a few years, the tropical jungle has closed over their remains and effaced their impress"—the first three have "passed out" and the jungle, true to its nature, has closed over their remains. However, the last six are still here, in the melting pot of the universe, all taking their parts, in shaping the destiny of this young republic, in its twenty-five years of life.

Occupying the center of the Western Hemisphere Panama is truly "The Cross Roads of the World" and is rapidly taking its place in the commercial world.

Owing to its configuration the Isthmus of Panama, running east and west, bends twice upon itself. Colon (on the Atlantic side), not only north, but also west of Panama City (on the Pacific side), creates what seems to be an impossibility—the sun rising in the Pacific Ocean and setting in the Atlantic Ocean.

We shall in this article meditate a little on Life's Cross Roads and their bearing upon this human life of ours and more particularly upon Christian Life and Experience.

First, we observe at the cross roads all kinds and conditions of people and circumstances and behold human nature the same as in ages long ago.

Cyprian, bishop of Carthage, in the Third Century, A. D., wrote to his friend as follows: "This is a cheerful world as I see it from my garden, under the shadow of my vines. But if I could ascend to some high mountain, and look out over the wide lands you know very well what I should see: brigands on the highways, pirates on the seas, armies fighting, cities burning; in the amphitheaters, men murdered to please applauding crowds, selfishness and cruelty and misery and despair under all roofs. It is a bad world, Donatus, an incredibly bad world. But I have discovered in the midst of it a quiet and holy people who have learned a great secret. They have found a joy which is a thousand times better than any of the pleasures of our sinful life. They are despised and persecuted, but they care not. They are masters of their souls. They have overcome the world. These people, Donatus, are the Christians, and I am one of them."

Second. The Cross Roads of Life testify to the goodness of God. One of our hymns has these lines in it:

Thy goodness and thy truth to me

To every soul abound

A most unfathomable sea

Where all our thoughts are drowned

Its streams the whole creation reach

So plenteous is the store,

Enough for all, enough for each,

Enough for evermore.

Spurgeon in one of his wonderful gospel messages says: "O ambitious man, thou that runnest after something and thou canst not tell what it is that can gratify thine immortal spirit, turn to the Cross, for at the foot of it there springs a sacred fount of soul-satisfying, and if thou wilt but stoop and drink, thine ambition shall be over, and thou shalt want no more. There is satisfaction for the deepest longings of heart, and head, and conscience in the fount which springs from the wounds of Jesus. Faith is the silver cup. Dip it into the overflowing stream and drink."

I have noticed at both the Atlantic and Pacific entrances to the Canal they have immense coaling stations and the best of water, oil in abundance and supplies to meet every need. So at the Cross there is abundance to supply every need and lack of the soul.

Third. At the cross roads there are many problems to be settled which cannot be settled without divine wisdom. Some one has written a good message in the following lines:

Are you standing at "Wit's End Corner,"

Blinded with wearing pain,

Feeling you cannot endure it,

You cannot bear the strain,

Bruised through the constant suffering,

Dizzy, and dazed and numb?

Remember—to "Wit's End Corner"

Is where Jesus loves to come!

Are you standing at "Wit's End Corner,"

Your work before you spread,

All lying begun, unfinished,

And pressing on heart and head,

Longing for strength to do it,

Stretching out trembling hands?

Remember—at "Wit's End Corner"

The Burden Bearer stands.

Are you standing at "Wit's End Corner,"

Then you're just in the very spot

To learn the wondrous resources

Of Him who faileth not!

No doubt to a brighter pathway

Your footsteps will soon be removed

But only at "Wit's End Corner"

Is "the God who is able" proved.

Fourth. At the cross roads there are abundant opportunities for doing good and bearing witness for Jesus. The story is related of a young lady missionary in Japan who was traveling on one occasion by steamer from one seaport to another in the island kingdom. On the same boat was a Japanese merchant, so worried and depressed by business reverses that he was seriously contemplating suicide. He saw the foreign lady quietly watching the beautiful view with such an expression of peace and absolute satisfaction on her face that he could not refrain from looking at her again and again. She was a stranger to him, but he longed to ask her the secret of her happiness. His own restless, burdened heart cried out for the inner calm which could so stamp its impress upon the countenance.

In his distress and desperation he felt that he must know. He ventured to address her, and his profound respect was evident in both his words and his manner. He unburdened his heart and asked if she could give him the secret of the wonderful peace which told its own sweet story to those who looked upon her face.

It was her rare privilege to tell this suffering soul of Jesus and his redemption, and the forgiveness of sin which alone can bring with it the "peace which passeth all understanding."—Selected.

Fifth. At the cross roads we need the light and guidance that flows from the Cross. An exchange gives us the following:

"On an old church in Normandy is a cross with these words on its four corners:

"(1) 'Pax' (Isa. liii. 5; John xx. 19, 20; Acts x. 36; Rom. v. 1; Eph. ii. 14, 17; Col. i. 20).

"(2) 'Lex' (Ps. lxxxv. 10; Isa. xlii. 21; Rom. i. 17, iii. 21, 25, 26).

"(3) 'Rex' (John xii. 32; Acts ii. 36; Rom. xiv. 9; 2 Cor. v. 14, 15; Phil. ii. 6-11).

"(4) 'Lux' (Exod. xv. 23-5; 1 Thess. v. 9, 10).

"IV. The Christian's 'cross' is the consequence of that of the Savior (Matt. x. 38, xvi. 24; Mark x. 21; Luke xiv. 27). It signifies identification with him in reproach (Heb. xiii. 12, 13)."

Sixth. At the cross roads the soul makes important decisions, witnesses to its faith, and sees the lights of Home.

It was at the cross roads that Newman wrote:

"Lead kindly light amid the encircling gloom

Lead Thou me on.

The night is dark and I am far from home,

Lead Thou me on.

Keep Thou my feet, I do not ask to see

The distant scene; one step enough for me."

Tennyson nearing the crossing sang:

"Sunset and evening star,

And one clear call for me,

And may there be no moaning of the bar,

When I put out to sea.

"For tho' from out our bourne of time and place

The flood may bear me far,

I hope to see my Pilot face to face,

When I have crossed the bar.

When I began to read Moody's sermons years ago I remember a wonderfully touching story he told in one of his sermons. He said, "There was a little girl ready soon for the other world. The doctor came and looked upon her with pitying eyes and when he had finished he went out into the hall and was joined by the mother, and he told her the little girl could not live perhaps more than a few hours. The mother went back into the room and tried to break the news to the little girl. She said to her as she took her little hand in hers: "Bessie darling, you are going into a beautiful City where there will be crowds of people and the streets are very beautiful, and all the people are dressed in white. Do you want to go to that heavenly City?" And the little girl said: "Mama I would like to go but I am so sick and tired, I can't." The mother tried again as she choked down her sobs: "Bessie darling, you are to be where there is a great choir and they will be all clothed in white and they will sing wondrous songs, and Heaven will be full of music and of melody. Don't you want to go and hear the angels sing?" "I would like to mama, but I am too sick, I am too tired." And then the mother took the little child in her arms and held her close to her bosom. Then the wasted child said between her gasps for breath, "Oh mama, that is what I want; I just want Jesus to take me up in his arms and let me rest on his bosom." "Well," said Mr. Moody, "He is waiting for you all with outstretched arms."

Jesus my heart's dear refuge,

Jesus has died for me,

Firm on the Rock of Ages

Ever my trust shall be.

Free from the blight of sorrow,

Free from my doubts and fears,

Only a few more trials

Only a few more tears,

Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on his gentle breast,
There by his love o'ershadowed
Sweetly my soul shall rest.

Just a Note.

At this writing we are still in Panama and the Canal Zone. This is a most important section of National and International Geography. All the nations meet here and the ships that pass bear the flags of all nations. In a few weeks 40,000 of our Navy and Army boys will be here. What a field for the fight between angels and men, heaven and hell. We have been evangelizing among the Spanish, Americans, West Indians, white and black, brown and yellow. When we finish three more meetings with the West Indians at Cristobal, Pedro Miguel, and Panama, we depart for Ecuador. In the meanwhile we may be addressed care P. O. Box 273, Balboa, Canal Zone. Mail reaches us here sometimes in seven days. Remember us in prayer.

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

By Rev. A. D. Shockley.

CHAPTER XVII.

IN QUEST OF HEALTH.

EVER since his conversion, Ralph Upright had applied himself to diligent study, and having completed the high school course within a year after his return home from prison, entered college with a view to entering the ministry ultimately. But when he had passed into his senior year, his health failed, and he was advised to quit the college for a year and seek a milder climate for the benefit of his health. Very reluctantly he left his classmates and his books and returned to Glenview, remaining there only long enough to make arrangements for traveling in quest of health.

Acting upon the advice of his physician he decided to go to New Mexico. In due time he reached Albuquerque, where he decided to rest for awhile before visiting other portions of the territory. In fact, it became necessary for him to rest, as his strength seemed to be spent and a feeling of languor crept over him. It was several days before he felt able to leave the hotel, where he was stopping and he spent several hours each day in bed. But gradually, as he accommodated himself to the atmospheric change, an improvement began to be felt, he began to take short walks daily. As health returned and his strength permitted, these walks were extended until he had visited all the places of interest in the city. He had met several people from the different states and was pleased to become acquainted with the pastor of the First Congregational Church, Rev. Ashman, who gave him a pressing invitation to make his headquarters while in the city at the parsonage. Though declining the invitation, he yet decided to change his hotel to one nearer the Congregational Church, and to spend a good deal of time at the parsonage.

Mrs. Ashman was a lady of great kindness and refinement. Highly accomplished in literary and social lines, as well as being deeply imbued with the Christian spirit, she was an ideal hostess, and Ralph spent many a happy hour in her home.

Mr. Ashman, besides being pastor of the First Church, was also superintendent of home Missions for the territory, and consequently very busy, and often absent from the city. When at home he made Ralph feel that his sympathy and helpfulness could be relied upon.

Under his direction Ralph conducted religious services occasionally at two different points in the city, and a genuine interest seemed to be awakened as the result. In the meantime Ralph had access to Mr. Ashman's library, and improved every opportunity for studying theology under the direction of Mr. Ashman. He had, also, the privilege of getting practical lessons in sermon preparation and delivery, while carrying on the work assigned to him by Mr. Ashman.

The trip to New Mexico proved to be of incalculable benefit to Ralph in several respects. First his health rapidly improved, his closer contact with a live minister of the gospel, by which means he saw the inside of the pastor's life, and being allowed to assist in some of the pastor's life work, his soul became a spirit filled for the work he felt himself called to undertake.

There coming a slack time in the duties of the superintendent, Mr. Ashman determined to undertake evangelistic work in the territory; and appreciating the help he could receive from Ralph, and the larger benefit it would be to Ralph himself, he laid hands on him and took him into fellowship with himself.

Besides being a ready speaker, Ralph had a degree of originality in thought and forcefulness in expression that secured for him a full house and an attentive audience. Added to this, he was also possessed of a voice of remarkable sweetness and at the same time of great volume. His utterances were always distinct and audible whether pitched in a high or low key.

Without being aware of the fact, apparently, he possessed a talent for oratory quite beyond the ordinary. He scarcely spoke in a hurried or excited manner—his gestures were entirely impulsive, yet always graceful and effective. Listening to him the audience saw the theme clothed with life and pathos and power that was irresistible and soul stirring. The wonder of it all was that of all the audience not one was able to see that the speaker himself was aware of the tremendous power he had to lead his hearers to undertake great things. He seemed to be in a manner unconscious of the presence of the audience, and only to be thinking out the message to them.

The point selected for holding the first series of meetings was at White Oaks. Owing to the small proportion of English-speaking persons residing in this community, the time limited to it was ten days. But during those days a goodly interest was manifested and a small church organized. A number of persons professed a saving faith in Christ, and were added to the church during the meeting.

At Los Ranchos De Atrisco a gracious revival rewarded the labors of the brethren and a goodly number were converted. At this meeting Ralph Upright was brought more prominently into the work by the temporary indisposition of Mr. Ashman, who would not hear of the temporary abandonment of the field while Ralph seemed abundantly able to take care of the work. Mr. Ashman was able to attend most of the services, although unable to participate in them to any considerable extent, owing to throat trouble. But his presence and good sense gave courage and steadiness to Ralph in the earnest effort he was making to bring them to Christ for salvation and healing.

At the beginning of the meeting a young man of twenty-eight or thirty attracted Ralph's attention by his evidently critical attention to the sermons, and his assumption of personal indifference to the subjects under discussion. He was a strongly built man of medium height, very dark complexion and black hair. The first indication of coming baldness might be noticed in the thin covering of hair on the top of his head. One spot just behind the right ear, showed that a deep wound had been inflicted, not so long ago as to have been forgotten. White hairs indicated the location of the wound and its extent.

As the meeting progressed and one after another of the auditors became subjects of saving grace, this man lost something of his critical attitude, and seemed to become somewhat interested for himself.

Ralph had promised himself the pleasure of meeting the gentleman at the close of the service on several evenings, but had thus far failed to do so. The man had always gone out, having always been seated near the entrance, before Ralph could reach him.

As his interest deepened, he gradually worked himself nearer the pulpit without seeming to be conscious of doing so. That a struggle was going on in his soul, was apparent to Ralph, and indeed to everyone who noticed him at all. The Holy Spirit was giving him a glimpse of himself as God measured him, and he was appalled at the sight. But his was a stubborn will, and the battle waxed hotter as the struggle continued.

One night, while Ralph was dwelling on the love of God as it is manifested in the Christ, of the hardness of men's hearts under the exhibition of God's love; of the herculean efforts men make to get rid of God's spirit, the man got up and staggered out into the night as one might do under the influence of liquor—or as one losing control of his limbs.

Ralph made inquiry as to his name and residence, but could get no definite information in regard to him. Some thought him a rancher from somewhere in the interior. Others believed him to be a gambler, who had turned up periodically for two or three years past. By some he was known as Senor Dalstone, by others as Mr. Hobart. Neither of these names caught the ear of Ralph with the ring of a familiar sound. But he was soon to learn that these names changed in their formation were the true cognomen of the man whom Jessie Upright had once called husband—the father of her child, Herbert Dalton!

For two or three evenings the man had not been seen at church and no one knew his whereabouts. But one day as Ralph was walking down the street, on his way to the postoffice, in turning a corner, he almost collided with him. Intently pondering on the subject he had selected for the evening sermon, Ralph might have passed without recognizing him, but by that peculiar phenomena which has struck all of us at one time or another, each in trying to get out of the way of the other, placed himself more directly in the way. Becoming aware of things material, Ralph looked up and recognized the man he most desired to meet.

Extending his hand in friendly greeting, he apologized for his preoccupation and said, "I have greatly desired to meet you, and cannot let this opportunity pass without making your acquaintance."

The man bowed in acknowledgment, but said nothing.

"May I ask your name?" said Ralph, "Mine is Upright, Ralph Upright of Glenview."

The man started violently on hearing the name, and a hot flush passed over him, succeeded by a pallor that was almost ghastly. His emotion seemed to almost choke him as he looked at Ralph, who still held his hand and was looking wonderingly at him.

At last he said, "Come with me to my lodgings, I have much to say to you which cannot be said here."

BIRTH SIN.

Rev. Edward R. Kelley.

"And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled, . . . she shall bring a lamb a year old for a burnt offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtle dove for a sin-offering."—Lev. 12:6.

As far as I have been able to learn by reading the chapter from which I have taken the text, inbred sin is not directly mentioned, but it is implied. The very fact that a certain ceremony had to be gone through with for the purification of the mother after the birth of either a son or daughter, conveys the thought of inherent depravity.

If you have taken the time to read the preceding chapter, there you found certain laws governing one's eating what one should and should not eat. It is not my purpose to enter into an argument whether it is right or wrong to eat certain meats today, but it does look as if the law affecting such matters were essential today, then also the law affecting the purifying the woman after she has become a mother would also be effective. But if we will but remember at all times that we are now living under grace and not the Levitical law, we will not be troubled. God has created meats "with thanksgiving," and I am sure that what God thus creates is worthy of our consideration.

But I am not concerned about these matters so much. What I do want you to see is: The preceding chapter—to some extent at least—has for its discussion what this and the following chapter have for their discussion, and that is, sin.

Some one has stated that "in the division of the animals into the clean and the unclean, we have the nature of sin in its general character and outward manifestations"; for sin is the brutalization of all mankind.

In the chapter from which the text is taken, sin is brought to our mind in different phases of corruption than in either of the other chapters referred to. And from whence cometh this pollution? How can it be accounted for? Is it due to either environment or education or association. No. The trouble is more deeply seated than that. That the human race has not escaped the fact of sin is very evident. The apostle tells us: "We have all sinned and come short of the glory of God." And John reminds us that "if we say we have not sinned, we make him a liar and the truth is not in us." And again he affirms: "If we say we have no sin we deceive ourselves." Exactly! Yes, we are agreed that these passages deal with man in what we call his natural state; and there is no corner of the earth nor any race of peoples but what the pollution of hell—SIN—has touched and contaminated. But where lies the trouble? From whence cometh this pollution? Read into the very depths of this twelfth chapter and you will find there your answer.

But some one says: "I see no reference therein to inherent sin." That is true; but the rites and symbols in themselves speak of it for sin is the manifestation of that which is in the heart of man. The uncleanness mentioned is but a symbol of the deeper innate principle to be found in every human heart, whether man, or youth, or infant.

The ceremonial law made mention of here is of such a character that we may not discuss it in full. And although the law was an arbitrary one for that period, I do not now so consider it; and its great spiritual truth is to be found in its typical nature.

The truth we have here presented is impressive. It tells us that we all have come from sinful parentage, and it reveals very clearly that in our birth there is actual uncleanness involved. It portrays defilement as the state in which we came into the world. You deny this? Listen! "Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one."—Job 14:4. "In sin did my mother conceive me." Psalms 51:5. Many other passages could be given, but we will not take the time to do so.

Yes, I am aware there are those who tell us in the most attractive rhetoric that infants come into the world free of the taint of sin. But let us remember that while infants are born under the covenant of grace, they are not born regenerated. The teaching that infants at birth are born into God's kingdom has no Bible foundation whatever. If they should die before reaching the years of accountability, they will be saved; but it is because God's Spirit through the merits of the Atonement prepares them for glory without their volition. And to declare on the other hand that such a state in which we find the infant is natural and is due to "natural depravity in the heart," is just as wide of the truth as the former statement. Listen! It is very necessary that you get this: When man was created by God he was created without sin in the heart; therefore sin is the most unnatural thing to be found in the human soul. God never made a devil nor did God ever make a sinner; therefore sin in any form whatever is not natural, but devilish.

Now let us face facts! God in creating man, made man just, and righteous, and holy, and innocent; but when man yielded to temptation he sinned and lost all of these attributes. Here we have man's contrast: man in his original estate and what he became owing to sin.

Again! Man is no longer an original product of God's creative power. Man is now the result or off-spring of one primal humanity which God created thousands of years ago. The fact is, as far as we have ever learned, God only directly created but one man, and all other men are but the offspring of the original creation. In fact, no one is now created, but begotten and born; and we are but reproductions of our Eden fore-parents, which is the result of certain physical laws.

And why have I said all this? Because I wished you to see that this universal taint of sin which is to be found in every human being, is not natural, but that it is the result of the fall or sinning of our first parents in Eden. "As by one man sin entered into the world. . . ." That one clause is sufficient.

That there is an innate tendency within the heart of man we cannot deny. "What is man, that he should be clean? And he that is born of woman that he should be righteous?"

There is another thing I would have you remember: This taint of corruption within the heart of man is no mere passing defect of the soul, but a serious reality. It unfits the soul for either God or heaven. "The carnal mind is not subject to the law of God." With sin the heart, no matter what its nature, it is impossible to please God, and just as impossible to pass through the pearly gates into the Celestial City. Therefore it becomes very vitally necessary to have this inherent-sin purged away by the purgation of blood—the Blood—as much so as our own personal transgressions.

If you will again read the law as we have it in this chapter, you will notice that ere the Jewish mother could become clean after the birth of either a son or daughter, she must present as an offering for cleansing either a lamb, or a pair of pigeons or turtle doves as a burnt offering—an offering of blood. And so, my friend, original or birth-sin cannot be "grown" out of the heart, neither can it be "groaned" out, nor "worked" out. There is only one way of getting rid of it, and that is by the way of the Blood. "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." And when all sin is cleansed away, there is none—absolutely none—left.

Agnosticism versus Gnosticism; or Infidelity or Christianity.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

IN our previous article we considered some of the criticisms of the miracles which are recorded in the Old Testament; this week we wish to notice some of the Agnostic's objections or criticism of some of the miracles of the New Testament.

THE VIRGIN BIRTH.

We hear much caviling about the virgin birth of Jesus. And why? Simply because they try to account for it upon a purely natural basis. Their very premises spell defeat. They remind us that in those days men in official position were qualified for their offices by being born of virgins; somewhat of an honor, it seems. But the matter is not settled by a good deal. They forget that Christ's birth was not of human conception. He was conceived by the Holy Ghost and born of the virgin Mary.

There are the most profound and mysterious facts connected with the virgin birth of our Lord to be found in sacred or profane history. Christ had to be more than human. He had to be divine and human. In view of this, he had to have a supernatural conception in order to his Divinity, and he had to be born of a virgin that he might be clothed with humanity. There is no other way for the duel nature of Christ to have been brought about.

Of late, we hear of much infidelity concerning the miracle of the Incarnation. When some get a dip into science, they become obsessed with it and demand that everything must be accounted for on scientific principles. They egotistically assert that "the virgin birth is a biological impossibility," therefore cannot be true. The doctrine of the virgin birth was a universal belief of the historic Christian Church. They believed in the virgin birth because it was a fact, and the Christian creed says that Jesus was conceived by the Holy Ghost and born of the virgin Mary because it was a fact. "If the virgin birth is not founded on fact, how did the idea originate?" This last thought is from Dr. Machen, Professor of New Testament History in Westminster Seminary.

At the close of the second century the virgin birth was regarded as an absolutely essential part of Christian belief in all parts of the then known world. This is admitted by every one who knows anything of Church history. As some one has declared, "How except by the virgin birth could our Saviour have lived a complete human life, and yet have been from the beginning no product of what had gone before, but a supernatural Person brought into the world from the outside to redeem the sinful race?" Natural man could not redeem man. It took a superman, and an above-man personality, to pay the price of sin.

"There was no other good enough
To pay the price of sin;
He only could undo the door of Heaven
And let us in."

FEEDING THE FIVE THOUSAND.

The Agnostic ridicules the idea of feeding 5,000 people with five loaves and two fishes. He thinks we Christians are a set of ignoramuses for believing such incredulous absurdities. His mind cannot grasp the modus operandi and therefore there is nothing to it. He who said that he was able of the stones that lay at his feet to raise up children unto Abraham, could multiply the loaves and fishes as they left his creative hand. Why should history have recorded such an event if it never occurred? Faith is the firm assent of the mind to things upon the authority of Divine Revelation. This is where the Agnostic quits shop. Faith is a commodity he does not have in stock, consequently he ridicules instead of believes.

Faith is of four kinds: Historical, temporary, faith in miracles, and justifying, or saving faith. Not one of these does the Agnostic profess to have, nor can have, because the door of his heart is barred by the strong arm of know-nothing-ism that refuses to allow the truth to enter. They criticise the incident in Christ's ministry where he cast the devils out of the man and bade them enter the swine, but the devils admitted he was the Son of God and asked him why he had come to torment them before their time. They were that far ahead of the Agnostic, for they have never acknowledged Jesus as the Son of God.

Christ would teach us by this incident that the restraining grace of God, even while sinners, is a wonderful safeguard against going into deeper depths of sin. If men were left to the promptings of their sinful natures, they would find themselves as helpless to be decent as were the swine after the devils entered into them. Think of the change in the man before and after the devils were cast out of him! The Agnostic is surrounded by the preventient mercies of God which prevent him from doing many things he would do were he deprived of this restraining power of an unseen, but merciful God.

THE RESURRECTION.

The Agnostic does not give credibility to the resurrection of Christ and therefore does not believe that any one shall rise after having been laid in the cold embrace of the tomb. Mr. Darrow, in his recent speech in this city, said, "The idea of a body being collected after years of decay; that it would be impossible to gather the particles of dust together and raise the body." Paul, in speaking of such incredulity, said, "Thou fool! That which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." Life has to come by death; the seed has to fall into the ground and die, or it abideth alone.

The Bible does not teach that man's physical body will be gathered together. Paul answers this mystery, when he says: "This corruption shall put on incorruption; this mortal shall put on immortality." In other words, this physical body that was committed to dust will be raised a spiritual body. There being no spiritual perception about the Agnostic, he cannot fathom the deep and inscrutable mystery which gives life and hope to countless millions of souls who, when they commit their loved ones to the dust, are comforted with the promise that they shall see them again; not in this frail tenement of clay, but a spiritual body like unto Christ's own glorified body.

THE ONE LIFE CELL.

The Agnostic admits that there is a life cell from which all other cells originate, but they do not tell us where the first cell had its origin. We, as Gnostics, answer, "In the beginning—God." God is the first Great Cause from whom emanates all animate and inanimate creation. The Bible does not undertake to tell us that there is a God. The fact of his existence is too self-evident to need argument or defense. He is the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. He had to be before he could create. He is from everlasting to everlasting, and by him all things consist. God took care of the life cell when he breathed into Adam the breath of life.

THE BIBLE.

Mr. Darrow ridiculed the idea that what we call our Bible should be regarded as an infallible guide to those who would follow its precepts. He spoke of the fact that "it was a compilation of 66 books, written during a period of some 1500 years, by forty different authors, and yet we call it our Book of inspiration." To have forty men write a book during a period of 1500 years, and yet have the matter so coherent that the skeptics of the ages have not been able to destroy the faith of men in it, is one of the most unanswerable arguments that it is divinely inspired. The Old Testament is unfolded in the New, and the New Testament is enfolded in the Old, all pointing to the world's Redeemer of whom Moses and the prophets did write and whom the apostles taught and preached.

"USE YOUR REASON."

On being asked, What the Agnostic would give in the place of Christianity, Mr. Darrow said, "Throw away what you have and use your reason." That would indeed give a diversity of opinions, for great is the diversity of reasoning! Reason has to have some leverage for functioning, yet the Agnostic claims he knows nothing and therefore, has nothing tangible on which to base his reason. But Mr. Agnostic believes more than he claims, as much as he professes not to believe anything he cannot understand. He believes that food makes the cow give milk, that the same grass makes wool grow on the sheep's back, yet he does not know the modus operandi. The mysteries of life face him on every hand, and he admits they are, notwithstanding the doctrine not to believe anything he cannot reason out.

Paul described the Agnostic when he spoke of those people who could not understand spiritual things because they were spiritually discerned. The natural is as far as the Agnostic goes; the Christian leaves him on the shores of materialism and rises on the wings of faith to explore the realm of faith and trust.

Agnosticism discards the Bible, rules God out of his universe, discounts the supernatural, all of which renders it impossible for him to come into any sort of faith realm, for doubt and faith cannot fellowship. How can the Agnostic believe that Jesus fed the 5,000 with five loaves and two fishes when he does not believe in Jesus at all. So with all the miracles recorded in the Old and New Testaments; they were not because there was no God to perform them. When God is ruled out of his universe there is no way left to account for the miracles which are recorded in the Bible.

With no God, no Christ, no miracles, no Bible, nothing above what man can perform, is there any wonder that the Agnostic is left afloat on the sea of doubt, with no anchorage to hold him when the storms of life beat against his frail barque? His flag is a question mark, while his little tempest-tossed vessel faces toward the dark and untried realities of the unknown world of Fate's destination.

Suppose, for the sake of argument, we as Christians are wrong in our belief in the Creator, the Saviour, and all that goes to fill up the life and teachings of Jesus. Have we anything to lose when it comes to the day of accounts? We shall be on the same platform as the Agnostic, if this life is all of it. But we had the assurance of our faith while in this world. We have had the hope of the resurrection and the anticipation of going to a world where there is no sin, sorrow or heartache. I say, we have had all the good results of faith in this life, and yet if we are mistaken, we have lost nothing when it comes to the beyond.

What has the Agnostic to gain by his know-nothing-ism? He had no hope, no love, no joy, no faith here, and if we are right and he is wrong, he will go out into eternal night, having gained nothing in this world or the next. Is it not better to be on the safe side with a double surety, than to be a doubter here and for all eternity?

MAN A MACHINE.

The Agnostic speaks of himself as a machine, but he never informs us who made the machine, and who keeps it in repair. Might as well talk about a sewing-machine making itself, or a threshing-machine putting itself together, or a house erecting itself upon a well laid foundation, as to think of man bringing himself into existence. There is no God to them, because he cannot be seen with the natural eye. To us, "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit."

Life is motion, energy, enterprise, destination. It cannot stand still nor lie dormant. It cannot go in a circle even; it must have a goal or destiny. For this reason Agnosticism can never be the philosophy for the human race. Philosophy is practical wisdom, which rules out the know-nothing-ism of the Agnostic. Agnosticism is a ship without steam or sail; it will use neither oar nor rudder. It is content to lie upon the spacious ocean of Eternity, tossed by doubt, fascinated by Fate, indifferent as regards companionships or success. A cheerless, lonely drifting vessel on the sea of time that has no shores and no heaven. Isaiah, speaking of such unfortunate creatures says: "And they shall look unto the earth; and behold trouble and darkness, dimness or anguish: and they shall be driven to darkness."

The Agnostic may talk and ridicule all he may, but the granite rock of impregnable TRUTH stands in its path and it cannot submerge the eternal principles upon which the Christian faith is founded, nor consign to oblivion the immutable promises of God. These men who "resist the truth are of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith, shall proceed no further; for their folly shall be

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

Ralph promptly accepted the invitation, and the two men turned and went to the hotel Los Vega, where the man had a suite of rooms.

An old Mexican woman had charge of the suite, and when the men entered, was busying herself in doing up the curls of a little girl of perhaps four or five years.

It was Ralph's turn to choke and tremble when he saw this child the very image of Jessie Upright! A great burst of love filled his heart as he caught the child in his arms and kissed her passionately.

Speaking to the nurse in her own language, Herbert Dalton—Jessie's husband—bade her retire while he talked with his friend. When she was gone, he said, "I do not think it necessary that I should tell you my name! I see you have recognized this little one as the child of your sister. Finding her with me, you have no difficulty in reaching the conclusion that I am her father and the husband of Jessie Upright, Herbert Dalton."

"You must be somewhat acquainted with my past, so far as your sister's life was connected with it. Knowing so much to my discredit, I dare not hope that you are prepared to greet me as a brother. Until within the last few days, I rejoiced in the fact that I had succeeded in hiding myself in this out-of-the-way place, so that no one, who had ever known me before would be able to find me. I will not attempt any justification of myself for my conduct toward your sister, and my wife. It is enough for me to say that I hated her because she abandoned the work she was so fitted to perform, and chose to retire to the home, to raise a family of noisy children. She, who had the world at her feet, and men raving over her wonderful voice, her power to move the most critical audience at will.

"I was mad with rage when I knew that this little one was to come—as unwelcome a guest as ever obtruded itself upon any household. I found the child, and took it out of its mother's arms, although she clung desperately to it in her mad delirium. I escaped with the child, and hoped that, as it looked so like its mother it might also inherit her talent and one day take the place before the public her mother had abandoned.

"You must not think that I never loved your sister! My ambition to see her at the head of her profession, and to have her applauded wherever she sang, seemed to me the highest testimonial of passionate regard one could give. When she renounced the stage and declared that maternal duties were more binding than the loftiest ambition, I was overcome by passion and falsely asserted that the child would be illegitimate; that the marriage was a mockery; the minister a reprobate.

"I have schooled myself to deny to my heart the craving for the love for the mother of my child. I have tried to keep alive the keen disappointment and fierce passion with which I went from her sight on that day, when she confided to me the secret of the, to her, coming joy. Over and over again have I told myself that I had been cheated out of that which was mine by right, reveling in the light of her growing popularity. I even tried to persuade myself that the child was not mine. But I never could believe that Jessie was untrue to me.

"Had I been content to live for her, as she had lived and labored for me, we had both been happier and the terrible wrong had never been done.

"I have been in Europe, South America, and in Mexico, but I have never seen a face that I cared to see again, or heard a voice that caused my heart to quicken its throbs.

"I was injured in a railroad accident near Glenview, and came very near to death. Had not some men, with whom I had business relations, seen the account of the accident in the papers, and knowing that I was on the fated train, come and taken me away, I might have met Jessie while there. But I was removed by them and left nothing behind that might afford a clue to my identity.

"I have a dim recollection of two elderly gentlemen—probably ministers—being present when I regained consciousness after the surgical operation which was found to be necessary. If I heard their names I do not retain them in my memory.

"I aimlessly entered the building where you were holding services a few nights ago. I confess that something in your appearance attracted me from the first. I had no thought of ever becoming interested in the subject of religion. Having been successful in several business ventures I have accumulated a little property, and my desire to add a little more to it has seemed to fill my heart too full for more serious things. But I confess to you that I have lost my relish for the things that once took all my heart, and there has been begotten a strong desire to test the power of Christ to save from sin and to give complete rest and peace. Along with this is a growing conviction that my only hope of attaining the object of my desire, is to obtain Jessie's forgiveness and to restore to her the child I so cruelly tore from her embrace. God helping me, I am ready to do all in my power to undo the great wrong I have done her."

Ralph had listened in silence to the explanations.

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dries do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

Before elected President Herbert Hoover said: "In these eight years population has increased 8% and national income increased 54%, production and consumption 25%; 9,000,000 homes have installed electricity; 6,000,000 phones have been installed; 14,000,000 more autos; attendance at high schools increased 65% and in colleges 75%." ## BOUND FOR THE ORIENT.

MR. AND MRS. E. O. RICE.

THIRTY years ago today, Rev. and Mrs. Charles E. Cowman sailed from San Francisco, California, for Japan. A year later Brother Cowman with Brother Juji Nakada, founded the Oriental Missionary Society in 1901. Today Mrs. Rice and I are sailing for the Orient exactly thirty years later to the day to see the results of thirty years of labor for Jesus. Our hearts are rejoicing exceedingly as we look forward to actually seeing and hearing with our own eyes and ears what we have so often heard of this wonderful missionary work.

Recently at the Missionary Tabernacle in Los Angeles, as Rev. Hodgins gave a full report of the Oriental Missionary Society's work in Japan, Korea and China, our hearts were filled with praise and thanksgiving to God for such a marvelous work of grace.

The Scripture verse for this trip is Isaiah

55:12: "Ye shall go out with joy and be led forth with peace."

Tuesday evening at 8:01 P. M., at the Glendale Station of the Southern Pacific Railroad, about fifteen or more of our friends gathered to say farewell as Mrs. Rice and I boarded the train which was to carry us farther and farther away from our much-loved Los Angeles folk, for we were booked to sail on the "Empress of Russia" leaving from Vancouver, B. C.

The day before we left Los Angeles will never be forgotten, as Rev. Joseph H. Smith came in from Redlands to say "goodbye." I remarked to Brother Smith that I had the assurance God was sending us to the Orient. As quick as a flash he said, "No, Brother Rice, God is taking you and Sister Rice." A few minutes later our dear Brother Smith prayed for, not only our safe voyage, but that we might be a blessing to our missionaries and native Christians. Oh! how God blessed him in his prayer as it reached the hearts of all present. A few hours later Dr. H. C. Morrison, editor PENTECOSTAL HERALD, came into the office to say goodbye. God wonderfully blessed Brother Morrison in his prayer for our trip. A little later Rev. Paul Thomas called and offered a prayer that registered not only in our own hearts but pulled blessings down from the Throne of God upon our souls, so we could not help but thank God that we ever stepped out of the banking business and left our position in Detroit, Mich., and hearkened unto the call of God that had been following us for so many years. In the evening, just before we left our home for the train, Dr. Emory W. Petticord called and offered a prayer that graciously blessed all present. How I thank God for these strong men of faith and works!

Some years ago in the city of Detroit the writer made the remark to a group of Christians that some day he was going to cross the ocean in the interest of the Gospel. So here we are, ready to sail; within two hours we will be on board the "Empress of Russia" sailing for Japan, Korea and China, the fields in which our Society is laboring. Praise God! Psalms 37:4—"He shall give thee the desires of thine heart."

We arrived in Vancouver last night after gradually leaving the land of palm trees and came into the regions of the pines. Mt. Shasta (along the Southern Pacific Railroad) snow-covered, towered in the distance. Farther on, when we reached Washington, Mt. Rainier rose high in all its snowy whiteness and seemed as a great sentinel watching as we passed. We left Seattle via the Great Northern Railroad and crossed the Canadian border about 10:30 when everyone in the train opened their baggage for inspection, which we gladly did. We secured our Chinese visa today, so we now have both Japanese and Chinese visas, as we secured the former in Los Angeles before starting North. We sail at 11 o'clock this morning to be on waters before untried by us, but going forth strong in the faith and the power of his might. Isaiah 43:16—"The Lord maketh a way in the sea and a path in the mighty waters." Psalms 107:30: "So he bringeth them to their desired haven."

May we all work and pray unitedly for still greater wonders of his grace to be accomplished in the spread of the Gospel and evangelization of the Orient.

Yours in His fellowship,

E. O. RICE,

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

PEKING, CHINA.

To Our Friends of The Herald Family:

Peking has been the center of our labors for the last ten days. Peking means capital city, but since the present government came into power and moved the capital to Nanking the name has been changed to Peiping.

We have a very full schedule which calls for four or five services every day. Each morning we conduct meetings in the various schools and institutions, while every afternoon and evening we are engaged in a union revival campaign which is being held in the Chinese Independent Church. Mr. Troxel of the National Holiness Association was instrumental in getting these doors of opportunity open for us. He is assisting by interpreting some of the messages. The Lord is graciously blessing us as we labor and many have been saved while a large number have sought the experience of sanctification.

As we have mingled with the various missionary groups and Christian workers we have had opportunity to observe the missionary work in this great center at close range. Our hearts have been stirred as we have beheld the spiritual deadness and stagnation that exists. Missionaries without a real spiritual experience; modernistic in their theology and nothing but a gospel of social service and education to present. Money is being spent in great amounts to erect large institutions while the evangelistic program gets a few mites. We have wanted to hasten back to America and go up and down the land telling the people who are giving their hard earned money in good faith to these modernistic boards, to stop handing over God's money to men who have no spiritual vision. It is a tragedy that so many of the laymembers of these large churches are not aware of the awful conditions that exist in this section of China.

Education has been the cry of these modernistic missionaries and the boards at home largely modern themselves have hearkened unto their cry. Since the close of the World War this group has been at the helm and they have had their fling in directing the policies. They have made every effort to stifle a true spiritual and evangelistic program. It is very evident that their program has failed to produce results.

The Chinese government has issued an order that the Bible cannot be taught in any of the schools for secular education. Chapel services are prohibited as part of the regular curriculum and can only be held at hours which do in no way conflict with the regular schedule. Students cannot be compelled to attend and in one chapel service we held where there is a student body of eight hundred students only about forty attended. These schools are now forced to register under the government. Instead of taking the stand as the spiritual missionaries have done and saying "We will close our schools and refuse to run them if we can't teach the Bible" these modernistic groups have complied with the demands of the government. As a result there is no more Christianity being taught in their regular curriculum than in the pagan government schools.

Nine-tenths of their students are non-Christians and a good percent of their faculty are heathen. Very little is being done in any of these schools to win the students to Christ and the majority graduate educated pagans, without receiving any true conception of what Christianity is or can do for the individual.

We are further astonished to find some of these schools carrying on their competitive athletic contests on Sunday with apparently no protest being offered by those in authority. We saw or heard of nothing like this in either Japan or Korea among the Christian schools.

Many of the missionaries are awakening to the folly of this procedure and are beginning to realize that a radical change must be made with a new emphasis on direct evangelism. A cry of protest is being made from many quarters. This accounts for the door being open for us here in Peking, and it appears as if much more will be done this coming year in the way of real evangelism.

It is gratifying to find that God is blessing the work of those groups which preach the full gospel. The National Holiness Association and also the Oriental Missionary Society have fruitful work in this part of China.

We thank you again for remembering us in your prayers and ask you to remember China this great needy field.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

We are rejoicing over one of the greatest revivals our church has ever had. The meeting started Jan. 4, and came to a most successful close January 18, with eighty-two uniting with the church on the closing Sunday, and more who applied for membership, to be received next Sunday. It was the most old-time revival of true religion our church has ever known. Rev. Harry S. Allen, of Dallas, Texas, one of our General Evangelists, did the preaching, assisting our beloved pastor, Rev. A. J. McCary. We attribute the success of the revival largely to the united efforts of these noble men of God. Our pastor already had us warmed up, spiritually, and ready for the meeting, and had not a single person joined the church the good that was done the membership alone, would more than have paid for everything the revival cost. It was the most satisfactory and harmonious revival in every way that we have ever had, and we attribute it largely to the fact that Bro. Allen devotes his time entirely to looking after the spiritual interests of the meeting and leaves the finances with the pastor and official board. No pastor or church need fear calling this man to help in a meeting on account of the finances. Our Board because of the hard times, entered the meetings a little fearful, but after it was over we know our church is helped in every department, finances for a meeting were never easier raised, and it will help us in raising the regular assessments for our church. We all rejoice now we had the revival. Bro. Allen not only preaches, but goes out between services and visits with the pastor from home to home and talks and prays with people; many of our converts were won this way.

Of the large class joining the church, many men and women, the representative people of this part of the city, were among them. One of the greatest results of the revival was the movement to take up our church building work again. I believe in the next two weeks we will be at work, never to stop, until we are worshipping in the new building. A collection was taken on the closing Sunday of the revival for the new building, and the people responded in a wonderful way. One of our choir said he would give a hundred dollars if he were permitted to sing the first solo in the new church. We think this revival completed the final step for us, we already have the loan necessary secured and expect to get busy at once. As the superintendent of the Sunday school and a member of the Official Board, I see in the results to our Sunday school the blessing of the revival. Many of our young people were converted and joined the church and we only need to get into our new building to have four or five hundred present every Sunday.

I want to recommend Bro. Allen to any pastor or church. If you want a revival that will bring your people together, that will build up all parts of your church and secure a large ingathering get this consecrated evangelist who has had twenty years' experience in holding successful revivals.

S. C. Haygood.

REVIVAL AT SALYERSVILLE.

Miss Grace Wilson, of Manchester, Ky., held us the best meeting this town has had in over twenty-four years. Her preaching was filled with power and unction. No apologies have to be made for Miss Wilson for she knows just how to handle the church problem. Her preaching is of the highest order. About fifty prayed to definite victory.

On Sunday, January 25, we baptized two adults; five more are to be baptized. Twenty-five adults are uniting with our church. Social clubs are now becoming prayer meeting clubs. Over 200 per cent increase made in the prayer services. All the departments of the church work have been greatly helped.

Our church has never been so full. The attendance was beyond the capacity of the church. Many stood in the aisles to listen to her message. Our great court-room was crowded also to its capacity as she addressed the people on the first day of court. Great services were held also for the high school young people and many were led into a definite experience.

Best of all, was the fact that the revival didn't leave with the evangelist. Three of the hardest and most resistant cases were at the altar for prayer after the meeting was over, and the young converts were holding their first session. Our church is much encouraged over winning the young people and they have become the leaders of our mid-week services.

C. H. Rayl, Pastor.

ULYSSES, PENNSYLVANIA.

With Brother J. R. Parker, of Wilmore, Ky., doing the preaching, we have just closed one of the most wonderful and helpful revival meetings that this town has ever known, so some of the older members of our church inform us. The farther the meeting draws away from us the more we are convinced that the statement is true. One member of the church, well past her seventieth year, a Christian for nearly or more than fifty years, gave one of the most stirring and enlightening testimonies of the blessed experience of sanctification which she received during the meetings that we have ever heard. Girls in their teens and early twenties prayed through at the altar; some who had been converted in our revival meeting of a year ago were wonderfully sanctified. One woman, who some time ago had informed us that only within the last year had she ever taken any vital interest in the church, merely attending for the sake of her children, testified to receiving the sanctifying grace of the Holy Spirit in her heart. An avowed infidel, whom we are informed had not been inside of a church house for over twenty years until last year, came night after night and was seemingly much interested and we feel sure under conviction for sin. One of the most encouraging facts of the meeting was that the Devil was mad and put up an awful fight.

Brother Parker is a man of God, doing God's work in God's way, and it is evident that he should be kept busy in the fight. Pastors or boards of any church that want a revival would do well to employ this straightforward preacher. His work with the children while with us will be remembered by them for their eternal good, the longest day they live, and until Christ shall come again. I know of nothing that could have been a more beneficial follow-up for our year of pentecostal activities than the two weeks which Brother Parker labored for us.

The evangelist spoke a few helpful words for Asbury College and took several subscriptions for The Pentecostal Herald; but best of all, he preached full salvation in an unmistakable way. We believe that, all in all, such seed was sown during our meeting that will not only bless this community but the world we touch as well.

I promised a letter reporting our work since we left Asbury College, but it seems the work has been more urgent than the report and time has not yet been taken off to do so—but the promise still holds. However, will say that God has richly blessed us and the people seem to be getting farther up the road, spiritually. Pray for us.

V. O. Priddy, Pastor.

MISSIONARY TOUR.

No. 1.

Dear Friends in America! God smile upon you as you need, Amen. Perhaps you will enjoy a little report from us in the "Land of the Morning Calm." First, before speaking of the Korean Convention let us mention briefly our trip across the Pacific. We found that we could save about a hundred dollars, by taking third-class on the largest and fastest boat—"The Empress of Canada," from Vancouver. This we did and thus had fine meals, comfortable berths and little sea-sickness. I wish all of the missionaries knew these facts.

Well, we have just closed a two-weeks' campaign in Korea. For seven days we labored in the capital city, Seoul. Here the Oriental Missionary Society has a thriving Bible School under the wise supervision of Brothers Woods and Haines, with their good wives and co-workers. They certainly treated us royally. They have some fine buildings and compound valued at about $100,000.

We had four preaching services daily. At 5:00 A. M., the students and faithful ones met for prayer, and at 5:30 the large auditorium was more than half filled with earnest believers. There were no seats, but clean matting upon which they sat tailor-style. Everyone left his shoes and sandals outside, or in the aisle, so that the matting remained clean. We were permitted to keep our shoes on, but had to wear "shoe-covers." About twice as many can be thus crowded into a building than if there were seats. The natives can sit on their feet for hours without discomfort. At 10:00 A. M., another service with some outsiders attending. At 2:00 P. M., another interesting service; and at 7:00, the climax of the day, with not only believers seeking holiness, but "unbelievers" (raw heathen) prostrating themselves upon the floor.

Several things impressed us greatly. One was their simplicity and true devotion. None sat up and looked around, but all prayed so earnestly that no one could be heard. This lasted for an hour or more.

Another thing was their plainness and modesty of dress. No bare arms or collar bones or rolled stockings. Not a bold, bob-haired girl or woman to be seen. We sat and wept while a chorus of beautiful girls in their teens sang our tunes to their words. These girls (until betrothed) wear their hair in long braids tied with a ribbon. No part of the body to be seen except the hands and face, and of course, no paint or frills. Even the little children do not look around, but are in reverence during prayer. What a rebuke to our so-called civilization.

After leaving Seoul, we accompanied Bro. Woods to three new churches, where we preached the dedicatory sermons. Just think of it! New churches filled to overflowing with those who a few months or years ago were in total darkness. Out of their poverty, some of them put aside one spoonful of rice for every meal, and this was sold to get a few pennies (sen) toward the erection of the new chapel. Rice is their main food, and they thus denied themselves to help what little they could. Say, it pays to send live missionaries out, and then stand by them. We have caught a new vision, and can no longer be caged up in a small place like the United States. Son, Everette, feels like returning as a missionary.

At this writing, we are in a great convention in Tokyo, Japan. The hall seats about 1500, and the earnest seekers almost rush over each other to get to the altar. One night Everette preached on the "Baptism of Fire," and fully 500 throughout the building and gallery, prostrated themselves in prayer. Young preachers, students, and others, some on their knees, and others standing and swaying back and forth, were all in oblivion to everything but God. Will write more about this later.

From here we go to Kobe, where we hold another union convention with five churches, principally, the Free Methodist. Then on to China, Egypt, and Palestine. Direct us at Rome, Italy, up to April 15th, care of Thomas Cook and Son.

E. E. Shelhamer.

preached in the old church after the conference the latter part of October until the new church was opened, and has already received some forty-odd new members. I noticed on Sunday evening after he preached, people gathered about him and he was taking new names for membership.

This new Glide Memorial Church has a great working staff. Brother McPheeters has associated with him two fine young preachers, a most excellent choir and some very consecrated women to assist in pressing the work. Dr. Sims, presiding elder, is a man of remarkable business gifts and has been a great counsellor of Mrs. Glide who has furnished the means for the erection of this splendid Memorial, and has been an important factor in the whole enterprise.

Mrs. Lizzie H. Glide is one of the most remarkable women in all of my wide acquaintance. Back in the year 1895 I made my first evangelistic tour to California. Mrs. Glide wrote me to come out and preach full salvation, and paid my expenses. I was entertained in the Glide mansion in Sacramento for many weeks and formed the acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. Glide. Her husband, James Glide, was one of the most interesting men one would meet in a lifetime. He was born in England, a man of indomitable industry. He amassed a fortune; he owned thousands of acres of land and raised sheep by the ten thousand. Men came from many places to buy from him the finest sheep to be found in the United States, and shipped them for breeding purpose to various countries. Besides these sheep ranches, Mr. Glide carried on a large business. He was one of the most frank, positive gentlemen I have ever known. He looked governors, senators, bankers, bishops, preachers and all the rest, squarely in the face and spoke his mind without hesitation. He was a friend to the church; he wanted a consecrated ministry and preaching of a pure, saving gospel, although for many years from the time of which I speak, he was not a member of the church. He professed conversion and united with the church late in life.

Sam Jones held one of his great meetings in Sacramento a few years before I went out on this evangelistic tour. At one of his services he said, "I want Christian people who will pledge themselves from this time forward to be loyal to Jesus Christ, to come and give me their hands." Among others Mrs. Glide went forward. With her, it was not a formal act, but a real pledge. She went home, sought a secret place of prayer, met the Lord Jesus in an entire consecration, and the Holy Spirit came upon her in sanctifying power. She was filled with a great peace and joy, resulting in a most radical change in her life. It was quite a while before she heard anything on the subject of entire sanctification; didn't know there was such doctrine in Methodism. The first time she heard a sermon preached on sanctification, her heart leaped for joy, and she knew exactly what she had received, and became a modest, but faithful and fearless witness to the cleansing power of Jesus' blood. For nearly forty years she has been a faithful witness, not in word only, but in deed and in truth.

The trials through which she passed in those earlier years, when the war was raging against the Holiness Movement, would make an interesting booklet. She passed through them with dauntless courage and cheerful spirit. Her mansion which covered almost a half block of the city, became a house of prayer, and an open door for the devout poor who flocked about her for help, both spiritual and physical. She had holiness prayer meetings in her home where many souls were blessed. Mr. Glide rented a large store down town which she fixed up for a mission, with rooms, and employed and paid the expenses of an earnest full salvation preacher. These meetings went on for years, Mrs. Glide laboring at the altar with the various classes of broken-hearted humanity who came there with their burdens of sin and went rejoicing away. I remember to have attended the services there one evening; the altar was filled and Mrs. Glide was busy among them. Mr. Glide had not then been converted, but he was present, sitting on an elevated platform in the rear of the mission room. I went back and sat down by him. The tears were rolling down his cheeks. He said to me, "Morrison, my wife is bringing more people to Christ than all the preachers of this city put together."

It would take a large volume to tell of the quiet, patient, persistent work of this saintly woman to win the lost to Christ, and to lead the children of God into the blessing of entire sanctification. She has given thousands of dollars to the cause of foreign missions, not only through the church direct, but to the various holiness groups who are carrying on most successful salvation work in Oriental lands. I have no idea that Mrs. Glide, herself, could tell the number of students she has assisted in school and the thousands of dollars she has devoted to their education. She has paid out a large sum of money for evangelistic work in California and other places.

Some years ago, she put up a handsome building in San Francisco for the accommodation of working girls, and employed a saintly woman as matron to look after their interests and give them protection they could not have otherwise had. She was the main benefactor in building a beautiful church in Berkeley, erected a handsome structure for Methodist girls who attended the State University.

The generosity of Mrs. Glide made two of our largest and best buildings at Asbury College a possibility. She has hardly failed as the years have gone by, to have several students in Asbury who, without her assistance, could not have attended the college. This great church and building which she has erected in memory of Mr. Glide, is one of her largest gifts, amounting to many hundreds of thousands of dollars. God has wonderfully blessed her in the management of her business. Mr. Glide died something like twenty years ago leaving a large estate to be divided among his wife and children. With prayerful discretion and remarkable business acumen, she has managed her business affairs so that she has been able to pour out a constant stream of generosity, much of which no one knows except herself and the Lord. She is now advanced in years, but I do not know when I have seen her in better health, and I have never known her more deeply interested in the spread of the gospel, the conversion of sinners, the reclamation of backsliders and the sanctification of believers.

I am not going to close this article without asking that THE HERALD readers to pray the blessing of God upon this very remarkable woman, her family, and Brother McPheeters, Dr. Sims, the presiding elder, and the staff of workers, to make this Glide Memorial a great evangelistic center in one of the most remarkable cities in the world. Perhaps there is not a city in greater need of just such an institution as Mrs. Glide has sought to build up in San Francisco.

Bishop Moore is making a profound and excellent impression on the Coast. Everywhere he goes to preach, he has vast congregations of people, and his ministry is in demonstration and power of the Spirit. The people are eager to hear him, and go from his services profoundly impressed and more eager to hear him when an opportunity shall be offered.

I went through some great sufferings while on the Coast, was seven weeks in the Sanitarium, but had some gracious opportunities to preach, and the Lord's holiness people were wonderfully faithful to me. May God bless them. This was my second last visit to California; when I was out there some three years ago, I told them it was my last visit, that I never expected to go back. If the Lord extends my life, it is not improbable that I shall see those dear friends once more. The Lord's will be done. Amen and Amen!

A Delightful Meeting With Old Asburians.

Just before leaving California for Florida, I spent two delightful days and nights with Rev. R. A. Young, M.A., and his wife and their two wonderful boys, in Torrance, Calif. Bob and Florence will be remembered by hundreds of old Asburians. They spent some great years in Asbury College.

Torrance, Calif., is one of the beautiful cities lying between Los Angeles and the Pacific Ocean. When Bob and his wife finished their course and took the Master's Degree at the University of Southern California, Bob was appointed to the First Methodist Church in Torrance. He is now in his fourth year of a very successful pastorate. Under his ministry the membership of the church has been doubled, a handsome new parsonage has been paid for, a beautiful addition has been built to the church, and the older building has been greatly beautified, involving many thousands of dollars.

I had the pleasure of speaking to a large congregation at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, who impressed me as being a people of intelligence and true piety. I take it that the largest fruit of Rev. Young's labors has been spiritual. He broadcasts at Trinity Church once a week over Bob Shuler's radio. He remains steadfast to the truths he learned, and the experiences he enjoyed at Asbury, and is held in high esteem by prominent men in the Methodist Church and many of the most spiritual and devout people in his vicinity.

He sent out notices of my presence and, on Thursday evening, his wife with her Sunday school class of charming young women, prepared a delightful supper, and we had quite a gathering of the old Asbury boys and girls, and a number of their friends present. I was informed that this gathering was in honor of myself, and they certainly gave me a very cordial and delightful reception.

The Asburians have a large organization in California and quite a number of our young preachers have important churches and are forging to the front as aggressive and fruitful gospel preachers. I heard an excellent report of Donald K. Householder, who graduated a few years ago, and is now stationed in the M. E. Church, South, in Sacramento, the capital of the state. Bishop Moore tells me he is doing an excellent work. It is quite encouraging to find the boys and girls who went out from Asbury successful workers in the vineyard of the Lord. I am under lasting obligation to Bob and his wife and their boys for their many courtesies and my delightful stay in their very happy home.

The Physician-Evangelist.

Dr. G. E. Macklem, long time physician in Canton, O., has for many years been deeply interested in the spiritual welfare of his patients, and has often preached with great fervor and effectiveness to the crowds who have welcomed his messages. He writes me that he has now given up the practice of medicine and will give his entire time to evangelistic work. Dr. Macklem comes of an old, distinguished and wealthy family, has enjoyed fine educational advantages and knows much of human nature, men, women and children. He has touched many phases of human life; as a preacher he speaks with knowledge and emphasis.

He has held successful meetings in many places, among them, Berea College, Asbury College, The Bible School in Cincinnati, John Fletcher College and a number of other places. It is his purpose to press the work with vigor. He will be ready for the camp meeting season; people will not go to sleep under his ministry. He has the endorsement of The International Association of Evangelists at Winona Lake, Ind., and the Federation of Christian Workers, Siloam Springs, Ark. We anticipate for him a very fruitful ministry.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

AGNOSTICISM.

manifest unto all men." This is what Paul, the Gnostic, wrote to Timothy, his son in the gospel, of such people. Agnosticism would knock every prop from beneath the trembling faith of the child of God. It would rob the dying saint of his hope of heaven. It would steal the comfort that God pours into the bereaved hearts when a loved one slips away, and would bar the door of heaven from every trusting child of God.

Agnosticism has nothing to offer but doubt, mystery, and uncertainty here and hereafter. This life is not worth living, and there is nothing beyond that is better. What a dark and gloomy prospect lies before such. Paul spoke truly when he said, "If in this life only, we have hope, we are of all men most miserable." And the Agnostic is miserable. He admits that life is not worth living, yet he has nothing better to hope for, and so he drolls out his miserable existence here.

If there is no resurrection faith is vain, hope is without foundation, and our future is one of black despair. Job asked that momentous question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" And he answered it to his own satisfaction when he declared, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Job was far from being an Agnostic, for he knew something. As sure as God's word is true, this mortal shall put on immortality, this corruption shall put on incorruption and then shall the peon of victory be sounded throughout the vast universe, "Death is swallowed up in victory. Thanks be unto God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Give me God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Give me the Christ of Bethlehem, of Calvary and Olivet. Give me the Holy Spirit who is in the world to abide forever. Give me heaven with all that it means of rest, peace, joy and life forevermore. Give me these things and I shall be safe for two worlds. The Agnostic drifts along in his doubts here, but when he shall have crossed the sullen stream of death—one thing he cannot doubt—he shall realize that his doubts are turned to tormenting realities, but it will be too late to remedy his awful mistake.

FINAL END OF AGNOSTIC AND CHRISTIAN.

Let us compare the final end of the Agnostic and Christian. One of old cried out, "My kingdom for a moment of time!" All is regret, uncertainty and despair to the Agnostic. Listen to Stephen, as he was being stoned to death. "I see the Son of man standing at the right hand of God." Sir Walter Scott before dying, said, "Give me the Book." "What book?" was the answer. He said, "There is but one Book—the Bible." John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, said when dying, "The best of all is, God is with us." Paul, as he faced the headman's axe and executioner's block, said, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them that love his appearing."

How does this compare with the blackness of eternal night that lies out beyond the deathbed of the Agnostic! They say, "We don't know what is beyond." Moses and Elijah came back, one after he had been in heaven 800 years, and the other 1500, and talked with Jesus on the Mount of Transfiguration. They had been somewhere, they came back, and went back to their eternal abode.

We thank God for the Rock of Ages which has withstood the blasting of skepticism, agnosticism and infidelity through the ages, and which will abide when time is no longer, and we have been brought face to face with him who hath redeemed us in his own precious blood and given us the joy of reigning with him forever. Truly, we can sing,

"My God is reconciled,
His pardoning voice I hear;
He owns me for his child;
I can no longer fear."

Yes, we can "know whom we have believed, and be persuaded that he is able to keep that which we have committed unto him against that day." Amen! "Unto him who has washed us from our sins in his own precious blood, be glory forever and ever."

New Clothes for the Old Man.

My home burned recently, and I am asking if any of THE HERALD readers have a copy of the book—above. I am trying to keep a full collection of them, and in the fire—this one was lost, and should like to secure another one if it can be had. Would like it from the edition, in gray cover, or green, as that edition was complete, which the first edition was not—with yellow cover.

C. F. WIMBERLY, St. George, S. C.

If you are going to start a love fire, you'll have to have kindling. Match first though.

Is It "All Over In a Second?"

H. H. SMITH.

A writer, discussing the subject of capital punishment, argued in favor of life-imprisonment as a substitute, saying: "When a man dies in the electric chair it is all over in a second, but if he is sentenced to hard labor for life in a state prison, he will suffer more, and this form of punishment will act as a greater deterrent to crime than the death penalty."

Just now we are not concerned with the subject of capital punishment, but there is an assertion in the statement quoted above that demands attention. Is it "all over in a second" when one dies? That may be the creed of some who live solely to gratify the bodily appetites and can think of death only as it applies to animal life. But even with the hardened criminal there is often "a fearful looking for of judgment." Death is a solemn thing to face. Even the holiest face it with awe. When we consider their lifelong attitude toward religion, the number of condemned men who call for the preacher or the priest in the death cell is surprisingly large. A few die as they have lived, but most men instinctively believe in a future existence, and though the wicked may hope that there is nothing beyond the grave to alarm, their fears are not wholly allayed. The story is told of an ungodly man who heard a sermon in which the preacher denied that there is such a thing as future punishment. It so pleased him that he thanked the preacher for such agreeable views of the future life, but added, "Can you guarantee it? If you will guarantee it, I'll bring you a load of hay."

Dr. Torrey, the evangelist, said that, during a revival, a woman came to him and asked to see him for a private interview. He told her to come to the pastor's study the next morning and he would see her. There in the preacher's study she made this confession: "I came to this country from England eight years ago. I am a miserable woman; I am a murderer. Eight years ago I killed a man, and though I have succeeded in evading the law, life is a torment. I have several times contemplated suicide, but as I have stood by the lake ready to plunge in and end it all, I have had awful fears that death might not end it all, that I might have to pay the penalty in another world." No doubt thousands have been kept from a suicide's grave by that same haunting belief that death does not end all. No, it is not "all over in a second." We cannot run away from ourselves; conscience is a part of us, and the poet voices sober truth when he makes the conscience-stricken man say, "Myself am hell." "I want to be hanged. The people I've killed come dancing into my cell at night. I can't get away from 'em," were the cries of a condemned felon who had confessed to the murder of fourteen men.

God tells us in his Word that it is not "all over in a second" when we die: "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this, the judgment." Conscience tells us it is not "all over in a second" when the heart ceases to beat and the body grows cold. Reason tells us it is not "all over in a second" for the man dying for his crime, who, refusing to earn his bread by honest labor, robs and kills those who have faithfully toiled for their possessions. The Bible, Conscience, Reason,—a three-fold witness worthy of acceptance.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

THE STORY OF MOSES.

Mrs. Geneva Mendenhall.

Part III.

When the two brothers came to the land of the Nile, they asked the Pharaoh, or king, to allow the people to go over the sea into the wilderness to worship their own God. But they only made the Pharaoh angry so that he placed heavier burdens on the people. Then Moses and Aaron cried unto the Lord so that he sent, one after the other, ten terrible plagues upon the people of the Nile. But each time Moses removed the plague, the Pharaoh hardened his heart until at last God sent the angel of death into the very home of the Pharaoh, taking his own oldest son. Then the Pharaoh cried out begging them to take their wives and their children and leave at once.

Then Moses and Aaron gathered the people together, early in the morning and led them like a great army out of the land of the Nile. The Lord God marched before the people of Israel in the day time as a great pillar of cloud, and at night as a pillar of fire.

Before the Israelites had gone very far, word reached them that the Pharaoh was following with a great army to overcome them and take them back as slaves. At this time they journeyed between two high mountains until they came to the sea. So that they were shut completely in and there seemed to be no way of escape from the army of the Pharaoh. The people were very much afraid and cried out against Moses and Aaron for bringing them out of bondage only to destroy them. But God caused a strong wind to blow on the sea, so that it rolled back leaving a track across the clean sand. Then the column moved around so it stood as a guard between them and the chariots of the pharaoh. All night they marched across the bared bed of the sea, men, women, and children, with their flocks and herds so that by morning they were all safe on the other side. When they looked back the Pharaoh with his chariots, who had tried to follow them, was swallowed up as the sea rolled in and the waves rose higher and higher.

Just beyond this wilderness was the land flowing with milk and honey which God had promised them, but because they failed to trust God they wandered about the wilderness for forty long years.

While Moses was never allowed to enter the Promised Land, he went up into a high mountain where he could look down and see it. While up in the mountain alone, he died, and no one ever knew where his body was laid.

1. Do you know what the ten great plagues were?

2. What did the Israelites use for food in the desert?

3. Why was Moses not permitted to enter the Promised Land?

4. What age did Moses live to be?

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you allow a little Kentucky girl to join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. I am sixteen years old, a brunette and am a student of Campbellsville College, and am very much interested in school work. I belong to the Church of God. I am glad so many of the boys and girls are Christians. I think it is wonderful to be a child of God. I became a Christian when I was thirteen years of age. I would love to hear from all The Herald readers and will answers all letters. Pauline Keltner, Campbellsville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a little New Mexico girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have not written before and hope to see this in print. Have I a twin? I have blue eyes, brown hair and am eleven years old. My birthday is November 21. My mother has been dead two years. I live with my sister. We live on the farm. I am in the sixth grade. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E, and has six letters. I would like to receive some letters from boys and girls. Write to Fort Sumner, New Mexico, Box 155. Gertrude Cartright.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As I haven't seen any letters from Louisiana I would like to see this in print. I have not been reading The Herald very long, but I certainly do enjoy it, especially page ten. I am seventeen years old, have black hair, cut wind blown bob. I have dark complexion, gray eyes and am five feet, four inches tall and weigh 120 pounds. I love all outdoor sports, but my greatest hobby is reading. My birthday is May 24. Have I a twin? I would like to hear from some of the cousins near my age, and promise to answer all letters received. Nanilee Meredith, Chester Route, Columbia, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I enjoy the children's letters on page ten. A nice old gentleman gives me his paper to read. I am ten years old and my sister Doris is nine. We read the letters in The Herald. Sometimes we use some of the poems in our programs at church. We go to the Evangelical Sunday school here. I help my mother with the work every day and think this is the best way of showing our love to God. Folks can tell how much we love God by the way we love and help others. Donald D. Andrew, Kidder, So. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you allow a little Mississippi girl to join your happy band of boys and girls? I read page ten every week and enjoy it very much. I have blue eyes, brown hair and fair complexion. I am four feet high and weigh seventy-two pounds. I am twelve years of age and my birthday is March 11. I enjoy reading the stories and poems that are on page ten. My twin is Dorris Upchurch. Her address is Longview, Miss. I like to go to school. I am in the seventh grade. We do not have a Sunday school here, but I wish we did. I live in the country five or six miles away from town. I go on a school truck to school. I like all of my teachers. Well I will close because I do not want to knock anybody's letter out. Ava Erwin, Sturgis, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again. My first letter was printed and so I feel as if I'm one of the band. I am attending a holiness school which has recently been founded about three miles from my home. There are twenty-one students. Every one is saved and all but two are sanctified. We are given a chance to testify very often and we all want a chance to serve and praise God. I am a freshman at the school. My address while at school is Kingswood School, Leesburg, Va.

Josephine A. Embrey.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you admit me as one of your cousins? I am twelve years old, and have wavy blonde hair and fair complexion. My birthday is Sept. 1. Huldah L. Pudon, I guess your middle name to be Inez. Am I correct? I will gladly answer any letter received from the cousins. I enjoy reading page ten. Agnes M. Snook, Rt. 1, Gypsum, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I hardly ever see a letter in The Herald from dear Ohio, so I thought I would write. The last year this part of Ohio has had a wonderful holiness movement. I was saved about three years ago and was sanctified this September. My sister, a senior in high school, a freshman boy and I are the only holiness representatives in our high school, but by God's grace I am keeping the victory. On Monday evening we have cottage prayer meetings in this part of the country. I'm glad I have given up the world to go with my Savior. I am fourteen years old, my birthday being June 18,

I am a sophomore in Albany High School. I would like to receive letters from all parts of our country telling me of your experiences and of life in your part of the country, and from boys and girls both. Snapshots would be appreciated. I will try to answer all letters received. Fernie McVay, Rt. 1, Albany, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little Michigan boy. May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old. My birthday is April 6. I have light hair and dark brown eyes. I weigh 71 pounds. My grandpa takes The Herald. I am a Christian. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I haven't missed a Sunday in a year. My middle name starts with L and ends with E; it has four letters in it. Can anyone guess it? Max Titus, Jackson, Mich.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I haven't seen any letters in The Herald from Oklahoma so will write and let you know some of us read The Herald and enjoy it. I am eight years old and have blonde hair and blue eyes. Mother takes The Herald and we all enjoy it very much. My birthday is Dec. 16. Have I a twin? If so, please write. Who can guess my first name? It begins with D and ends with S, and has six letters in it. I am in the third grade at school. My teacher's name is Miss C. Moore. Mary Catherine Hallman, I do not know for sure, but I think Mr. W. B. is the waste paper basket. Anyway, I do not want him to get hold of this letter to The Herald, because it is my first. We go to the Nazarene Church. Bro. Gilmore is our pastor. I like to go to church. I hope to see more letters from Oklahoma. Cousins, please write to me. D. Naomi Covey, 914 W. College, Blackwell, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join the happy band of boys and girls? My grandmother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten very much. I live in Logan county, W. Va. I am thirteen years of age and in the seventh grade. I go to Sunday school. I like my teacher fine; her name is Helen Nesbit. I have blue eyes, light complexion and am a brunette. Have I a twin? If so, please write and I will answer all letters I receive. My middle name starts with E and ends with E, and contains six letters. Who can guess it? I go to the Methodist Church. Audrey E. Bolt, Dehue, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a little West Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? Grandma takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I go to Sunday school every Sunday and like my Sunday school teacher very much. Her name is Miss Helen Nesbit. I am eleven years of age and in the sixth grade. Can any one guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E, and it has five letters in it. I weigh 69 pounds. Gay M. Bolt, Dehue, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am twelve years, twelve days old. My birthday was Jan. 19. Have I a twin? I am in the sixth grade. My teacher is C. C. Geer. I have blue eyes, yellow hair, and light complexion. Larna Baldwin, I guess your name to be Minnie. Huldah Pudgen, I guess your name to be Inez. See who can guess my middle name? It starts with B and ends with S, and has seven letters in it. Will some one write to me, boy or girl? I will answer it. Laron B. Hudson, Rt. 5, Box 43, Sparta, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please admit a new member to your happy circle of cousins? I am a girl from the state of Kentucky. This is my first letter to The Herald. I am thirteen years old and weigh 110 pounds, am five feet tall, and in the eighth grade. I am a brunette. Have I a twin? Can anyone guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with R. It contains seven letters. Will appreciate all letters received from the cousins. Will close hoping to see this in print. Edith Bolt, Rt. 1, Bush, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Jersey girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a little blonde with wavy hair and blue eyes. My birthday is Jan. 29. I go to Sunday school and am a teacher. Mother and I go to the Union M. E. Church. Our pastor is Rev. R. P. Stevens. Robert Fraser, blind gospel singer and preacher, was there for two weeks. He was just wonderful and I am expecting to go visiting him to his home in West Philadelphia. I have a desire to be a missionary. I want you all to pray for me. I hope when Mr. W. B. gets this letter he'll be eating oranges. For those Southern oranges look good to us eastern folks. I will answer all letters I receive. Mildred Eleanor Henderson, 140 W. Federal St., Burlington, N. J.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have written once before and I thank you for printing my letter. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with N, and has six letters. Whoever guesses it, please send me your picture. I have one sister and one brother. Here are a few Bible questions: Who was the father of Shem? Who was turned to a pillar of salt? Who was Naomi's daughter-in-law? With whom did Samuel live when he was little? What did God create upon the fourth day? Whoever answers these questions please write to me. Would like to receive letters from the girls. I enjoy good letters from everywhere. I enjoy reading the Boys and Girls' Page very much. Evangeline M. Schneider, Rt. 2, Box 77B, Austin, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Mississippi girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. Have I a twin? I am fifteen years old. My birthday is Jan. 23. I take the fifth grade at school. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My father takes The Herald. I enjoy reading the Boys and Girls' Page. I am a Christian. Can anyone guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. I hope Mr. W. B. is hunting when my letter arrives. Phoebe Sharp, Rt. 1, Dennis, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little boy seven years old. I am in the second grade. My birthday is March 24. My middle name begins with V and ends with M. Guess what it is. We had a revival and I sang in the Junior choir. I was saved in our meeting. My mother takes The Herald. Please don't put me in the waste basket. Richard V. Dillon, Burr Oak, Kan.

"FRAGRANCE, SWEETNESS AND POWER"

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A. J.: "Please pray that I may get more victory, and that God will save my sister's soul."

Mrs. E. C.: "Please pray that I and all my family, husband and children, may live right and trust in God as we should."

O. B. Hoffpauir: "Please pray for a man of God who is in need of healing so that he may be able to preach the good news of salvation."

ANNUAL MEETING WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council will be held in the First Methodist Church, Memphis, Tenn., March 11-17, 1931. Hotel headquarters will be at the Claridge. The schedule of meetings for March 10, 11 and 12 is as follows:

Tuesday evening, March 10—Executive Committee Meeting.

Wednesday, March 11—Executive Session of Council.

Wednesday evening, March 11—Commissions, Bureaus and Standing Committees.

Thursday morning, March 12—Executive Session of Council.

Thursday afternoon, March 12—Sessions Committees.

Thursday evening, March 12—First public session.

At this opening session, Thursday evening, Mr. Raymond Dobbins will deliver an address on Christian Citizenship and Law Observance.

An inspiring program presented through the succeeding days will reach its climax Tuesday evening, March 17, in the service for the consecration of candidates for Home and Foreign service.

Bishop A. Frank Smith will deliver the annual sermon; Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbins will consecrate the candidates; Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin, Director of the Quaker Center of Study and Research, Wallingford, Pa., has charge of the noon worship period, and Mrs. J. L. Cunningham of the morning worship period.

Attention is called to the fact that while in executive session Wednesday afternoon, the Council will decide on the place for its next meeting, and Thursday morning will take the pledge for 1931.

Reduced railway rates, according to the Certificate Plan, have been granted. This means that a full one way fare of not less than sixty-seven (67) cents must be paid for a ticket to Memphis, and a certificate secured which will entitle the holder to half rate for the return ticket over the same route; provided not less than one hundred and fifty (150) regularly issued and properly dated certificates are presented in time to be counted and duly validated.

The required number of certificates (150) properly signed by the Council Secretary, must be in hand before the Railway Agent can validate one. When conditions are met, he will validate a certificate any day from March 11 to 17, except Sunday.

The dates of sale of tickets, except from the more remote points, are March 7-13 inclusive. From the more remote points the dates will be early enough for the purchaser to reach Memphis in time for the meeting. The final date of honoring certificates is March 20.

Publicity agents are requested to take note of these dates, and to urge all who are to attend to purchase tickets to Memphis on the proper selling dates, also to urge those who attend to travel by rail, that there may be no shortage in attendance.

If the number of tickets purchased may, as nearly as practicable, reflect the actual attendance at the meeting, our appreciation of the courtesy of the railroads will be expressed. A full attendance will also serve as a guide in determining whether reduced rates are justified another year.

Mrs. F. F. Stephens,

President.

Mrs. Fitzgerald S. Parker,

Recording Secretary.

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. James 1:5.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson X.—March 8, 1931.

Subject.—The Good Samaritan.
Luke 10:25-37.

Golden Text.—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Lev. 19:18.

Time.—Winter of A. D. 29.

Place.—Perea.

Introduction.—In this lesson we are only guessing as to time and place. Luke seems to connect the lesson with the Perea ministry of our Lord; and for that reason Bible students have placed it in that region, and in the year A. D. 29.

In the light of today's lesson no one should ever be in doubt as to who his neighbor is. Jesus settled that matter for all time to come. One's neighbor is his fellowman, no matter where he may live, who he may be, or to what race he may belong. This teaching is so far ahead of men that it will take them a long time to catch up with it. Men move slowly in religion and morals.

Comments on the Lesson.

25. A certain lawyer.—Jewish lawyers were different from lawyers of modern times. They were supposed to be thorough masters of all Jewish law; and it was their business to render opinions concerning questions of Jewish law, whether those questions concerned the Old Testament or traditional law. Stood up.—That was a respectful attitude for him to take in asking a question while Jesus was teaching the people. Tempted him.—There was more respect in his attitude than there was in his heart. Master.—He used the Greek word for teacher. What shall I do to inherit eternal life?—He could have asked no more momentous question than that. It stands to the front in every one's life.

26. What is written in the law? how readest thou?—Jesus meets him on his own ground. He claimed to be a master of the law; and that law told a Jew how to be saved until the coming of Jesus. If the lawyer had lived in harmony with Old Testament law, there would have been no trouble till the coming of better light; but there is no salvation in Judaism since the coming of Jesus Christ.

27. He answering said.—The lawyer's answer could hardly be surpassed for sound teaching. He gave the very heart of Old Testament law. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind." That is a quotation almost verbatim from Deut. 6:5. I have often heard persons in testifying say very glibly: "I love the Lord with all my heart"; but I fear that many of them little realized the meaning of their own words. Read the sentence carefully and prayerfully and see if you can measure up to it. The latter half of the lawyer's answer is quoted from Lev. 19:18. It is our Golden Text for the present lesson. These two great commandments contain the cream of the Decalogue; the first four commandments being compressed into the first part of the lawyer's answer, and the last six into the second half. He who loves God and his neighbor after this fashion will never wrong either of them. "Love is the fulfilling of the law."

28. This do, and thou shalt live.—The Master uttered those words knowing full well that no man can so do until he has been regenerated. Some modern cults would have men live the law of love without being born from above; but their doctrine is utterly false and ruinous. Men had to be regenerated under the Old Testament regime no less than under that of the New Testament. "Ye must be born again" is true of every child of Adam.

29. Willing to justify himself.—It is hard to make men come perfectly clear concerning their sins. The lawyer's conscience smote him, and he evaded the true answer to the Lord's statement. That sort of thing is just as common now as it was in the long ago. I was questioning a man some time ago concerning his soul; and received this answer: "I ain't done nothin' very mean." But, as I learned a bit later, he was almost an infidel. Who is my neighbor.—His purpose was, by this ruse, to deceive the Master as to his spiritual status. But the trick did not work; for the Master saw what was in his heart, and gave to him and to all men a never-to-be-forgotten lesson on neighborliness.

30. A certain man.—No particular man. Went down from Jerusalem to Jericho.—Jerusalem was up among the hills; so that it was down from that city to nearly all the surrounding country. Fell among thieves.—The roads through mountain passes in Palestine were at that time, as they have been nearly ever since, infested with highway robbers. These thieves stripped off his clothing, beat him severely, and left him half dead. Highway robbers have no conscience. My conviction is, that our courts are far too lenient with such characters in America. They are land pirates who show no mercy, and deserve none from the courts.

31. A certain priest.—Of all men, we should expect that a priest would have helped the poor wounded man; but "he passed by on the other side" of the road.

32. A levite.—He was of the sacred tribe from which came all the Jewish priests. Surely he will render some assistance. But, no; he just looked at him, and "passed by on the other side." Does all this seem unbelievable? The same thing is taking place today all over the world. People are starving to death in many places, while the rich revel in their millions. It is almost a perfect parallel to the case in our lesson.

33. A Samaritan.—The Samaritans were a hybrid race utterly despised by the Jews. The fact that Jesus took this despised Samaritan to teach a proud Jewish lawyer a lesson in neighborliness, was practically equal to an insult. Here was one who "had compassion" on the wounded man, and was ready to do all for him that he could, regardless of race or expense.

34. Oil and wine.—That was a splendid dressing for a wound. We may have better now; but that would be good still. This Samaritan was a real neighbor. He put the wounded man upon his own beast, and walked beside him to an inn, and even "took care of him" for sometime after getting him there. There was brotherly kindness in that man's heart; and it takes that to make neighborliness.

35. On the morrow.—The next day after finding the wounded man. Two pence.—The English penny is worth about two cents in American money; but the Palestinian penny was worth about fifteen cents; so that the Samaritan gave the innkeeper about thirty cents. That would not pay much on a hotel bill in America; but the daily wage for a working man in Palestine at that time was only about fifteen cents. Inn charges had to be low, or poor men could not have paid them at all. Note the generosity of the Samaritan: "Take care of him, and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee." No wonder he is so commonly spoken of as the "good Samaritan."

36. Which now of these, thinkest thou, was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves?—The lawyer was completely trapped. Had he seen sufficiently far ahead, I am persuaded that he would never have propounded his question to Jesus. Now he is forced to express his own opinion; and there is but one answer that he can give. It never pays to quibble.

37. Here we have the lawyer's reply: "He that shewed mercy on him." That sounds good. Go, and do thou likewise.—We would like to know what the lawyer did; but the record does not say. One thing is certain: He had a good chance to become a Christian, if he had only made use of it. His number is legion. Almost persuaded; but not quite, and lost forever.

PERSONALS.

Will J. Harney: "March is now open. No better month for a gracious soul-saving revival. I know it is mighty hard to slate March at this late date, but all I ask is a free will offering. Some brother take this fine date. Wire, phone, or write me, Wilmore, Ky. I have two open dates for camps."

W. E. Thomas reports good meeting in progress at Glasgow, Ky. Thirty-five conversions one day. Bro. E. C. Milby is leading the singing.

Prof. Blish R. Shaw, Los Angeles, Calif., General Delivery: "I have open dates now as Song Evangelist and Guitar player. Any one wishing my help may address me here."

Dr. and Mrs. Jere M. Glenn have just closed a gracious revival and evangelistic campaign at Jasper, Fla. The entire church life of the town was lifted to a higher plain of Christian life and service, and a large number converted and added to the church. Old citizens say it was the best meeting the town ever had.

TIMELY ADVICE.

If you are impatient, sit down quietly and talk with Job.

If you are just a little strong-headed, go and see Moses.

If you are getting weak-kneed, take a good look at Elijah.

If there is no song in your heart, listen to David.

If you are a policy man, read Daniel.

If you are getting sordid, spend a while with Isaiah.

If you feel chilly, get the beloved disciple to put his arms around you.

If your faith is below par, read Paul.

If you are getting lazy, watch James.

If you are losing sight of the future, climb up the stairs of Revelation and get a glimpse of the promised land.

"The Critical and Expository Bible Cyclopaedia," by A. R. Faussett.

Faussett's Bible Cyclopaedia is a sterling work of reference and one which every Bible student ought to possess. Among the constantly used helps to Bible study in my library there is none I appreciate more highly. It is more than a Bible-Dictionary (though it serves every purpose of a good Bible Dictionary also)—it is, as its name implies, a real cyclopaedia of accurate Biblical knowledge, on matters historical, geographical, archaeological, theological, giving fully and concisely all necessary information concerning Biblical names, places, persons, customs, books of the Bible, everything in fact the average Bible student (or even preachers and teachers) may desire and need. With it all it is very brief and simple, easy to handle, convenient and perspicuous. Its Bible chapter index refers the student to all the information covering points in any chapter of the Bible. In short, it is one book that exceeds all promises made in its preface. I gratefully recommend it to everyone as an exceedingly satisfactory, full, reliable help to Bible study.

CARES OF THIS LIFE.

Lowell B. Hicks.

Is there time to be a Christian
In this world of toil and strife
When it's hurry, hurry, hurry,
From early morn till late at night?
Is there time to seek God's blessing
On the labor of the day?
And when the night shadows deepen
Is there time enough to pray?

Is there time to help a comrade
Who has fallen by thy side?
Shall we leave him there to suffer
And we quickly by him glide?
Or, be the good Samaritan
Who would stop and care for him
And pour on oil and bind the wounds
Then carry him to the Inn?

Is there time to help the orphans
Far too young to earn their bread?
Why not be a father to them,
See their hungry mouths are fed?
Shall the widows toil and suffer,
When you could their burdens share?

Will you kindly stop and help them
'Ere they sink in deep despair?

For the sick and shut-in patients,
Is there naught that can be done
That will make their faith the stronger

That their battles will be won?
There's the poor, the aged, and outcast,
All, do heavy burdens, bear;
It would make their lives the brighter
If they knew that some one cared.

You've no time to read your Bible?
Is that what I hear you say,
That your life's so filled with labor
That you have no time to pray?
Ah, my brother, you are losing
Losing in the things above;
For your heart is on the earthly
And the gold is what you love.

Better stop, awhile, and listen,
Better take some time to pray,
That your footsteps may be guided
In the straight and narrow way.
For the Master soon is coming;
Don't you hear the clarion call
For the rally of his forces,
For His Children one and all?

BROTHER HARNEY REPORTS
WONDERFUL MEETINGS.

It is a real pleasure to tell our readers that the day of old-fashioned revivals is not a thing of history. The same God who answered thirty years ago is still upon the throne and will answer by a pungent, soul-stirring conviction when the truth is preached in the power of the Holy Spirit. Such conviction will lead to confession of all sin and wrong-doing. It is injurious to the cause of God to have any other kind of revival. It will lead to doubt and unbelief. Getting folks to come to the front seat during a short prayer, and then say, "all who take Jesus as their Savior to stand" is deceiving seekers who know nothing of the reality of saving grace.

Unless we confess and make wrongs right, so far as is possible, we cannot get God's forgiveness. One must confess his wrongs to God and promise never to be guilty of such sins again. Then you are on believing ground and the love of God will be shed abroad in your heart by the Holy Ghost, and you will love what you once hated, and hate what you once loved.

The revival at Crisfield, Md., was an old-fashioned meeting in which the power of God was manifested to save to the uttermost. Sinners came to the altar, tears of repentance were shed and souls were born again. Some quit work for a week that they might engage in the prayer services in the church. Many were saved and about eighty united with the church. We have never failed to use the old-fashioned mourner's bench in our revivals. We must go in for real salvation or not go in at all. Don't be deceived: there is only one kind of salvation—the old-time, know-so salvation. Paul knew it, and so did John, and you may have it if you will pay the price.

We have the month of March open, and will be glad to help any brother who desires a revival that will get sinners converted and believers into the experience of perfect love. Wire, or write me, Wilmore, Ky.

Will J. Harney.

DILLSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA.

The evangelistic services now being held in Dillsburg by the four churches under the direction of Dr. Goff, the evangelist, are meeting with untold success. The spirit of Christianity is now being felt in our community with more force than ever heretofore. The interest which is being manifested by the town and the surrounding community has no parallel. It has been a wonderful get-together meeting. The wonderful unity and the laying aside of all indifference on the part of the people has worked wonders for the uplift of mankind and the conversion of those who have not heretofore known the Christ.

Reports from the committees who have been visiting in the homes of the town and surrounding community show that a wonderful interest is being taken in the saving of those who have not heretofore confessed their Creator. It is hoped that the few remaining meetings which are to be held may bring forth greater evidence of the Christ than has ever been known.

Dr. Goff is a wonderful evangelist and under his direction much has been accomplished and we are still looking for even greater things in these last few hours of the campaign.—Dillsburg Weekly Bulletin.

DEL NORTE, COLORADO.

Before the largest crowd that has attended a religious service in Del Norte in forty years, the Methodist and Presbyterian churches received 87 persons into membership the morning of Sunday, Feb. 8, as the result of a union meeting of two weeks' duration conducted by Guy W. Green, layman of Kansas City, Mo. Most of those who came were prominent men and women of the community who confessed or reaffirmed their faith. Fifty other persons, mostly young people who made decision during the meeting, plan to enter the churches on Easter Sunday, 30 going into the Presbyterian Church and 20 into the Methodist Church. An interesting feature of the meetings was a 30-minute Bible recital by Mr. Green each evening preceding the regular service, when he gave from memory important parts of the Old Testament books. On the last Sunday morning of the meeting he taught a union Bible class numbering 200.

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. 1 Cor. 2:9.

The Days of His Flesh:

The Earthly Life of Our Lord and Saviour
Jesus Christ

By Rev. David Smith

Fifteen large editions in a comparatively short period, together with words of highest appreciation from the leading Bible scholars, ministers, and editors throughout the English-speaking world proclaim this great work as the one outstanding Life of Christ for every man today. It offers a biography of the Master, elaborate in detail and extending through fifty masterful chapters and more than 500 pages, tracing every phase of our Saviour's earthly career. The author rests his case solidly upon the evangelical records. He adduces abundant evidence to show the historicity of Jesus and to confute those theories which would make Him a mere myth arising out of a haze of reverence and superstition. He is equally sound on the deity of Jesus and he shows conclusively that the acceptance of Christ as the Lord of Heaven must be regarded as the corner-stone of the Church.

He begins with the Wondrous Birth and then proceeds step by step, to the Resurrection, discussing with particular vividness "the silent years" and the part they played in the Messianic consciousness of Jesus. Even after he has completed the body of his remarkable work, the author does not lay down his pen until eight appendices have been written, each throwing light upon some important aspect of the record of Jesus' life and ministry. These appendices include such interesting subjects as, "Objections to the Miraculous Conception," "St. John's Method of Reckoning Time," "The Chronology of Passion Week," etc.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1931

By Amos R. Wells. Fifty-seventh Annual Volume.

To the many who are familiar with "PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES," it would be sufficient to say that the standard of excellence which has characterized the work for more than half a century is fully maintained in the new volume.

The analysis and treatment of the lessons are clear and informing, carrying quotations from great Bible teachers. It is for teachers of all grades and contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help so compiled and tabulated that it can be effectively used. It has maps, pictures, and charts alone worth the price of the book.

This book is invaluable for the study of the Uniform Lessons. Price $2.00.

THE BEAUTY OF HOLINESS.

THE HOLY LAND AND THE BIBLE

By CUNNINGHAM GEIKIE
(In two volumes)

When one has referred to these volumes he feels that he has really visited the various places in the Holy Land. Dr. Geikie is so thoroughly familiar with almost every inch of the Holy Land that he adds local color to his description. By describing a custom here, or an incident there, he causes new light to break on many Bible passages.

At the back of volume two there are two very useful indexes; one listing the places, the other lists all texts referred to in the volumes.

In all there are more than eleven hundred pages. The volumes are attractively bound in green cloth.

The list price of Geikie's "Holy Land and the Bible" is $4.00.

You may have these two volumes absolutely FREE OF COST by selling FIVE of our Scripture Text Calendars.

A LIFE OF CHRIST

By DEAN F. W. FARRAR

This is another book that will prove especially useful to Christian Workers and Sunday School Teachers just at this time when the lessons are in the Gospel of Luke.

You will find it helpful to have in one volume, arranged in proper order, the events recorded by all four of the evangelists.

While the book is most interesting for regular reading, it is made valuable as a reference volume by means of a complete index of subjects treated.

This Life of Christ has always held its place among the finest books of its kind, and though many other lives of Our Lord have been written since this one, few have in any way surpassed it.

The list price of "The Life of Christ" by Farrar containing 744 pages is $3.00.

You may own a copy absolutely FREE OF CHARGE by selling only FOUR of our Scripture Text Calendars.

Interesting facts about each of the twelve pictures

REMEMBER THE HOLY SPIRIT.

By The Editor.

THE preacher, the church, the religious worker, the individual Christian and, in fact, the sinner, would do well to remember that we are living in the dispensation of the Holy Spirit.

It is generally understood among religious teachers that there was a dispensation of the Father, when Jehovah, in a peculiar and personal way, revealed himself to men; in a very broad sense, this dispensation of the Father was a preparation for the dispensation of the Son, for the coming, teaching and sacrificial offering of Christ upon the cross.

This dispensation of the Son was in a gracious sense, a preparation for the dispensation of the Holy Spirit. It appears that, from the very first of God's manifestations to men, and leading on through the centuries, everything was a preparation for a glorious consummation; all things pointed to Pentecost. The coming of the Holy Spirit was a grand climax in the history of God's compassionate dealings with the human race.

That the Holy Spirit is now, in a peculiar sense, a person in the world to administer all things in the church of God, should be constantly kept in mind. We learn from the teachings of Christ and the apostles that the relationship between the Holy Spirit and the children of God is the most intimate and sacred. Our Lord Jesus, in promising him, said to his disciples, "He is with you, but shall be in you."

The apostle says, "Know ye not that your bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost." This is a startling thought—that we are to be inhabited by the blessed Third Person of the Trinity. We are to keep in mind that the Holy Spirit is a person; that he can, and does, pray for us; that he can be resisted, grieved, sinned against; that he can depart from those he once inhabited and leave their house in empty desolation.

Those of us who preach the gospel should preach with the understanding that there is an invisible Person present who hears every word, knows our thoughts and understands our deepest, unuttered motives. Every conference that assembles, every association of Christian workers, every convention that would meet, to plan for the promotion of the church should remember that the Holy Spirit is an invisible Person, is present, and all such assemblies should be careful to seek and secure his leadership.

The meeting of the official boards of the various churches ought, first of all, to pray for his presence and direction, and then each individual member should be careful not to plan, to wish, or undertake to do anything that would conflict with the leadings and endorsement of the Holy Spirit. This should be true of all groups of women in their varied church work; in everything we should

NO HEAVEN WITHOUT SALVATION FROM SIN.

We must be saved from sin, if we would be saved in Heaven.

We must hunger and thirst after righteousness, if we would be filled with righteousness.

We must forsake all sinning, if we would find forgiveness for the sins we have committed.

We must surrender to God, and forsake all rebellion against God, if we would be reconciled to God and find peace with Him.

We must face the fact that Jesus Christ did not die upon the cross so that men might enter into Heaven in their sins; but he died upon the cross that men might be saved from sin, cleansed from all unrighteousness, filled with the Holy Ghost, and kept from sin, and the love of, or desire for, it. "He is able to save to the uttermost, all who come unto God by him."

We must be born again, if we would enter into the Kingdom of God, here and now. The new birth wrought in us by the Holy Spirit, is the only door into the kingdom of God, into that peace and fellowship with him. Jesus Christ has spoken on this subject of the new birth, and his word is final. He is absolute authority on the whole subject of salvation.

We must be holy if we would enter into the holy abode of God, angels and saints. Sin has wrought such havoc in this world that God has built a sinless world, and determined that no sin shall enter therein. He has given his Son to die upon the cross that, in him, we might find pardoning mercy, sanctifying power and keeping grace. The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. Come to Christ. He is able to save to the uttermost.

recognize that the Holy Spirit is God's appointed leader for all things concerning his kingdom in the world, and to get into conflict with him, and grieve him away, means failure, even when men flatter themselves that they are doing great things, and making successful progress.

The Holy Spirit empowers preachers and religious teachers to speak the truth with the peculiar emphasis which makes it the sword of the Spirit. He must convict for sin. He alone can regenerate. He can reveal to the inner eye of the soul its uncleanness, its deep, carnal tendencies. He, and he alone, can apply the precious blood of Christ which cleanses from all sin. He is the teacher who can bring to us wisdom from above. He, in the intricate and tangled paths of the world, can find for us, and lead us in the highway of holiness. He is the gracious Comforter who can bind our broken hearts, banish our fears and give us songs in the darkest night of our earthly pilgrimage. Let us never forget that we are living in the dispensation of the Holy Spirit, and in humility, consecration and faith, claim of him the fulfillment of all his blessed offices in us.

How is it that profession and possession are usually as far apart as the antipodes? But are we competent judges?

Monthly Sermon.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6:7, 8.

The correctness of the teaching of the apostle in the text will not be questioned. There is no farmer in all the land so ignorant as to suppose he could sow oats or rye and expect to reap wheat. In the agricultural world it is understood that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." The apostle is fortunate in his figure of speech. He is teaching us that in the moral and spiritual world we get results just as certainly as we do in the agricultural world.

A wicked, selfish, disobedient attitude toward God, and the teachings of his word, will inevitably bring a harvest of sorrow, disappointment and saddest of consequences. In his statement that "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption," the thought is that all actions that are of a carnal nature, bring defeat to the actors, a harvest of disease, failure and, in the end, spiritual ruin.

Observation and personal experience are a positive guarantee of the truthfulness of this inspired statement of the apostle. Who has not observed about them the results of wicked and godless conduct among their fellow-beings. How soon the harvest comes to the reckless sowers to the flesh, the gratification of mere animal appetites and passions. Multiplied millions of our fellow-beings who have started in life with vigorous health, and everything, apparently, favorable, to prosperity and happiness, but trampling the law and love of God beneath their feet, have not lived out half their days, but have been cut down in their youth suddenly, the harvest of their wicked deeds has ripened, and with broken hearts and blasted souls they have gathered in the agony of unutterable disappointment and ruin.

We may be sure that the statement in the text is absolutely true. The seeds of reckless and wicked sowing will spring up; they multiply rapidly; the harvest will ripen, and those who have sown to the wind, must reap the whirlwind. One of the startlingly dangerous things about sin is, its longevity. It keeps on living, moving, and sends its withering blasts on through the generations, destroying as it goes.

Man's influence does not cease with his

GOSPEL NOTES FROM THE TROPICS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I.

The other day in one of the churches here on the Isthmus of Panama I was speaking on the subject: "Does God answer prayer?" I was struck with a definition of prayer which a lad gave in one of Mr. Moody's meetings in Edinburgh. I think possibly the lad got the definition from the Westminster catechism. "Prayer is an offering up of our desires unto God for all things agreeable to his will, in the name of Christ with confession of our sins and thankful acknowledgment of his mercies." My reasons for preaching that God answers prayer were as follows:

(1) Bible tells us so. (2) Jesus says so. (3) Old Testament proves it. (4) Missions prove it. (5) Great movements prove it. (6) Individual experiences prove it. (7) Prayer brings us into direct partnership with God. (8) Prayer leads us to expect great things from God and to attempt great things for God.

II.

Last night's meeting at Pedro Miguel among the West Indians we witnessed again the old-time revival power, the church was full and a crowd was on the outside, and when the altar service began those on the outside pushed in at the entrance to see what was going on. The gospel has great attracting power—the songs of Zion, the prayers of the saints, the preaching of the old gospel—all have a power unequalled by anything human. We preached on Matt. 3:11 and used as the old-time Methodists used to say, a double-barrelled gun preaching to the sinners the baptism of repentance, and to the church members the Baptism with the Holy Ghost and with fire. Wife gave an exhortation after the sermon and the Spirit fell and soon the altar was filled with seeking souls, some getting right with God, others seeking the baptism of fire. Many, as they prayed, were under deep pressure of soul.

I think there is no sight more pleasing to God and the holy angels than that of souls struggling through to victory through prayer in Jesus' name. A certain writer says:

"How every crisis of the soul, seems to gather into itself the great history of the ages. As we reverently view, not without awe, that tremendous conflict, we seem to see the shades of undying saints gather around and they are mirrored in the crystal flood of tears. Augustine, Francis of Assisi, Bunyan, Daniel Rowlands, countries and centuries are melted in one tear of the inmost soul."

We need in these days more soul travail. It is sad to see preachers and evangelists preaching without any unction or fire, indicating that they have never labored in prayer or intercession. Dr. Kemp, in a recent article, says:

"Prior to the Welsh revival Evan Roberts had prayed all through thirteen years for the Spirit. For four years Seth Joshua had prayed that God would raise up some one from among the people. There were two men who believed their prayers were answered—the same day—September 29, 1904. At a little prayer meeting Evan Roberts felt he must pray, Elvet Lewis tells the story in 'With Christ among the Miners.' 'As one after another prayed he [Evan Roberts] kept asking the Spirit, 'Shall I pray now?' 'Wait a little,' he would reply. 'After several had prayed, I felt 'living force' entering my heart; it held my breath, my legs trembled violently, and after each prayer I kept asking, 'Shall I now?' While the 'living force' went on increasing, increasing—almost to bursting. At last, when some one had finished praying, with my heart quivering I would have burst had I not prayed.' . . . His repeated cry was, 'Bend me! bend me! bend us!' 'It was God commending his love' that bent me."

III.

The Roman Catholic Church mid all her corruptions, have had some saintly souls come up through it. Think of Francis of Assisi, Madame Guyon, Archbishop Fenelon and Father Faber, author of that hymn, "There's a Wideness in God's Mercy." Amid the deplorable heresies of the Protestant Church and pulpit on the great doctrines of the Inspiration of the Bible, Deity of Jesus, the Cross and the Atonement, Sin and Punishment, etc., etc., we behold with wonder how this ancient church has never departed a hair's breadth from its ancient faith on these great subjects.

The Roman Catholic Church is the only church that has taken a real radical stand on the atrocious dress question. Never in the history of the church perhaps has there been a more odious scandal than the way the women of the churches have yielded themselves to the obscene and disgraceful fashions of dress than in the past decade or more, and the Protestant pulpit has been almost silent about it (save in the smaller spiritual churches) and now the Pope of Rome and some of his Bishops have taken action. In a paper down here in Panama I read the following:

"World-wide crusades against paganism, immorality and immodest dress, under the dual patronage of St. Theresa of Lisieux and St. Paul of Tarsus, are to be undertaken in 1931."

"The Bishop of Bayeux and Lisieux, has organized the 'Confraternity of St. Theresa, Little Flower of Jesus.'"

"Immodest attire" will be particularly attacked, and it is defined as 'low, boyish, masculine allures.'

"Two reasons are given for including modern dress: First, because it is 'ugly and disgraceful' and second, because it provokes the decadence of modern woman, the loss of her immortal soul."

"Chapters of the fraternity will be established in every country, and members who are also priests must promise to use 'persuasion, reproaches, prayers and reprimands' to induce women to wear garments 'which respect modesty and are both the ornament and the defence of virtue.'"

"The priests must also refuse Communion to women improperly dressed."

"Catholic parents who adhere to the confraternity must see that their daughters are always properly clad."

From the Sunday School Times we clip the following on the dress question:

"No less a preacher than William Penn, the founder, adopted this style. Listen to him! He is talking about 'modern' dress of women, not in 1931 but along about 1682. 'But if I were asked whence came these follies of dress I would quickly answer from the Gentiles that know not God, an effeminate Sardanapalus, a comical Aristiphanes, a prodigal Charaxus, a luxurious Aristippus—from such women as the infamous Clytemnestra, the painted Jezebel, the lascivious Campaspe, the most immodest Posthumia, the costly Corinthian Lais, the impudent Flora, the wanton Egyptian Cleopatra, the most insatiable Messalina; persons whose memories have stunk through all ages and carry with them perpetual rot.'"

I have noticed in these Latin American countries that the Catholic girls attending the church schools are all modestly attired, nearly all of them having uniform dress neatly and becomingly attired, and then when one crosses over to where the American girls are the scenes are unspeakable, many high school girls not wearing apparel enough hardly for the bedroom. The indecency is frightful to behold. It is amusing to listen to the silly nonsense talked by some of the bishops and others in high places about the high ideals of the young people of this age. Such talk is rot and the age is rotten!

IV.

Talking about the skepticism and unbelief of this age and the infidelity prevailing among young people reminds me of that story Bishop Foss tells. The story is as follows:

"When I was a young pastor in New York City I had a call from a young art student, the son of a Canadian Methodist minister. It was not long before he brought it around in conversation that he did not believe the Bible. His father, a minister of God, his mother a Christian woman and the son did not believe the Bible! I was so surprised I asked him over again. 'You say you do not believe the Bible? If you were trained by a Christian father and mother you surely must have believed the Bible when a child; how then is it that you do not believe now? Certainly upon such an important subject you must have spent much time and study before rejecting the Bible? I suppose you have read it through two or three times at least?' 'No, I have never read it through.' 'Did you never read the New Testament through?' 'No.' 'How long since you read your last chapter?' 'O, about five or six weeks.' I confess I felt like saying to him what Dr. Lyman Beecher said to a man who was ranting about his skepticism: 'You are no skeptic; it takes brains to be a skeptic.' Here was a beardless youth of 19, who had never read the New Testament through in his life, pretending to deny the Bible of his father and mother! But I did not say anything sharp to him, but like the Master when a certain young man came to him and he looked on him and loved him, so as I looked upon this young man and loved him, and I determined to save him if I could. Looking at him I said gently, 'Pardon me, but may I ask if your Bible is not now in your trunk?' He answered that it was. 'And is it not away down in the bottom, under all your clothes?' He blushed and said 'Yes, it is at the bottom.' 'Pardon me one more question: When you left home to come to New York did not your mother put your Bible in your trunk with her own hands, right on top of everything so that it would be in full view the moment the lid was opened?' I saw his embarrassment and confusion, and as he did not reply at once I continued, 'now no one has told me anything about it; I never saw you or heard of you in my life until you introduced yourself a few minutes ago; and all I know of you is what I have gathered during our conversation.' He then acknowledged that my surmise had been correct. After chatting a few minutes he arose to go, and I said to him, 'Well, my young friend, you have taken an hour of a very busy man; I have given it to you cheerfully, however, and am willing to do for you what I can: may I make one request of you?' 'Why, certainly, I will do for you anything I can: What is it?' 'Before you retire tonight will you not take your Bible out of your trunk and read two or three chapters of the Gospel according to Luke, and do this every day until I see you?' At first he hesitated, but at last he promised, and went home.

"Three weeks from the next Sunday I baptized that young man into the church of God, the happiest of converts."

V.

Reading David Livingstone's life lately—Marvelous Man and Missionary—one of God's advance agents in the Dark Continent. He wrote once, "I will open a way to the interior or perish." One African chief came to him one day for the elixir of regeneration, he said: "I wish you would change my heart. Give me medicine to change it, for it is proud, proud and angry, angry always." Livingstone told him of the gospel method of salvation and the chief replied: "Nay, I wish to have it changed by medicine, to drink and have it changed at once, for it is always very proud and very uneasy, and continually angry with someone."

Livingstone wanted the missionary not to settle down but to move on. When near his end he wrote: "I would say to missionaries, Come on brethren, to the real heathen." Livingstone and his family lived so far from civilization in the depths of Africa that when he brought his family to Cape Town he said: "We were a queer looking lot. When we came to Cape Town clothes eleven years out of fashion." An old African who saw Livingstone come to Africa said of him: "He made a path through and you his followers have come. God's light bringers; and more come today." Kirk, who was with him in some of his travels, wrote: "The river gets no better, snags and shoals and tortuous windings, still there is no change in Livingstone's plans; he is still going on regardless of the return. His determination amounts to infatuation. . . . I can come to no other conclusion than that Dr. Livingstone is out of his mind." Later Kirk wrote: "Dr. Livingstone never thinks of getting back, all he cares for is accomplishing his object at any risk whatever." It was a good thing and a great thing that Livingstone went on, he would not be turned aside. True he died in the last adventure, but his was a glorious death and all England was stirred and the world was stirred. Well it is that Livingstone's body lies in Westminster Abbey, London. I have stood by it several times and read that wonderful inscription.

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

By Rev. A. D. Shockley.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A HAPPY MEETING.

N due time Ralph received a telegram announcing Jessie's acceptance of his invitation, and fixing an early date for her arrival.

Within a week thereafter she arrived, looking worn and pale. Ralph greeted her with a warm welcome, and hurried off to his hotel, as if anxious to have the work of rejuvenation begin at once.

Arriving on the early morning train she went at once to her room, and after a light breakfast, lay down to sleep and to rest during the forenoon.

Ralph at once communicated with Herbert Dalton, requesting that little Jessie—she had been named for her mother—might be brought to the hotel for a visit also. As the little one had become accustomed to being with "Unkie Raf," as she called him, she was content to let her father leave her with him.

Jessie slept until about two o'clock in the afternoon, and awoke greatly refreshed. Hearing the prattle of a childish voice in Ralph's sitting room, she supposed that some visitor to the hotel might have brought a little one, who had found her or his way into Ralph's room. She lay for some minutes enjoying the sense of restfulness which had come over her as she slept. But the chatter of the little one interested her strangely, and when she heard the childish voice say, "I see your Jessie Unkie Raf," she sprang up as one electrified.

In a moment she was in the room, staring at the child as one partially bereft of reason or speech.

"Who—who is this child, Ralph? Where did you find her? Oh, she must be my child! I have seen her in my dreams so often! Oh how much she looks like her father! But, I forgot, you have never seen him. Ralph, can't you speak? Is this my child?"

"It is your child, Jessie, and the child also of the man who deserted you before this child was born, and afterwards took it from your arms and hid it from you."

"But, oh Ralph, he was not alone to blame. I feel that if I had been more patient and less unreasonable he would not have done the cruel thing he did. I might have retained the love he gave me if I had been less selfish and exacting. I do not know where he is, or that he cares for me at all, but I freely forgive him all his wrong to myself and pray that in time I may be permitted to let him know how repentant I am, and how I have longed for his forgiveness and love."

"Well, Jessie, I am glad to be able to tell you that I have seen Herbert Dalton since you came this morning; that he brought little Jessie as a peace offering, and a pledge that the love he once bore you has resumed its sway; that he, like yourself, has turned from the evil past to a purer and better life and future. He has been attending meetings at a neighboring village and has announced his purpose, with God's help, to lead a good life. He is ready to confess his own sin and to forgive yours also."

"Oh Ralph! how good God has been to me. I have found a peace in his service that is so sweet, and now I feel that he will give me back my husband, clothed and in his right mind."

Then kneeling together, with the little one clasped to its mother's heart, the two gave thanks to God "for he is good, because his mercy endureth forever."

Leaving the child with Jessie, Ralph hastened to find Herbert Dalton—and he had not far to look for him—and sent him to his waiting wife. We will not lift the curtain so that a curious world may witness the reunion between husband and wife. God was present. His blessing will rest upon hearts so willing to bear all the blame, and so earnest in the desire to profit by life's painful experience. We leave them together until the hour of the evening service at Los Ranchos De Atrisco.

Neither could resist the desire to meet at the public altar to renew their allegiance to each other and to God.

As Mr. Ashman was unable to attend, Ralph conducted the services. As usual a full house greeted the speaker, and a deep feeling seemed to pervade the assembly. At Ralph's earnest request, Jessie sang "The Latch of His Father's Door." She sang with such sweetness and power that the audience was captivated and warmly applauded the singer.

"I Was Poor as the Poorest," was sung by the congregation, Jessie's voice, clear, sweet, and penetrating, leading and swaying the hearts of the singers.

The service closed with an inquiry meeting, in which scores of anxious souls were pointed to the "Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world." Herbert Dalton, for the first time in his life, gave testimony to the power of Christ to save from sin. Jessie also, in her winning, persuasive way, told the old, old story, so sweet to her and to all the heartsore and penitent ones, of God's great pity and his tender love.

Jessie wrote a long letter to her father, giving a full account of her journey and the recovery of her husband and child, and the happy experience into which her husband had just entered.

"Do you remember, dear father, the poor gentleman you were called to visit, in company with Mr. Paxton, on that night you were set upon by those ruffians? That gentleman was my husband, and sits by my side today as I write. He has found peace in Christ and rejoices today in the consciousness of sins forgiven and iniquities purged away."

"We are going to begin our married life from today, trusting in God that many happy years may yet remain to us."

"Another Jessie is given us to be a reminder of the past, and a pledge of a better life to come, here, as well as hereafter."

"We shall probably locate in this territory, ultimately, where my husband has valuable property. But first we will come to Glenview, and Herbert will meet you all, and try to let the world know that he has found his manhood and dedicated himself to the service of Christ."

"Already we are planning to undertake a work in Albuquerque similar to that I have undertaken in Glenview. I know you will meet my husband kindly, because he serves your Master and his."

"We shall remain here for perhaps ten days that Herbert may arrange his business so that he can be absent a couple of months. We shall go this afternoon to look at some residence property in Albuquerque which is for sale. If we decide that it is suitable, and the title perfect, Herbert will buy it at once, and give directions for furnishing it against our return from Glenview."

"With sincerest love, Your daughter,
"JESSIE DALTON."

This letter was a complete surprise to Deacon Upright and the family, containing as it did the first information in regard to the discovery of Jessie's husband and child.

Human nature rebelled against receiving the man who had so cruelly wronged the child of his heart; yet Deacon Upright had long ago partaken of the Christ spirit and learned to be forgiving and tender. Yes, he would meet Herbert Dalton as one alive from the dead—one who had lost all semblance of his former self in his resurrection to the new life.

Had not Christ forgiven Deacon Upright? How then could he refuse forgiveness to one who was sincerely repentant and earnestly striving to atone for the past?

As for Mrs. Upright, it required no self-persuasion to bring her to the point of receiving Herbert Dalton as her own son. Her mind had been so sweetly blended with the mind of Christ, that the new tie would give greater joy, as the Master himself declares, "there is joy over one sinner that repenteth."

Before they returned together to Glenview, Ralph had confided to Jessie his hope that he should one day be able to persuade Bessie Queerman to become his life partner and fellow laborer in the Master's vineyard. Jessie rejoiced to hear this, for now she saw her way clear to leave the Home for the Friendless in competent hands, Bessie having assured her while on a visit to Glenview mentioned in a previous chapter of her desire to do service for the Master in that line of work. She hoped that Ralph, on his graduation from the seminary, which he proposed to enter at once on the completion of his college course, might find the way open to the pastorate of the Mission, which had grown out of her humble effort for the redemption for her fallen sisters in Glenview.

However, that time was not yet, as at least five years must intervene before Ralph's graduation, and he sometimes thought of a two-years study at the University of Berlin, after completing his theologic studies in American schools.

At present interest to Jessie centers in Albuquerque, where she is to make her permanent home, and where she hopes to do a work for the lost ones that God will approve.

The home which has been bought, and is in course of renovation and furnishing for the Daltons, is a gem of its class. Not so large as to seem like one of the feudal castles of Scotland, it yet has an air of staunchness and stability that inspires a feeling of security against foes from without, yet gives a sense of homeness and comfort.

Under the impulse given to the meetings by Jessie's singing the work increased in interest and power from day to day. Mr. Ashman having returned in splendid condition, physically, entered heartily into the work, and by his wise leadership, contributed largely to its success.

The net result, so far as Congregationalism was concerned, was the addition of about half a score of persons on confession of faith and strengthening of the hands of the brethren. But there were other churches that reaped larger harvests of members from the sowing of the Word. Neither Ralph Upright nor Mr. Ashman regretted the labor expended, even though the larger part of the converts found church homes elsewhere. They realized that the work is one, and "the Lord of Harvest" is Christ himself, who will reward the faithful laborers in a way he sees is best.

From Los Ranchos De Atrisco, the evangelistic services were transferred to Albuquerque proper, and were continued for several weeks. So great was the interest here, and so helpful Jessie's singing, it was thought best that both she and Ralph should postpone their departure for an indefinite period.

A missionary of the M. E. Church, who had been a co-laborer with Mr. Ashman, joined heartily in the meetings and being eloquent and very devout was a great help.

The influence of the meeting was felt throughout the city, and was very largely attended, especially by the business men and the better element in the city.

Sometimes a spirit of irreverence and disorder would be manifested to the annoyance

SANCTIFICATION AND SUFFERING.

Rev. Joseph H. Smith.

HE Apostle's pen had just guided us through God's Hall of Fame, and pointed out to us some that "subdued kingdoms;" "stopped the mouths of lions;" "quenched the violence of fire," and "turned to flight the armies of the aliens."

Some too, that: "out of weakness were made strong;" and "others that were tortured not accepting deliverance" . . . "had trial of cruel mockery and scourgings. . . . yea of bonds and imprisonments, they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, slain with the sword . . . destitute, afflicted, tormented." With these as examples before us; and with a great cloud of witnesses looking for the outcome of a similar warfare and a like faith in ourselves, we are exhorted to run with patience the race that is set before us. Both the heroic examples of the past and the interested onlookers of the present are engaged to incite us to success. The fact is all history and the interest of two worlds converges in the faith outcome of the present dispensation. And as those of old "obtained good report" so that they are thus memorialized in heaven and earth, it is possible for us to achieve such a distinction by faith as will record us on the honorary roll of them who shall have heard him say: "Well done!"

The injunction to "run with patience" has a sound of paradox, that is meant to arrest our attention to the hindrances, hold-backs, discouragements and even defiances that are sure to beset us on the way. And to enjoin a perseverance, a persistence, a push and at the same time, a patience that will withstand and resist and surmount all of these; as they before us had mastered fire and lions and dungeon and sword and all the powers of an inimical world.

To aid and further this Paul submits three considerations with respect to our tests and trials:—

1. The sufferings of Christ.
2. The Limitations of ourselves.
3. Their spiritual significance and benefit.

"Looking unto Jesus" here has particular reference to his sufferings. These were physical, mental and moral.

"He endured the Cross" even to that deepest of all death pains as he cried: "I thirst" and soon, then gave up the ghost.

"He despised the shame" of having had their ignominy attached to his birth and of disgrace of a felon's death.

"He endured the contradiction of sinners against himself," with their controversies in synagogue and temple, their mockery in Pilate's hall and their buffoonery and clamour for his death in the mob.

Added to all this was the deep agony of his soul when he cried: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" And we are bidden to "Look unto him," and to consider all this and the glory that was to follow lest we be weary and faint in our minds." Thus would the Apostle Paul as a sort of Brigadier General, stimulate the morale of us "soldiers of the cross."

2. Next, "The Limitations of our own Sufferings." "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood striving against sin." Others have suffered literal martyrdom, ye are yet alive. Some property may have gone; look at what you have left. You may have missed some promotion and lost some prestige; see what peace you still have. Some friends have forsaken; but a good wife, or a dear mother or a devoted child is still by your side. Maybe a foot is gone, but a pair of hands yet remain. Health has been lost, but you are still alive and with the Holy Ghost to help your infirmities. Can you not think of some others, quite as good and true as you yourself that are much worse off than you yet are? Looking at our own trials too much or too long blinds us to others' woes. Talking much of what we suffer, dries up our sympathies for the sorrows of our brethren. Broadcasting our tribulations advertises our enemy, and causes paralysis of the knees and weakening of the backbone—our own and some of the rest. Remember, "Ye have not yet resisted unto. . . ."

And, thirdly we are to be assured of the spiritual significance and benefit of these our trials, tests and temptations. Nothing comes to us but by the permissive will of God. Satan had to get a fresh license for his each succeeding assault on Job. "God is still on the throne." Soon as Jesus was baptized and the Holy Ghost as a dove came upon him, he was "led of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil." His own holiness was proven in that siege; and we were taught how to wield the sword of the Spirit against the assaults of the foe. To us these are tribulations. From our foe, they are temptations. And from our Father they are chastenings. And chastenings, mark you, not punishings that are Education by Discipline. One of the most difficult sayings in the Scripture, perhaps, for some of us to understand, is where speaking of Christ, it says: "Though he were a Son yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." (Heb. 5:8). Many holy men of God have said, like the Psalmist of old, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted that I might learn thy statutes." Paul himself comes away from a protracted season of importunate prayer, exulting more than over healing from his thorn in the flesh, as he exclaims, "I shall glory in my infirmities that the power of Christ may rest upon me."

We see here, first, that the chastening rod is evidence of our sonship and proof of our Father's love. "If ye be without chastisement . . . then are ye not sons." (v. 8). Again, "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." (v. 7).

Second, that these chastenings enrich us spiritually. It is not that "we do not feel them," or that "there is no such thing as pain or loss, or sorrow." No! "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous but grievous, nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness." And this we desire and prize above all it may cost, of pain, or grief or loss. Our own sanctification has been completed, as we have "laid aside every weight, and the sin, which doth so easily beset us." (v. 1). But God's holiness is infinite and exhaustless. There are no boundaries to its expanse of light, no bottom to its fathomless ocean of love, no limit to its possible goodness and blessing for the sons of men; and we are ceaseless partakers of increasing measures of this light and love and beneficence of the Holiness of God, as our own sufferings acquaint us more fully with the nature and meaning of the sufferings of Christ, and give us more strength and skill in withstanding Satan and a wicked world; and at the same time deepens our knowledge of, and sympathy with, the needs of our fellowmen.

To be freed of our own sinful selfishness by the Spirit's sanctification of us, and then to be made endless partakers of the holy nature of God, is well worth all these matriculation fees of suffering in the School of Christ.

E. STANLEY JONES' LETTER

AT HOME.

IT feels good to be able to write the words at the top, "At home," for I have just arrived home after long, long trips. I have had only about ten days at home this year so it seems good to be here with Eunice and Mrs. Jones for Christmas. But after Christmas day I am off again. And thus it goes. Here we have no continuing city but we seek one to come.

The urge to meet the demands of the soul of India are ever upon one. And how great are those demands! When I wrote you last I said that I had not really tackled places where the civil disobedience movement had a strong grip. Up to that time I had been on the edges. Since then however I have been in the thick of it. And the going has been good.

The first place I visited for a series was Cawnpore and here hundreds had gone to jail. The national flag was flying in the garden of the public hall where I had my meetings. But the meetings were well-attended and the interest splendid. The head British official was the chairman the last night and he said that it was a real pleasure for him to be able to co-operate with students in this way for the most of his time was taken up with clashes with them. He stayed for the aftermeeting in which Europeans and Indians forgot their antagonisms and thought only of their spiritual needs and sought God together. At the Round Table Conference we heard new notes—new to India, for some spoke of the utter rejection of religion. I have found more scepticism this year than in the previous twenty years. It is a good thing for it will make people slough off a lot of old dead superstitions. One member of the Round Table in answering our invitation, said: "I should like to come but I am about to become a guest of His Majesty's jail and if you are interested in reforming criminals you might count me a subject." He was arrested that day for his nationalistic activities. And this was his fourth sentence! There is real stuff in men who can joke about undergoing suffering for cause. Another of the men whom we invited went to jail that day.

At the students camp near Delhi there was an undertone of unrest among the students for the nationalist movement had struck the Christian students too. They put up the national flag on their school building and when some of the loyalists wanted to tear it down some of them slept up on the roof for fourteen nights to protect it! We wondered how these students would respond to the message for personal decision when they were so taken up with politics. But the last day when the decisions were asked for the first one to step out was the leading nationalist and one by one these several hundred students came and stood behind me as a sign of their decision. When the giving of the invitation was over the whole of the students body was behind me and I had to turn around to address them. They had made it unanimous! It was one of the greatest meetings I had ever been in. It showed us that students could be nationalists and be responsive to Christ too.

Moradabad has always been a difficult place in which to get Non-Christian audiences, but nevertheless there was a better response than in other years in spite of the fact that the Congress movement had been suppressed. The Mohammedan element is strong here and they are usually less responsive than the Hindus. The Moslem Chairman of the Legislative Assembly, the supreme law-making body in India, was chairman of our meeting and felt that he must uphold Islam and did so in his chairman's remarks at the close. But strange to say the Moslem students were the most responsive here.

When we went to Meerut we were at the very nerve center of the Non-co-operation movement. One of the leaders of the preparation Committee for our meetings took a special trip to explain to me the difficulties and said that many had said that the meetings should not be attempted. Meerut is the place where the famous Communist trial has been going on for over a year and where the nationalists have held meetings every night since April with an attendance of from five thousand to fifty thousand. They have been indoctrinating them at night and have made them work during the day. The Headmaster of the Government High School gave one of the boys who persisted in yelling, "Mahatma Gandhi ki jai"—Hail to Mahatma Gandhi, a caning and then the fun began. They picketted the school and took the coffin of the Headmaster out in procession to bury it! And this Headmaster was the central man for arranging our meetings! It seemed an impossible situation and yet God does work. Every night the hall was crowded and people standing about the doors. One night we had a Hindu lady who was one of the leading nationalists as chairman of the meeting and at the close in the most beautiful way she said: "I cannot command it, but I suggest that we do not have questions tonight but that we go quietly home to think and to pray over what the speaker has said to us." They applauded this and thus they went home. One night at this place we had a wonderful evening when we had dinner together, Christians and Hindus and Mohammedans, Europeans and Indians. It was the first time some of the Europeans had sat on the floor and had eaten with their fingers off plantain leaves. But it did them good. The next night one of the leading Hindus asked us to have dinner at his house and when we sat down on our mats he paused and said to me, "Won't you say grace as you did last night." It was all so beautiful and so gracious. Then we sat for hours talking about the Master. And our hearts burned within us.

Muffaffarnagar is nearby and a smaller place, but the meetings here were most interesting. The Sanatan Dharmists are the orthodox section of the Hindus and yet they had the meetings in their High School hall and the Headmaster of the school made all the arrangements. This was most interesting for them to be willing to do this. The last night the head Government official, an Englishman, came in from camp to preside and the meeting was a surprise to him. He did not believe such a meeting possible. His wife, who had been at one time in the Suffragette movement in England, and a different type of officials' wife, was my most enthusiastic hearer.

Here I left my colleague, Mr. Sury, a Christian lawyer who had been with me for several months doing personal work, and I started for Assam. I had never been in Assam before so it was virgin soil. My first meetings were in Sylhet with the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists in charge of the arrangements. Here the meetings were tense with excitement. We could start before the scheduled time for the crowd was eager and waiting, standing around doors and windows. At this place two High School buildings had been burned down when an order came from the Government that parents should sign a statement pledging their sons to take no part in the national movement. At the question time they forced me to face the issue of the attitude of Christianity toward the national movement. I did it before British officials and the leading nationalists and the heaving students. When I put our position before them and brought everything into the open they applauded the frankness with which I faced things with them. But it was a tense hour. Seldom have I felt the presence of Christ more than in that meeting. He was there! About a hundred signed up for Bible classes. A leading Hindu invited in the Hindus, and a Mohammedan did the same for the Mohammedans, on successive days at a tea party to have me talk with them. Here we faced living issues with them.

It is a pity to have to pass by Silchar and Jorhat, with a word but my space is exhausted. In each place there was real interest and response. In the last place the theater was crowded and the crowd most eager. But I must stop. I send my Christian love to you all. How grateful I am for the help some of you have been giving. I have assumed a great deal this coming year believing that you will respond to the inner voice that may prompt you to help us. All I ask is that you listen if that Inner Voice gives you the urge to send us help.

Thanking you again and with my prayers,

Yours in glad bonds,

E. STANLEY JONES.

AN INTERESTING ARTICLE.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

WE are always glad to share the good things that come under our observation with our HERALD readers. A few days ago we came across a most excellent article on the Bible, which was taken from The Commercial Appeal, Memphis, Tenn. Governor Patterson, as our readers know, was a man who knew from personal experience, the love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost. His influence for high standards of living and moral uprightness was felt far and near, and he did not hesitate to speak out on the moral questions of the day. The following wonderful article on the Bible will indicate the true character of the man, and will therefore, be appreciated by our readers.

THE BIBLE.

"The other night in Memphis, a thief broke in a house, stole what clothing he could find, and wound up by taking a Bible, placing it in the middle of the floor and then setting it on fire where the flames consumed it.

"The owner of the sacred Book lamented its destruction a great deal more than the loss of his other property, while the comment of the police department, which investigated the case, was that the wilful burning of the Bible constituted the most sacrilegious act ever brought to its attention.

"When I read of this occurrence, the first thought suggesting itself was that the thief might have been reading some letters published in this paper (The Commercial Appeal) criticising the Bible and denying its worth, and under their influence he thought he might be doing the owner a kindness to destroy it. The next thought was that while all people who deny the Bible are not thieves or even bad men, there never was a thief or an evil-minded man who ever had any genuine respect for it, and the large majority of them have never given it a thought. Then the fact that the owner deeply lamented his loss, and the police department denounced the act as a sacrilege, proved that the advancing waves of skepticism and infidelity have not yet covered the land; that at least some are left who prize and reverence the Bible. If we should examine carefully we would discover that this number is a great deal larger than is sometimes supposed. The thought, however, which overshadowed all others was what would be the result if instead of burning one Bible, all the Bibles in the world were gathered in one great pile and a torch applied destroying them all, and from that time on this Book should never again be published, and pass completely out of the lives of the people? Would the world then be richer or poorer? Would we have a fuller, freer and higher civilization, or would it become disorganized, unequal to its task, and finally perish?

"These are not idle questions. They are profoundly serious, and touch all the shoals and depths of human thought and action. In my opinion, the true answers to the questions propounded are that the annihilation of the Bible and what it teaches, would mean anarchy in our social system, and that it would not be possible with the aid of science and philosophy to construct any other code of morality or rules of conduct to take the place of the teachings of the Old and New Testaments. That whatever we did construct, if it had any value, would at least derive its usefulness and vigor from the remembered truths of the Bible. That to preserve even the semblance of order and civilization we would be compelled to receive our inspiration from the very Book we had destroyed.

"The Bible is its own best witness, and bears within itself the testimony of its intrinsic worth and power. Those who assail it offer nothing in its stead. Their feeble attempts to discredit it by selecting passages here and there which are difficult to reconcile seem to delight their intellectual vanity, but after all, there is no point to their little and sometimes clever flings of ridicule.

"Doubtless even these fault-finders in their better moments would agree that in the great body of the Book are rules, laws, admonitions and prohibitions laid down for human guidance and instruction which are so sound and safe and reasonable that no sort of criticism can detract from them. They stand in such sheer and adamant strength as to be impervious to every weapon that quibblers may employ.

"After the critics have exercised their wits over the occupants of Noah's ark, wondering how they survived the flood, and in thinking out ways how they could improve the work of Deity, had they the making and ordering of the universe, they might tell us what objection they have to the Ten Commandments, and what they would propose in case they were obliterated.

"What have they in mind that can equal the beauty, the moral power, the justice, the consummate perfection of these mandates given for the help of man in his earthly struggles? Who is it that can consciously violate any one of them, and not be weaker? Who is it that lives true to them who is not stronger and better? The Bible inculcates every human virtue. There is nothing we most admire that it does not approve and recommend. It teaches the value of wisdom and upholds justice. It speaks of mercy and charity and blesses those who practice them.

"The Bible values life, liberty and property as things to be protected and enjoyed. It opposes avarice and greed and oppression in all their forms. It teaches honor and fidelity in every relation of life. There is not one precept or a line in it that countenances vice and crime, but everywhere, and at all times, it sustains the laws and calls for honorable conduct. It commands children to honor and obey their parents; it sanctions marriage and protects the home. It cares for the poor and distressed. It honors womanhood and glorifies the good wife and mother. Within the lids of the Bible are found light and instruction for men in their single capacities, and light and instruction for governments in their collective undertakings. The only ideal commonwealth could be founded upon the authority of Biblical rules and injunctions.

"These would constitute a compact with justice and virtue, which, if carried out, would usher in a state of personal and social happiness and strength, such as the world has never enjoyed. Murder, arson, rape, robbery, perjury, and every other mortal sin would vanish from the earth if the teachings of the Bible were followed.

"With all this purity, this exaltation and sublime wisdom, how trivial and inconsequential does it seem when some critic plying his favorite trade asks an explanation of how the whale could have swallowed Jonah. I am sure that I don't know, and I am not particularly concerned, whether the whale swallowed Jonah, or Jonah the whale, but I would prefer to believe what so good a book as the Bible says about it, than to accept the contrary view of people who have no more personal knowledge of the subject than I have.

"There are many things we do not understand, and for which we can make no explanation. The commonest things of life are full of mysteries, and life itself is a mystery. We have no explanation of the mystery of reproduction, we have none for the sun, the moon and the stars, the earth and the seas. We cannot explain the grass and the flowers by any human formulas of reason. If we were guided only by our limited knowledge and experiences, one living in a tropical country would deny that mountains of ice existed, and an inhabitant of the Arctic region would not believe there was a land that was always warm and where vegetation grew in luxuriant profusion.

"A few years ago even the most intelligent would have doubted the possibility of men flying through the air, or that the sounds of the human voice could have been transported over the oceans. The Bible gives God the Creator as the only explanation of the mysteries of life and death, of things terrestrial and celestial. To this monument of truth and wisdom, this ancient temple of virtue and knowledge and majesty, we must turn for illumination within, find a solvent for our doubts and fears, and the promise of immortal life. Better to burn our cities than our Bibles. We can rebuild cities, and restore them for human habitation, but with the Bible derided and given over to consuming flames, there is nothing that can supply the void."

If you are "full of goodness," how can you be so mean to your children?

Lord I cannot let thee go
Till a blessing thou bestow;
Do not turn away thy face,
Mine's an urgent, pressing case.

A PILLAR IN THE CHURCH.

of the serious minded, and the discomfort of the clergymen. At such times, Jessie's solos would still the tempest and produce quiet. At such times, also, it seemed that Jessie was lifted out of herself, and sang as one under Divine guidance.

It must not be supposed that Herbert Dalton was an uninterested spectator while these stirring scenes were being enacted. Far from it! In his youth he had been conspicuous for his oratory, and had even carried off the laurels in a state oratorical contest. Now with a heart fired with a zeal for Christ, and lips which had been touched as with a live coal from the altar, he stood up daily and persuaded men to "flee the wrath to come."

The reader need not be told with what rapture Jessie listened to that voice, which had once been raised in foulest abuse of herself, pleading with men to come to Jesus.

During the time this meeting was in progress, the regular session of the New Mexico Congregational association convened. The meeting was therefore laid over for two evenings, after which they were resumed with increased interest, some of the pastors of the territory remaining for a short time to assist in the work, and to secure for themselves a fuller baptism of the Spirit for their labor in their own parishes.

At this Association Ralph Upright was formally licensed to preach the gospel, and commended to the churches as an accredited minister of the Congregational faith and polity.

At this session also a hearty endorsement of the plans of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dalton, to found a home for the friendless was unanimously voted. This action was entirely unsolicited by the Daltons, in fact, rather against their wishes in the matter, as they thought it too much like "sounding a trumpet before them." But, inasmuch as the action of the Association was taken at a time when the attendance of outsiders was very small, and the minutes of the Association would not be accessible to the public at large, the matter was allowed to stand as left by the Association.

But now the time having come for Ralph to return to his studies, restored to perfect health, we leave the interests of the meeting to the joint leadership of Mr. Ashman and Dr. Leonard of the M. E. Church, and accompany our friends, Ralph, Dalton, Jessie and her daughter on their journey to Glenview.

My Refuge.

I have a precious Savior
Who sought and saved my soul;
He has lifted all sin's burdens,
And has cleansed and made me whole.
And so there's shouts of victory,
Rising from my heart today;
For his blessed Holy Spirit
Guides and helps me all the way.

I was far away from Jesus
And sin ruled my heart and soul;
Till I came to him repenting,
And he washed and made me whole.
Now in pleasant paths he leads me
And my way is always bright,
For he guides my footsteps upward
And protects me by his might.

With his loving arms around me,
I am kept by power divine;
And no evil thing can harm me,
While his wondrous grace is mine.
So, I'm marching on in victory
And each battle fought and won,
Helps me win a place in Heaven
At the feet of God's dear Son.

CAN WE EXPECT A REVIVAL?

HERE was once a man who believed a revival was needed. He stood high in the court of the greatest empire of his day, Persia. He was a Hebrew, and had learned that the walls of God's city Jerusalem were broken down, the gates burned with fire, and the Jews who had returned from Babylonian captivity were in great affliction and reproach. He believed in God, and he loved his people. The story of what followed is told in the book of Nehemiah. Nehemiah, cupbearer to King Artaxerxes, was the man who dared to hope for a revival. Nothing could have seemed less likely just then. But it came, in the face of deadness, discouragement, and attacks of the most determined and desperate sort.

If there was to be a spiritual revival of God's people Israel, there must be a revival of wall-building also, that Jerusalem might be honorable instead of a public dishonor in the land. Nehemiah was both spiritual and practical—neither of these can really exist without the other. After he had secured the royal authority for his work in Jerusalem, and systematic plans for rebuilding the wall of the Holy City had begun, an enemy made an attack upon the movement. Sanballat, an influential Samaritan, prompted perhaps by

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dries do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

The wets urge the repeal of National Prohibition because enforcement costs $12,000,000 per year. New York City, with one-twentieth the population spends over $47,000,000 annually for police, or more than 80 times as much per capita. Should all law in New York City be repealed too?

political motives, ridiculed Nehemiah and his fellow-workers. "What do these feeble Jews?" he exclaimed. "Will they sacrifice? Will they make an end in a day? Will they revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burned?" Another enemy allied with Sanballat predicted with sarcasm: "Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall."

But Nehemiah's work went straight forward; the walls of Jerusalem were rebuilt; and one of the great revivals of history followed as God's people turned to the reading of his Word and the doing of his will.

Here is a lesson in revival that God's people need to take to heart today, when revival is sorely needed again. Revivals usually come to pass in the face of intense opposition, and in times of great darkness and declension. No intelligent observer can doubt that we are in such times today. Determined attacks are being made on the Word of God and the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the true Christian faith. Immorality is on every hand. Open atheism flourishes. Materialism grips the hearts of men. All these conditions make a call to revival.

Nehemiah's first move toward revival was significant. When he learned of the dire distress of the people of Jerusalem, he said: "I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of Heaven."

His very prayer was the sure pathway to revival. It began with worship of God "that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him and observe his commandments;" and at once it went on to confession of sin. Then Nehemiah boldly reminded God of the divine promise to forgive and to restore if confession was made. God heard and honored that prayer.

Revival has never come in any other way; but it has come, over and over again in times of darkness and need, in just that way. There is a passage of Scripture that may well be used in prayer for revival today: "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him."

The enemy is coming in like a flood today, not only in Soviet Russia, not only in war-torn China, but also in every favored land where Christianity is a glorious reality—and where also the working of the powers of evil is a dread reality.

Not only are there plenty of dark signs that a revival is needed; there are also many bright signs of its coming. For almost a score of years many individuals and groups of Christian people have been praying persistently for revival. The Great Commission Prayer League of Chicago has been used of God to stir up people to prevailing prayer. At its world-wide call many Watch-Night meetings of prayer for revival were held as the old year died and the new year was born. Those who are in touch with the prayer life of the Church are continually receiving news of intense, persistent prayer in Europe, in Asia, in Canada and the United States, in South America, in Africa, that God's people are pleading for a Heaven-born, Heaven-sent revival.

In parts of the world where, humanly speaking, there is reason for greatest discouragement, there are also brightest signs of coming revival. Russia is one of these parts. In spite of—or shall we say because of?—the devilish and official activity against all true religious life, and indeed against God himself and his only Son, heart-hungry people are turning to God in their tragic need and are finding salvation through Christ as Saviour. Revivals have broken out in various parts of China since—and because of—the political turmoil and tragedy of that land. The Jews everywhere are showing a readiness to consider the Messianic claims of Christ such as they have never manifested since they cried out to Pilate, "Crucify Him."

The distribution of the life-giving Word of God is going on in a way known to no other literature. China was sown with a million Testaments not long ago, and now the Million Testaments Campaign for Latin-American Lands is under way. The various Bible societies in a recent twelve months circulated 36,500,000 copies of the Scriptures, which means an average of about 70 per minute night and day. The Canadian Sunday School Mission, of Winnipeg, is doing a revival work by its campaign for the children, as is the Canadian Christian Crusade in meeting the attacks of atheism.

Yes, we can expect a revival. But our expectation must be from God; only he can send it.—The Globe, Toronto, Canada.

The New Year ought to see a new gear in the church machine.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

IN CINCINNATI'S SLUMS.

While husband is touring the globe, I am caring for our daughter Esther. She is in God's Bible School of Cincinnati, Ohio. To employ my odd moments, I am teaching in this school, doing mission work, holding revival services, taking a university course, preaching once a week outside the city, broadcasting, and writing a book.

Our mission work is intensely interesting. Each Saturday night the school furnishes me with a truck load of Spirit-filled boys and girls, who sing all the way to the slum district, where we conduct street meetings when the weather is good, and services in Pool Halls or Missions when it is cold. We generally give an altar call wherever we go, and ordinarily in each street meeting there will be four or five men and women seeking the Lord, kneeling at chairs or an altar bench which we carry in the truck. When in Billiard Halls, we use pool tables for altars.

One Saturday night our truck load went singing down the road toward home. It was late and we were weary. Presently the driver stopped for a minute to make sure he was on the right street, when a beautiful young lady ran up and begged us to pray for her, saying she had come from a good family, but had gone into sin. "My mother does not know where I am," she continued, "and would feel terrible if she did know."

I did not know what to do. I felt that we should pray for her at once, while she was in the notion, for we would likely never see her again. But where could we go for prayer? If we knelt in the street, her captor would be after her. I looked to God for guidance and instantly it came. I told the boys to get out and hold a street meeting, and the girls, to pray with the young lady in the truck. This plan worked well. Our penitent was so happy to find those who loved her; and after promising God that she would leave her life of sin, she put her arms around my neck and sobbed aloud, "O mother! My mother!"

One night we found an old colored man leaning against a lamp post, drunk. I asked him into a nearby restaurant. With the permission of the proprietor, our crowd sang and prayed with the drunk fellow, and he claimed to find peace. He said, "My wife is sick—very sick—at home all alone!"

"Well then, why did you get drunk and leave her when she needs you so much?" I inquired.

"Well missus, it are dis way: you see I felt so very bad to have her sick, I jes went off an' got drunk sos I'd forgit it. I see a Christian, yas'm I is, but I jis slipped a little." He evidently believed "once in grace, always in grace."

Perhaps to cheer me in my loneliness, since Evangeline has died and husband and son have gone abroad, God has given me a special favor this year. I have been invited to England for revival work. So Esther and her mother think of leaving the United States in the near future. Please pray for us.

Julia A. Shelhamer.

REVIVAL REPORTS.

Rev. E. DeWitt Johnston, Conf. Evangelist of the West Wisconsin Conf. M. E. Church, has just closed a most refreshing revival at the Edgar M. E. Church, Mattson Dist., Illinois Conference. The oldest members say that no such meeting has been held there for forty years. Forty-seven have been received into membership in the church and others are yet to come. Conviction was deep and each seeker, whether for pardon or purity, was faithfully dealt with.

During the day, Dr. Johnston assisted the pastor, Rev. John Osborne, in calling upon and praying with lost sinners, and also preached every evening. Many seasons of mighty, prevailing prayer were held. One man was saved whose wife had prayed for him for thirty-five years. He was seventy-two. Another man over seventy of the intellectual type, who had trouble with the Virgin Birth of our Lord, got "straightened out." The Holy Ghost illuminated his soul, and he could see plainly. One young man repented, prayed and was saved while the workers talked with him as they stood under an apple tree in the front yard. It proved to be a Nathaniel fig tree to his soul.

Before the revival many said, "The old days are past forever." But God is the same today as on Pentecost. 2 Chron. 7:14. "If my people which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray and seek my face, and turn from their wicked way, then will I hear from heaven and forgive their sin and heal their land."

REPORT OF R. P. MARSHALL AND WIFE.

Since our last report we have terminated our connection with WDOA at Chattanooga, and have returned to our work in the evangelistic field. Our first engagement was at Benson Springs, Fla., with Rev. R. T. Caldwell. This is our fourth meeting together in the last four years and each has been a source of blessing to the evangelists, at least. The little town of Benson Springs is composed chiefly of the children from Florida Methodist Orphanage, of which there are 136. The church here, a new stucco building, ministers to the children and to the small community. The orphanage is under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Shannon, and a group of consecrated workers. It is not only a means of caring for homeless children, but enters heartily into the job of trying to turn out men and women for the Master's work. I do not know of a more genuinely Christian institution. We have been entertained as a guest of the Home and have come in close contact with the children and workers.

The meeting has been full of interest from the start. Of course there was no lack of attendance, but instead of sullen obedience to discipline in coming to church, one could see real interest manifested in the faces of the children. At one time, twenty-five of the older children were at the altar and professed faith in Jesus. We have not kept account of the total number that have accepted Christ during the services.

It is a great privilege to be again in the evangelistic field, preaching and singing the gospel. We have been especially impressed to preach the fact that Jesus can really save from sin, and make new creatures out of those who accept him. The New Birth is in need of great emphasis now, when so many are simply trying to change their lives without divine power.

From this meeting we go to Lake Monroe, a small town near here, where we have a small struggling church. We hope to be able to reach the young people and through them the older ones, and if possible help to plant a real progressive church in the neighborhood which is really unserved by any church except for a few scattered services. We ask the prayers for this meeting.

We have open dates in March, and throughout the spring, as we have so recently come back to the work. Address us at Lewisburg, Ky

FROM EVANGELIST W. L. SHELL.

It has been quite awhile since I appeared on your page, but during the time I am trying to be faithful and ready to serve where God may lead. I appreciate the weekly visit of The Herald and scan its pages for reports from the brethren and especially from those with whom I have labored in previous years. I heartily endorse what is said by the brethren about revivals. May the Lord bless you all and especially Dr. Morrison since he has stood for so long and so unwaveringly by the truth and doctrine of the church. I have served the church as pastor and evangelist, and say without fear of contradiction that the best work the churches did was when we had the best revivals, and we do not mean to say our best revivals were when we had the largest number of additions, for we never conducted our work on that basis. Our best revivals were determined by the greatest number of sinners regenerated and the greatest number of Christians sanctified. Mr. Wesley said in speaking of holiness or preaching the doctrine of entire sanctification, that he observed where this doctrine was preached the whole work of God prospered and this has been my observation. It seemed to fall to my lot in the appointments to get run-down churches that were doing practically nothing, and where former pastors were not able to produce much, but we went on the job and preached sanctification as a doctrine of the church and an experience to be obtained and enjoyed by the believing child of God, and while it caused some stir and criticism yet it produced results and we had revivals and put the church to working and souls were born into the Kingdom and many of the members consecrated to God and were filled with the Holy Ghost and they paid money they had not paid before.

The ministry and the church need revivals, and God has men who live in the Spirit and are so wholly given to him that they are willing to die for the truth and salvation of men, and it is this type of ministry that must be employed to produce the revival that is so badly needed. It seems that most of the Spirit-filled and fire-baptized evangelists and pastors are being crowded out of the pulpits and there is no place for them any more. Many of the Methodist evangelists have had to leave their beloved church and seek place in some of the lesser churches in the hope that a door might be opened to them, to find these churches already running over with preachers, and they too, looking for an open door.

Brethren, throw your doors open to the evangelists and let them help you bring about a revival. They are God's men the same as you and they have no more eccentricities than probably you have, and they won't hurt the church. I have not had a call for a meeting in over a year and my soul is on fire for the work, and it seems to please God to give me souls wherever I work. Yes, brother pastor, I would love to have a chance once again to help you preach and pray down a revival in your church. The church is the proper place to have the revival, in fact, it is very hard to have a revival now aside from the church, as the people have become so churchy they don't give much credence to anything only through the church, and if the movement is not backed by some church organization the people won't even come unless it's a party to attract attention.

Brethren, I have written at some length but these are vital points for our consideration. Let's have revivals and more of them, and snatch this country from the hands of the devil and save the gamblers and mongers and bootleggers and turn their lives into channels of usefulness and righteousness. I have been informed that in the town where we had one of the greatest revivals under my pastorate that I ever witnessed and the church and community were on fire for God under the anointing of the Holy Ghost the bootleggers have become so brazen that they have even shot into the parsonage because the pastor had condemned them. Wicked men will wax worse and worse if we don't have a universal revival of Godliness among the people. The church must get on fire and before it can burn the preacher must burn with holy fire. Will we do it? Won't the church throw open its doors to the men who want in, and whose hearts are bleeding for a lost world, and let them have a chance and a hand in rescuing the lost and bring order out of chaos. God bless the faithful pastors, they need sympathy and help, but we must have a revival or else we are doomed.

I wish to say brethren, I have not backslid a bit and I love God with all my heart, and still preach a gospel that saves men from sin and will do you good if you will give me a chance. May the Lord bless you all and make us all to be fishers and catchers of men.

MISSIONARY REPORT FROM TWO ASBURY COLLEGE GRADUATES.

I want to express again my feeling of appreciation for the benefits I derive from the weekly visits of The Pentecostal Herald. How often my soul has been blessed and my faith encouraged as I have read the articles from the pen of fearless contenders for the faith who write for The Herald. Feeling too, that the readers of The Herald are among God's saints in his militant church, I should like to take this privilege of soliciting your prayers and reporting the victories God has given to us in past days.

Before entering in upon the third quarter's labors I made a resolution to attempt to visit all our out-village work during the quarter. To keep this resolution I have had to travel through some of the most dense forests, over some of the roughest roads, and on some of the narrowest paths I have ever seen. I have had to cross dangerous tsetse fly infested swamps on narrow corduroy pathways or at times when the water was too deep, on the back of a native. I have had to cross deep, swift streams on narrow logs or in a little native canoe. I have had to travel on paths torn up by the huge foot of the elephant or traversed by the lion or crossed by the leopard or chattering monkey. In one case at least I had to spend the week end in a native hut with palm branches for side walls, a white sheet for the door, and grass for the roof. I repeat, to visit all the 33 out-villages in which we have an evangelist stationed, I have had to travel nearly 400 kilometers on my bicycle, 183 on a motorcycle, 535 in an auto, as well as an additional number by foot over paths impassable by vehicle of any kind.

In summarizing the statistics for the quarter I found that I have had the privilege of preaching personally in every village in which we have a native evangelist, as well as in several in which we have none. I have preached 62 times, and exhorted many other additional times at the close of a message by native assistant. We have placed 118 on probationary roll, baptized 41 and refused to baptize many others who showed no evidence of a change of heart. We served communion to 379, and refused to serve communion to many other baptized church members who paid no tithe during the quarter, (a requirement for membership in the native church). I have had the happy privilege of seeing over 1094 natives come forward in old-time Methodist fashion to the mourner's bench or remain after the service at the place of prayer. I am quite conscious that some of this number remained out of curiosity, like Zaccheus of old. Others remained because it was a bit popular to do so. But, thank God, I believe there was a large additional crowd who came forward out of a real longing to know God in true personal experience. As a witness to the sincerity of some I have in my possession a huge pile of witch doctor charms, and trinkets, with a native evaluation of hundreds of francs. Many of these charms were forsaken in these altar scenes. Among the many seekers after God were head village Kapitas or Head men, Native chiefs, and one witch doctor. All of the chiefs who came forward stumbled at the same stone, namely polygamy. These wives constitute the wealth of these men and to forsake that means everything. However, after hours of prayer with some of them I can but believe that there is hope of them forsaking their idolatrous practices. Many of these services lasted upwards of three and four hours. Some of them were hours of real pentecostal blessing, and reminded me of some hours of praying around the altars of Asbury College.

As I have traveled the rounds of this big circuit, I have heard more calls and pleas for an evangelist than can be numbered on the fingers of both hands. Besides this, I have an additional list on file in my study. Some of these pleas come from large villages, others from smaller, but they are representative of the needs and longings of these people. Some of these pleas for an evangelist have been made time after time and year after year. Will the readers of The Herald pray with us for an old-fashioned, Holy Ghost revival to strike this land until we shall see countless thousands of these immortal souls born into the kingdom of God by a supernatural birth and then filled with the Holy Ghost? We do believe in the power of prevailing prayer, and we are counting on you to be partakers with us through prayer in the salvation of the heathen.

death, but it abides to bless or curse, as the case may be. Some of the great infidels whose lives were destructive and a blight to all those with whom they came in contact, left behind them writings and influences which have been like a contagious disease destroying faith, corrupting morals, blighting souls and, like a river, ever growing by the creeks and smaller streams which pour their contents into its increasing volume, sweep on to the sea. So the sowing of these unbelievers pours a flood of blasting corruption and torment into the black ocean of eternity, they must reap the horrible harvest of their sowing.

The apostle calls our attention to the gracious fact that "they that sow to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." There is no way by which we can calculate or estimate the influence of a life consecrated to God. We might mention the influence of Moses, of Saint Paul, Martin Luther, John Wesley, Charles Finney, or Dwight L. Moody. These were master men in the wide field of devoted service. Their spiritual hands were large; their religious arms were long; they grasped mighty handfuls of saving truth and sowed broadcast spiritual seed which have sprung up beyond all seas and over the wide oceans, and beyond the mountains and the deserts and brought forth most gracious spiritual results. What a harvest awaits these servants of God whose lives, messages, and written testimony have gone down through the centuries and blessed the succeeding generations of the human family. But there are comparatively few of such men as I have mentioned.

For your encouragement and mine, let us think for a moment of the lesser lights; of the humble, devout, every day Christian. We should not forget the poor slave mother of Moses who had faith in God. Little could she dream of the influence that her son would wield, but she could trust in God and preserve her babe from the destruction of a pagan monarch. She did her part well. When she built the little ark and placed an older child to watch, she was sowing to the Spirit. What a harvest!

The roots out of which John Wesley developed so wonderful and fruitful a life were planted deep in the prayers, instructions, and careful teaching of a devoted mother. Little did Mrs. Wesley dream that in her humble manse, pinched with poverty, she had about her knee the greatest preacher and the greatest hymn writer ever produced in the British Empire; perhaps, two of the largest spiritual forces in modern times; some would say, in the entire Christian era.

We must not confine our thinking to these larger results. In the economy of the kingdom of God on earth there are many devoted souls whose names will never appear in the public prints, either while they live, or after they shall have passed to their reward, but their names are written in the Lamb's book of life, which is far better. Consecrated men and women, obscure, perhaps, one-talented people, and yet, they are wielding a gracious influence; they are sowing the seeds of a consecrated life and a good testimony. They are salt and light in their homes and neighborhood, and they are making a far larger contribution to the moral life and spiritual atmosphere of the times in which they live than they, or any one else, suppose. But like the countless springs bursting from granite lips on hillsides and at the base of many mountains, they meander onward into the great Mississippi of the moral and spiritual life of the nation. Without these springs the rivers could not exist; without these countless multitudes of humble souls the streams of moral and spiritual life of the nation would dry up, and the earth would become one vast desert of blighted ruin. So the most obscure of us should take courage and cheerfully make our small contribution to those gracious influences that furnish the spiritual water courses that keep the mills of God grinding the grist of salvation.

I am burdened with the thought that I wish to express, as best I may, to this effect, that this sowing may not only be by the individual, but the community, the county, city, state and nation; in fact, the whole world may become, to a certain extent, united in producing certain influences, a moral and spiritual atmosphere, or an atmosphere contrary to good morals, and to spiritual life, which may be like the sowing of the seeds of corruption that will produce a harvest so vast that the united nations of earth may be compelled to march into fields of blood and fire to gather in the harvest of ruin and death.

It occurs to me that present conditions in our own nation are suggestive of serious-mindedness and a bit of thoughtful investigation into the matter of the kind of moral and spiritual seed being sown broadcast in the minds and hearts of our people. In the present distress we must guard against undue pessimism, or rash and unbalanced thinking and statements; and yet, guard ourselves as we may, to be truthful, we must admit that the moral wheatfield of this nation is well sown with a variety of the most dangerous tares that an enemy could possibly select.

Take, for instance, our literature. We are living in a period of history when the minds of the people are hungry and active. There is not a day in the year in which, week days and Sabbath, there is not an average of approximately three hundred new books placed on the market. I am not now thinking of the books shipped in from other countries, and I am not taking into consideration the school books that amount to tens of millions.

I need not fear successful contradiction when I say that the text-books used in our schools, from the primary department to the highest selected courses in our universities, are not making any large contribution to our moral and spiritual life. A very large per cent of them are of a character to undermine religious faith, and to produce in those who study them, a state of mind unfriendly to the best moral standards, and antagonistic to the spirit and teachings of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Many of the schools for higher education are not only great centers of skepticism, but of atheism, and of course, as one of the fruits of unbelief in God and in his word, moral and spiritual paralysis. This fact ought to put men and women thinking. Is it safe to rear a generation of those who are soon to become citizens and guide the destinies of the nation, that from their very childhood, to graduation, in the universities, they should have courses of study that make practically no contribution to a good moral conscience and the development of a spiritual sensitiveness and proper attitude toward right and wrong. It is safe to say that many of the text-books in the schools of higher learning are of a character to destroy all saving faith in the gospel of Christ, not only so, but to destroy any lingering reverence for God and salutary fear with reference to responsibility for conduct here and in after life.

It is quite probable that our system of education, with its text-books and skeptical professors will, in time, produce a class of citizens who will have so little reverence for God, so little of what used to be regarded as conscience, so little of respect for law, or regard for virtue, that our civilization may collapse under its own weight of corruption. Those who will may protest against a statement of this character, but there is serious truth in it that should awaken deep concern and lead to careful investigation. It is a sad fact, however, that the mental attitude of our time is not friendly to investigations of subjects so serious and vital.

Turning now to the tremendous output of popular literature: Who can name a novel of the last decade which has had hundreds of thousands of readers, that has offered to the people food for thought, which is at all likely to make a contribution to lifting up of higher moral standards, or purifying the sex atmosphere, of producing reverence for womanhood, confidence in men, and in fact, making a real contribution to the moral and spiritual life of the nation. On the contrary, a very large percent, may we not say, nine-tenths, of the modern books of fiction, have had a tendency to lower moral standards and weaken the foundations upon which spiritual life is built.

I must call attention to the fact that much of the religious literature for several decades past, has been of a character to raise questions in the mind of the reader with reverence to the very foundation upon which the Christian structure has been erected, which has brought life and immortality, hope and happiness, to the human race, and struggling up through the centuries, has produced the best civilization in the history of the world. The simple fact is, we have many modern writers and preachers in Protestantism who, for the past three or four decades, have been constantly "blasting at the Rock of Ages." Strange to say, a host of highly educated, and well paid preachers seem determined to destroy the faith of the people in the Bible as an inspired book of truth, and in Jesus Christ as God manifested in the flesh, with power to save men from sin.

No one will question the fact that those nations of people who have no Bible, and no gospel offering them Christ as a Saviour, have no civilization worth the name. Whatever progress has come to them, has been a transfusion of new life from outside nations who have the Bible and the blessings which the gospel of Christ has brought to them.

Let us keep the text in mind, remembering that we have said that a nation may sow as well as an individual, and that it is just as true of the nation as the individual, that the sowing of sin, that the seeds of unbelief will produce diseases that are certain to break out in moral and spiritual contagion that will bring lawlessness, the destruction of virtue, dishonesty, untrustworthiness among men, the vast riches of the few, the pinching poverty of the many, and robbery and defaulting in high places that, in time, will wreck the commercial world, stagnate business, and stimulate a dangerous spirit among men that will mean mobs and riot.

We have had in this nation in the past two decades quite a number of bank robberies. Men have masked themselves, gone into banks with drawn revolvers and made the men behind the counters hand over, all told, several hundred thousand dollars; frequently, most heartless murders have been committed in these daylight robberies, but they have amounted to mere pocket change when compared with the robberies that have been carried on by the men behind the counters. Think, for a moment, of the millions and billions of money that a trusting people have committed to sporting robbers who have had charge of the time locks, and have turned them to their own advantage with just as dishonest and filthy fingers as ever took the money out of the rugged cap of a blind beggar; and the startling fact of the matter is, these larger thieves have been able to so corrupt the machinery of justice that they have gone unwhipped, to live in the luxury of their robberies. Of course, it is well known that a number of dishonest bankers are in federal prisons, but a small number compared with the losses of the countless millions that has been committed to them by a trusting public.

It is quite impossible to estimate the value of confidence; of faith in men among men; of belief in the integrity of one's fellows, of the comfort and inspiration one gets by believing in the honesty and brotherliness of his fellowmen in the business, social, and moral world. My friends, there has been such a high tide of extravagance, of waste, of adventure in dishonest speculation that men are losing confidence in each other. You can't have a safe and progressive civilization without the salt, the permeating, cleansing, influence of confidence. The business of the world has to be run, largely, on faith in men, on the trustworthiness that men can have in each other in the transaction of business. Destroy this confidence and the whole fabric of commerce falls into wreck and ruin like ancient Babylon, and leaves the people in confusion and business stagnation, unemployment, bread lines, the exhaustion of charity, and the torch of the mob.

We cannot stop our thinking on these serious phases of our national sowing of the seeds to the mere flesh, animalism, without a word on the subject of widespread extravagance, an apparent insatiate desire, not so much for the simple comforts of life, but the luxuries of life; widespread idleness, the expenditure of money without the securing of something substantial that you can look at and possess as a result of your labor and expenditure. A large percent of our population are living on wheels. They have almost no home life. Instead of the quiet fireside for meditation, prayer, and the cultivation of the family spirit, it is from forty to fifty miles an hour, going from place to place without any objective of permanent advantage, building of character, or deepening of spiritual life. In the business world, the demon of greed is on a rampage. Men and women are in mad pursuit of wealth and, having obtained it, they rush into a vulgar display of the same.

One of the strangest things in the modern life of this country is immodesty in dress. It is a reckless sowing of a vulgar display of the female body which is already producing a startling harvest of impurity that smells to heaven with defilement and corruption of the basest and most ruinous results.

This subject of immodest dress, with all it involves, in suggestions that lead to a line of most dangerous thought, that kindles a flame of passion that leads to grossest sin, is one of the most stubborn problems that presents itself to the serious Christian mind. It is like the Mississippi River in a tremendous rise after heavy rains and melting snow that break the dykes, sweep away every obstacle that is built up to resist its encroachments and overwhelms the land with a gulf of destruction. One is appalled at the resentment and insolence that meets, the preacher who would lift a warning voice, even among people from whom he has a right to expect sympathy and support. There seems to be a strange obsession, a kind of mental paralysis, a sort of diseased psychology that anything that is fashionable is proper; that it is better to be in harmony and keeping with a wicked fashion than it is to be devoutly godly, uncommon and unfashionable, as it is to be godly. The people of this nation, generally, are disposed to "go with the multitude to do evil," rather than to break away to holy loneliness.

I cannot turn away from the thought of the widespread evil sown without calling your attention to the magazine literature of our times. It is impossible for me to enumerate the number of monthly magazines published in this country, and constantly pouring through the minds of the people streams of literature that certainly cannot produce refinement of thinking, the uplifting of high moral standards, or the injection of any sort of genuine piety. I would not be understood to say that there are not some very talented magazine writers, and many excellent articles on various subjects published in some of the magazines, but our magazine literature, as a whole, is sowing to the flesh; much of it has a very dangerous sex atmosphere that has a tendency to break down the barriers, and open the floodgates of the most hurtful and degrading lusts of which human beings are capable.

Take the daily press. What a large percent of the daily papers read by millions that, instead of nurturing and building stalwart moral character, and a spirit of reverence for law, for womanhood, manhood, and God, is a salacious food that results in a widespread mental ptomaine poison; that gradually undermines the best things of the individual life, and in the aggregate, the social, moral and spiritual life of the nation.

I might extend these remarks to the widespread "revolt of youth" about which we have heard so much from bombastic, shallow thinkers and loud speakers. What is it that youth has revolted against? There are a great many excellent young people in the world, but there is such a thing as the "revolt of youth." A vast army of young people have revolted against constructive study, parental government, school discipline, the word of God, living within their means, decency, and the general proprieties of life.

I could say much more on a subject that spreads abroad and covers the land like a dark cloud of unbelief and wickedness that threatens, by and by, a harvest of the thunder of cannon and a reign of blood. One thing certain, this nation is sowing to the wind; there will come a whirlwind harvest. If the ministry, very generally, were standing against the evils of the times, with fearless and earnest protest, if they were moving among the people with the drawn sword of the Spirit, fearlessly smiting these evils, there might be hope; but are they doing it! Let those who hear, and those who read, answer this question and be sure you answer it truthfully.

The real "vision splendid" cannot be framed and hung upon the wall.

Annual Report of the General Evangelists.

In the annual reports of the General Evangelists of the M. E. Church, South, we see that they held 306 revivals, in which there were 21,551 conversions, 8,508 additions to the M. E. Church, South, 8,016 additions to churches of other denominations.

If all of the evangelists had been kept busy all of the time we might easily have had 50,000 conversions and 30,000 additions to the M. E. Church, South. Many excellent men have been idle much of the time, while numbers of our evangelists have held meetings in other churches.

The modernistic element in our church is opposed to evangelists. They are, and will be, responsible, not only for the loss of tens of thousands of members to the church, and hundreds of thousands of dollars, but they will meet a responsibility for the loss of souls at the judgment bar of God.

Take those 8,508 new members; divide them up into seventeen churches of five hundred members each, pastor and instruct them properly for twenty-five years, and who can figure what they will produce in souls, members, money, moral, intellectual and spiritual influence. I have known one little revival to produce results beyond human calculation—a bishop, great missionaries, Christian homes, and a stream of money for the church through the years.

A revival was held where a turnpike crossed a railroad track, where there were three families living near each other, in a place called Wilmore, Ky., forty-five years ago, sixty people converted and united with the Southern Methodist Church, attracts attention, Asbury College planted, grows. It attracts, it reaches out, the town grows, thousands of souls are converted, hundreds, yes, thousands of souls are sanctified, missionaries go out to the ends of the earth, more than a thousand preachers go out with the gospel, evangelists sweep over the nation and millions on millions of people hear the gospel preached by men who went out from Wilmore.

Suppose the pastor at Wilmore had been a modernist who did not believe in revivals! I would not have been invited there to hold a revival, nor would have been an Asbury College at that place. Think it over. These unbelieving, dictatorial preachers ought not to be in the Methodist Church.

Well, there will come a time! H. C. M.

Not Easter Eggs, But the Bible.

Many children look upon Easter as a time to get Easter eggs, but we want to suggest that along with the eggs you place in their hands a beautiful little child's Bible. You will be surprised how much they will cherish it, read it, and pride themselves on being the owner of a Bible.

We have a beautiful little edition, just the right size, bound in leather with the overlapping edges, stamped in gold on the back and backbone, red under the gold edges, and with about 20 most excellent Bible helps suitable for children. The size, 3½x5½x1 in. thick, and weighs 11 ozs.

Instead of having a dozen different kinds of child's Bibles, we make a specialty of this one, and by having them made up in very large quantities we are enabled to sell a $2.50 value for $1.50, postpaid.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THREE BRAVE YOUNG MEN.

Mrs. Geneva Mendenhall.

Nebuchadnezzar, the great king of Babylon, had built a huge image, which he covered with gold and set up on the plain, outside the city, so it could be seen from many miles away. Then the king called all the people; the princes and nobles, and the wise men together on the great plain to worship the image of gold.

When the final moment came, the trumpets blew, the drums beat, and all the people fell on their faces before the great golden image. All, that is, except Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, three young Jews who had been brought to Babylon as captives, and who had risen to high places in the king's service.

Some of the nobles who were jealous of these brave young Jews went to the king saying, "There are three proud young Hebrews who do not serve your gods, nor worship the golden image." The king was very angry to think there was anyone who dared to disobey his command. He had the three young men brought before him and gruffly told them that he would give them one more chance to bow down before the image and that unless they did they should be thrown into the mighty furnace of fire to die. But the three young men were not afraid, and answered the king that they would serve the Lord God, and him only, and that they were not afraid of the fiery furnace. Then the king was furious, indeed, and called the soldiers to seize the three young Hebrews at once and cast them into the great furnace. And the heat of the flames were so fierce that the very soldiers fell down at the mouth of the furnace, burned to death.

When King Nebuchadnezzar stood back and looked into the great mouth of the furnace, Lo, he saw the three Hebrew children walking about in the flames, and with them a fourth, who looked as though he were a son of the gods. As soon as the fire died down enough, the king called into the furnace for the young men to come out to him.

The Hebrews came before the king and all his court still very much alive and without even the smell of smoke upon their clothing. And when the king saw that they were safe, he burst into loud praise of their God who had delivered them from the fiery furnace. And the king made new laws for their protection and raised them to still higher offices in the land of Babylon.

Questions.

1. Why were the Hebrews in the land of Babylon?
2. Who walked with them in the fire of the furnace?
3. By what name were the people of Judah called?

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Louisiana girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twelve years old and five feet, two inches in height. I have auburn hair and blue eyes. I am in the seventh grade. My teacher is Miss Hart. I belong to the M. E. Church, South. Our pastor is Rev. T. F. King. My middle name starts with M and ends with T. Can you guess it?

Mary M. Mack.
Lake Arthur, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let two girls join your happy band of boys and girls? We were converted on the same night, October 25, 1930. Then we received the Holy Ghost as in Acts 2:4. Since we have accepted Christ as our personal Savior it has been blessed to walk and talk with Jesus. Oh, if you have not accepted him as your Savior won't you come to him today? He loves you. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life! (John 3:16). "In my father's house are many mansions. If it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." Jesus is coming soon and I want to be ready. It behooves us to be ready for in such an hour as we think not the Son of man cometh. Oh, look around you, for the fields are white and the laborers are few. Dear dear cousins, I hope we have said some words that will help you to decide to turn over a new leaf and become a new creature in Christ. We want all of you Christians to pray for us that we may ever hold out true to the end.

Ruth Elms and Ruby Holbrook.
Rt. 2, Comanche, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your band of boys and girls? I am eleven years old. I have brown hair and brown eyes. This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading The Herald, especially page ten. I am a Christian. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Kate Robinson. I am in the seventh grade at school. I have one little sister. Lorna M. Baldwin, I guess your middle name to be Myrtle. Write to me if I am correct.

Zelma Mae Demaree.
Vanarsdell, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am very much interested in the Boys and Girls' Page of The Pentecostal Herald, also the salvation of souls. I have a little poem which I composed as it fell upon my heart, and I wish you would print it for me on the Boys and Girls' Page.

What shall we say then?
Shall we continue in sin,
That grace may abound?
Just look to him,

Who is ever ready and waiting,
To give you life anew.
Come up close to his side
And listen to his blessed promises
Of the place he has gone.

To prepare for the faithful,
Where the streets are pure gold,
And nothing shall harm or destroy.
In that pearly white city,

Oh! why not open your hearts' door today?
Oh! why do you turn him away?
He is waiting to give you
The love, peace and happiness
That Jesus alone can give.

Will you reject him,
Or will you accept him today?
Mrs. C. E. Maynard.
Dendron, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a girl of Greenville, Ky., join your happy band of cousins? I am eleven years old. I have just been reading the cousins' letters on page ten and enjoy them very much. I live on a farm two miles from Greenville. I stay with my sister and go to school. We go to the Methodist Church and Sunday school. I go to school every day and have not missed a day this term. I am in the sixth grade and have four teachers. I like them very much. I take music and like it very well. I wish every reader of The Herald a very happy and prosperous New Year.

Barbara C. Waters.
Rt. 2, Greenville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I was twelve Jan. 9. I have two sisters and two brothers. I am the oldest child. Daddy takes The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. I go to the Methodist Church. My Daddy is a local preacher. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. I want to be a good girl and do something for Jesus.

Pauline Mahoney.
Rt. 4, Limestone, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I hope I may gain admittance into your happy circle? I notice you sometimes publish letters from matrons on page ten. I want to compliment the boys and girls who write to the page. It is very inspiring to the older people to note how many of them are Christians, and brave ones too, not ashamed to publish it to the world. Sylvia Enlow, of Rineyville, Ky., please write me and give your parents' full address. My mother's maiden name was Enlow, and my grandfather was from Hardin county, Ky. I wish to get in touch with them. Very likely we are related. Husband and I are all alone, but we live among good books and papers, and spend the long winter evenings reading The Pentecostal Herald, The Full Gospel Advocate, and the Bible. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." So you see we should be very diligent in searching the Scriptures. I love the Lord with all my heart because he is my Saviour, healer and keeper; not a dead Christ, but the risen Lord and coming King. Praise his Name.

Mrs. Ada Mathis.
Rt. 1, Box 76, Gloster, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me join in with you and your boys and girls? I am a little girl nine years old. My birthday is Aug. 29. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with S and ends with E. It has three letters in it. I will write to them. As this is my first letter I would be proud to see it in print. I hope Mr. W. B. is out camping when this arrives. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the boys and girls.

Margie S. Hall.
Box 361, Galax, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please make room for my letter in your columns? I am twenty-one years old and a member of the Church of God. I think the papers, such as The Herald are of an unknown value and help for the Christians and also sinners. I wish that all would read them more instead of so many trashy, unfit story books. I would like to receive letters from anyone who reads this and would care to write.

Otalene Haislip.
1311 Debow St., Old Hickory, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It seems ages since I have had a chat with all you dear folk. So I truly hope to be admitted to page ten again. I have been reading some of the letters of the Cousins' Page, and some of them I really do enjoy. It's wonderful to know that we are a child of God. I wonder how many of the cousins on the morning of Jan. 1st, 1931 asked the Lord to lead them through the New Year and to help them to live better each day. We should begin each day with a prayer. Here is a short poem.

"Prayer makes the darkest clouds withdraw,
Prayer climbs the ladder Jacob saw,
Gives exercise to faith and love,
Brings every blessing from above.
Restraining prayer we cease to fight,
Prayer makes the Christian's armor bright.

And Satan trembles when he sees
The weakest saint upon his knees."

Just a few Bible questions then I will be going. For what purpose did Christ come into the world? Did Christ know beforehand the treatment he was to receive? Unto what are we exalted to watch? Aunt Bettie, I hope to see this in print. This is my second letter to The Herald.

A Kentucky Reader.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of little folks? I live on the farm with my grandparents. They are good to me. Daddy brings me fruit and candy every day to eat. Mother and father are dead. I was only three years old when they died. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. I would like to hear from some of the orphan children. My aunt is writing this letter for me. I will be six years old March 19.

Sarah Lee Mouldin.
Rt. 10, Lewisburg, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you slip over and let a Missouri girl join your happy band? This is my first letter to page ten. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with A and ends with Y? Have I a twin? E. Ione Butz, I guess your first name to be Ella. Am I right? I like to go to Sunday school. I was eleven years old, Oct. 10, 1930. I would like to see this letter in print.

Ruth A. Bulkley.
200 W. 4th, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It does not seem long since I wrote to you, although I believe it is two years or more. I am married and this is going on our fifth year of happy married bliss. We have one little boy almost two and one-half years. His name is James David. He is a smart little boy; he can count up to fifteen, draw pictures, (very good for his age), and pick out of printed words A's and B's. Sunday when he went to church he listened to the sermon and when he got home he said the preacher said "Praise the Lord," as only a baby could say it. Hubby and I are very happy. We go to church and enjoy God's wonderful plan of salvation. It is the only way to live after all, isn't it, Aunt Bettie? I used to write to a girl name Mattie Ryan. If she chances to read this will she kindly do me a very big favor and write to me?

Mrs. Goldie Witmer.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I have space in your Boys and Girls' Page for a few lines? I have written once before and I thank Aunt Bettie for printing my letter. I received a few letters from the cousins but I hope to receive more this time. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with E. It has three letters in it. I am fourteen years old. I have brown hair, blue eyes and dark complexion. I am a freshman at the Lake Arthur High School. I would like to hear from boys and girls all over the states.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again from Alabama. Thank you for printing my other letter. I have been receiving a lot of letters. If Kathleen Ward sees this letter please write to me, as I haven't heard from you in a long time. I am not saved but hope to be. I go to prayer meeting and sometimes go to the Methodist Sunday School. I have two brothers and one little sister. My mother and father are living. I have a lot to be thankful for. I have food and clothing. Many people haven't that. I will close. Let the letters and snapshots fly to

"WHY I BELIEVE" by Rev. T. Lewis D. Gouvens, D.D., Pastor, Second Presbyterian Church, Louisville, Ky. Published by the Cokesbury Press, Nashville, Tenn. $1.00.

This volume of 147 pages is made up of six sermons. . . . Why I Believe in God, Why I Believe in Jesus, Why I Believe in the Bible, Why I Believe in the Church, Why I Believe in Prayer, and Why I Believe in Immortality.

The treatment is unique. His positions theologically will most likely be unsatisfactory to the extremists of both the Modernists and the Fundamentalists. The book evidences real scholarship, though neither the man nor his learning is on parade, the rather modesty marks his work.

The author is evidently much more concerned for the well being of his readers than for himself. Helping those beset by doubts is his high and worthy purpose. The personal equation is strong. Back of the book is a great soul. He is religious and knows why, and would help others into the faith that means so much to him. Herein are to be found "Six golden paeans of faith."

Once into the book you will find it hard to lay aside. The book is calculated in many ways to be helpful. May its readers be numbered by the thousand is my prayer.

M. P. Hunt.

FALLEN ASLEEP

LEHMAN.

A. F. Lehman was born at Redfield, Kansas, Feb. 17, 1873. He departed this life at his home in Luray, Kan., January 23, 1931. His death was due to the result of an accident with which he met a few weeks ago causing a cerebrum thrombosis or degeneration of the brain. He was still in the prime of life being only 57 years, 11 months and 6 days. As a child with his parents he moved from his home at Redfield to Bronson, Kan., in the year 1880 and where at the early age of nineteen was converted to the Christian faith in the Methodist Episcopal Church of which church he immediately became a member and retained his membership there for many years.

On Sept. 14, 1898, he took as his bride the Miss Anna McKinley of Erie, Kan., who remains in this life to mourn the loss of a true husband and Christian companion.

To this union were born nine children, five girls and four boys, six living, three sons having preceded the father in death.

The living children are: Mrs. W. C. Peacock, Long Beach, Calif.; Mrs. Thomas Norton, Utica, Kan.; Mrs. Otis Brown, Bronson, Kan.; Miss Margaret Lehman, Miss Pauline Lehman and one son Max Lehman of Luray, Kan. Also one sister, the Miss Mary Lehman of Bronson, Kan., and four grandchildren.

Mr. Lehman has in his dealings with his fellowmen proved himself at all times to be a true Christian and citizen. He will be missed by all who knew him and by his church, the United Brethren Church of Luray, where he has been a member since Nov. 23, 1926.

Funeral services were held in the United Brethren Church of Luray, Kan., Sunday, Jan. 25, 1931, at 9:00 A. M., the pastor, Rev. K. E. Shotts, in charge, with special music from the male quartette.

Immediately after the close of the service, the pianist, quartette, pall bearers and pastor with the immediate family accompanied the body to Quinter, Kan., where he with his family lived for a number of years. And there in the Methodist Church, services were again held, the Rev. Tanner, pastor, assisting. Interment was made in the Quinter cemetery.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

W. W. C.: "Please pray for J. M., who is very sick and does not know the fullness of God's redeeming power. Pray that God will manifest his power by healing this man so that those around will know that God did the work."

Pray for J. C., out of work, and for his salvation.

Pray for Pauline F. and family, unsaved.

Pray for Tom, unsaved and in spiritualism.

Pray for Mabel, so very lonely. May she be deeply comforted.

Pray for Maud R., for her salvation.

Pray for Beatrice W., she has had her eye removed, and doctors say there is a spot in her head that doesn't want to heal.

Mrs. N. M.: "Please pray for a mother whose mind has become deranged. Pray for me that I may be a blessing to others. Also pray for the unsaved members of our home."

A. J.: "Please pray very earnestly for my unsaved brothers and sisters and relatives. Pray that God will send deep, pungent conviction on them and save them at any cost."

Reader: "Please pray for our home, for I need all Christian prayers."

L. J. L.: "Will you please remember us in prayer. This is a Godless city. We are asking God for an old-fashioned revival that will bring mighty conviction and a breaking down of hearts."

For I, the Lord thy God, will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, "Fear not, I will help thee." Isa. 41:13.

Time.—December, A. D. 29; January, A. D. 30.

Places.—Bethany and Perea.

Introduction.—Our lesson reaches two limits in human life in its contrast. Friends are more precious than diamonds; but no one wishes to have an enemy. Our friends bless us: our enemies curse us. True friends will live for us and die for us; but our enemies may murder us. One can always trust a friend; but an enemy is a vain thing for safety. Friendship is so costly that one can have but few of them; but enemies are so much more costly that one can hardly afford to have even one of them at a time—better have none, if such a thing is possible. God is our best friend: Satan is our worst enemy.

True friendship is the most sacred tie in any world. God called Abraham his friend. That beats a throne and a crown in the mightiest empire the world has ever known. Jesus was hungry for human friendship, and invited his apostles to be his friends on the one condition of perfect obedience to all his commands. We may enter into that holy alliance on a like basis. But remember that such a blessed relationship is reserved for entirely sanctified hearts. Such souls receive from the Master the white stone with his "new best name of love" written in it.

One's dearest friend may sometimes be hurtful. A good man told one of his friends that he sometimes had to pray earnestly to be delivered from the influence of his own wife. She loved him devotedly, but she was worldly; and her influence had a pull against his spiritual life. If one's friends come between him and God, he will need to do some careful living, and some earnest praying. One must not leave his wife; nor must the wife depart from her husband; but many injurious friendships must be severed for Christ's sake.

Before beginning our comments, we note the setting of the lesson. "The two scenes pictured in the present lesson were separated in both time and place. It is clear from John's gospel (10:22-39) that Jesus attended the feast of Dedication in Jerusalem, which would mean December 20-27, A. D. 29. This fixes the date when he was entertained in the Bethany home. But John shows that the Jews tried to kill Jesus (10:31), and that he went back to Perea (John 10:40) in temporary retirement until it was time for him to be presented as the paschal Lamb at the Passover in April. This period of retirement was broken long enough to permit him to visit Bethany at the death and resurrection of Lazarus, after which he returned to Perea by way of northern Judea and Samaria. The second scene of this lesson probably occurred early in January, A. D. 30, immediately following his return to Perea from the feast of Dedication." (Arnold's Notes).

Comments on the Lesson.

38. A certain village.—Bethany. A certain woman named Martha.—

The sister of Lazarus and Mary. The form of expression is somewhat peculiar. Received him into her house.—It is supposed that she either owned the home, or that she was at the head of it.

39. A sister called Mary.—In the Greek Testament the name is sometimes Maria, sometimes Mariam. It is derived from the Hebrew Miriam. Sat at the feet of Jesus.—This was the ordinary position of teacher and pupil among the Jews. Saul of Tarsus sat at the feet of Gamaliel. Her position was not so important as the fact that she "heard his word." She gave attention to what he was saying to her.

40. Martha was cumbered about much serving.—Poor Martha! Her kinsfolk keep living on and multiplying. Some ladies do not feel prepared to entertain a little company until the fatted calf, a turkey gobbler and some chickens have been slain, and a few pints of luscious oysters have been provided. Cumbered about too much serving. Let the pastor drop in at dinner or supper when husband and the children are all at home (hard to do in this rushing, frolicsome age), and partake of the same sort of food the family is accustomed to. It will be good for all, and will save a lot of work and worry. Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone.—We must not be too hard on Martha. Her motive was good. She was very anxious to give her Lord the best possible meal—so anxious that she forgot that some things were more important than eating finely prepared food. She rebukes the Master for his want of concern in her behalf. Bid her therefore that she help me.—In Martha's estimation it was more important that Mary help about the dinner than that she should sit at the Master's feet and drink in his gracious words. Our little busy-ness sometimes gets between us and God's blessings.

41. Martha, Martha.—Twice he addresses her to make it emphatic. Thou art careful and troubled about many things.—Do you note the difference in the tone of the Master's rebuke as compared with that of Martha? Hers is fretful, and just a bit rasping: his is gentle and soothing. It drew her nearer to him, and taught her relative values.

42. But one thing is needful.—"But" here does not have the sense of only, as some have been wont to interpret it. It is simply a conjunction. Jesus put the emphasis on the thing part. The contrast lies between food part.—The original says, the good part. The contrast lies between food for one's body and eternal truth, the soul's food. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Which shall not be taken away from her.—Thank God for eternal truth and everlasting life that no evil power can take away from us. In this world of change and disappointment it is consoling to know that there is something as durable as Jehovah's eternal throne.

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."

11:42. But we unto you, Pharisees.—The scene changes, and the Master is now among his enemies. In the early part of this chapter the Master gives some blessed lessons on prayer, after which He enters into some severe controversy with Jewish leaders, and finally delivers the terrific rebuke with which we are now dealing. Those Pharisees in their observance of the letter of the law had lost its entire spirit; and, like their religion, they were spiritually dead while they claimed to live. Tithing is alright; but it will not save the soul—it cannot atone for sins.

43. Woe unto you, Pharisees.—Again the Master rebukes those men; but this time it is for pride. They were constantly looking for best things for themselves; and such conduct will ruin any one.

44. Woe unto you.—But this time he enlarges the scope of rebuke; and, taking in the scribes, he terms both them and the Pharisees hypocrites. Note the comparison. They are as hidden graves, overgrown, perchance, with grass and flowers; hidden away in their depths are rotting bodies of dead men. Jesus was a severe preacher.

45. One of the lawyers.—They did not practice civil law, but Old Testament law and the many traditional religious laws of Jewry. Thus saying thou reproachest us.—He was doing good preaching, and hit the game at which he was shooting. Strange how easy it is to insult men who are vulnerable. If men were more careful about leading clean lives they would not be so easily offended.

46. Woe unto you also, ye lawyers.—I note that the Master offers no apology for his severe words, but specifies their sins. Those men were public sinners, and needed public rebuke. By their wicked interpretation of law they made life burdensome to their fellows, and did nothing to relieve the load. They themselves would render no help, not so much as might be done with one finger. They were a proud, merciless set.

52. Woe unto you, lawyers.—This time the curse falls heavier still. Ye have taken away the key of knowledge.—I know of nothing that so resembles this as a class of pretended ministers of the gospel, who take the Word of God away from their people and forbid them to read and interpret its meaning. Woe unto them! They will not enter in themselves; nor will they permit others to enter. To rob God's people of the Word of eternal life means hell for the man who does it.

53. Began to urge him . . . to speak of many things.—They were not particular as to what he talked about, if he would only say something to which they could take exception. As our next verse says: They were "laying wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him." I know of nothing in all literature that is more disgusting in its devilry than the attitude of the Pharisees, Sadducees, scribes and lawyers toward Jesus Christ. It is almost impossible to discover a single good motive in all their conduct.

We are dealing today with a terrible contrast; but it has not changed in nearly two thousand years. It cannot change; for it is the difference between sin and righteousness, between sinners and saints, between Satan and God. In the end, the former makes hell; the latter, heaven.

KIND WORDS BY A FAITHFUL ALUMNUS OF ASBURY COLLEGE.

Asbury College is a most wonderful College. First, because the Holy Ghost ordained this school to be great in evangelism, Dr. J. W. Hughes in the Southern Station, Lexington, Ky., felt led by the Spirit to establish a full salvation school. He was a great evangelist; hundreds were saved under his ministry and baptized with the Holy Spirit. Second, because the Holy Spirit seems to abide. One cannot walk across the campus without feeling the inspiration of the Spirit. Third, because Asbury was located in Wilmore, Ky., where influences are constructive. We have the country atmosphere, the great country life, yet in this little city of two thousand souls we have every convenience of city life.

Asbury grew under the wise leadership of Dr. H. C. Morison, Editor of The Pentecostal Herald, and came to be known throughout the world as a spiritual center. The campus and buildings, one could not describe. When we try it our vocabulary staggers with weakness. Suffice to say, it is a great campus and wonderful buildings.

This great school, under Dr. L. R. Akers has climbed to the highest rung and stands strongly an "A" grade college. In Asbury we develop soul, spirit, and body. If you develop the head to the neglect of the soul and body, you run into scepticism. If you develop the body to the neglect of the soul and mind, you run into brute force. If you develop the soul to the neglect of the mind and body, you run into fanaticism. Dr. Akers is wise and develops the triune man. This is a great college, intellectually, having one of the finest faculties in all the country. It is strong from every angle. Dr. Akers is always on the alert, seeing that the school is well poised and well manned. The school has grown under his healthy influence. It is a safe, sane, common-sense place; no fanaticism, but a warm, deep gulf stream of perfect love flows continuously through every department of this great and glorious college.

Seemingly God has ordained a plan by which and through which scores and scores may be educated in Asbury. They have launched a mattress factory where poor boys and girls may work their way through school. If you will assist in educating these poor boys, order a mattress. Write to Mr. Harold R. Barnes, salesmanager of the Asbury College Mattress Factory. Order today and help these poor boys through Asbury.

Will J. Harney.

A LAYMAN'S VIEWPOINT.

Since childhood I have been a firm believer in the doctrines of the Methodist Church. I not only believe them, but have endeavored to preach them and to practice the same. I was converted when thirteen years of age and lived this experience for two years, when I backslid, as the result of not praying and reading my Bible.

At this time there was a great awakening came to our community through the preaching of Morrison and Carradine in other sections of the country. Some of my people received the blessing of holiness, but I went against light, although I felt my deep need of it. Some good women sent for H. B. Cockrill to hold a meeting in our church and I felt they were making a mistake, as he would not know anything about poor people. In fact I was backslidden and H. B. Cockrill was a holiness preacher. I loved my pastor and church and felt grieved that the holiness sisters should engage a holiness preacher. I thought if I could get back to God I would live the justified life and prove to the people that there was no need of going to extremes and getting another blessing.

Brother Cockrill came in due time and made our house his home, as we lived near the church. I made the fires, lighted the lamps and cleaned the church. Brother Cockrill preached with the power of God upon him. I had an awful struggle to get back to God. I was carrying fodder to the cattle, put one armful on the south side of the barn, fell on my knees and promised God if he would take me back I would live up to all the light I had. God took me back and I ran to the house and told mother I had been reclaimed. Brother Cockrill preached from Romans 12:1, and I went to the altar and Jesus cleansed me from all sin.

I have stood by my church for 38 years since my conversion and 36 since my sanctification. God has given me many souls for my hire, and I am going on.

R. S. Beck.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Miss Esther S. Ford, who is a daughter of the stalwart and splendid missionaries, Jefferson and Helen Ford, who have given many years to the missionary work in Africa under the Friends Board, is graduating from Marion College, Marion, Indiana, this coming June.

In addition to her A. B. work in the school, Miss Ford has been serving as supply pastor and has equipped herself in other ways as a very special worker among children and young people. I want to recommend her highly to any one needing help in either of these fields of work. I am sure you will make no mistake in employing Miss Ford and you will be encouraging a most worthy young woman and her whole family.

NOTICE.

The next annual meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness will be held at University Park, Iowa, June 9 to 15. A splendid corps of workers is engaged and a fine program is in preparation.

REASNOR, IOWA.

I wish to thank God for the great revival meeting which he gave us here at the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which the writer is the pastor. The meetings were held from Jan. 4 to 18, inclusive. The pastor was assisted by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kinsey, of Richmond, Ind., who proved to be very capable musicians, singers and children's and young people's workers. Some sixty souls were either saved or sanctified, or both. The church has been wonderfully helped. Three results of the meeting are as follows: A children's class of forty who meet once a week for religious instruction from the pastor; a very spiritual and newly organized Epworth League; and a marked improvement in the mid-week prayer meeting, both as to numbers and spirit. About twenty have been baptized and taken into the church to date as a result of the meeting. Well, thank God, the day of revivals is not past.

Herman U. Smith.

THE HOLY LAND AND THE BIBLE

By CUNNINGHAM GEIKIE
(In two volumes)

When one has referred to these volumes he feels that he has really visited the various places in the Holy Land. Dr. Geikie is so thoroughly familiar with almost every inch of the Holy Land that he adds local color to his description. By describing a custom here, or an incident there, he causes new light to break on many Bible passages.

At the back of volume two there are two very useful indexes; one listing the places, the other lists all texts referred to in the volumes.

In all there are more than eleven hundred pages. The volumes are attractively bound in green cloth.

The list price of Geikie's "Holy Land and the Bible" is $4.00.

You may have these two volumes absolutely FREE OF COST by selling FIVE of our Scripture Text Calendars.

Attractive colored picture of Christ in Garden, on the cover

A LIFE OF CHRIST

By DEAN F. W. FARRAR

This is another book that will prove especially useful to Christian Workers and Sunday School Teachers just at this time when the lessons are in the Gospel of Luke.

You will find it helpful to have in one volume, arranged in proper order, the events recorded by all four of the evangelists.

While the book is most interesting for regular reading, it is made valuable as a reference volume by means of a complete index of subjects treated.

This Life of Christ has always held its place among the finest books of its kind, and though many other lives of Our Lord have been written since this one, few have in any way surpassed it. The list price of "The Life of Christ" by Farrar containing 744 pages is $3.00.

You may own a copy absolutely FREE OF CHARGE by selling only FOUR of our Scripture Text Calendars.

Interesting facts about each of the twelve pictures

GOD HAS APPOINTED PREACHING.

By The Editor.

GOD has appointed preaching and witnessing as tremendous agencies in the salvation of souls. The preacher called of God and sent forth with his message is a man, we may say, of supreme importance. He has been highly honored. God has chosen him as his mouthpiece. Let it be remembered that he carries a great responsibility.

***
Much depends upon the manner in which the preacher delivers his message. First of all, he must constantly remember that he is not his own man; he has been separated from his brethren and, we may say, from himself. He is God's honored, responsible mouthpiece to his fellows. Much depends upon his loyalty to his divine Master. He has the pledge that God's word shall not return void, but shall accomplish the divine purpose. This word must be proclaimed with faith and, of course, with a deep and holy solicitude for those to whom the word is proclaimed.

***
We cannot believe that any preacher of the gospel should be content without seeing some concrete results. Sinners must be saved by the preaching of the good news of salvation. It is possible to so present divine truth that it will result in salvation. No fisherman would be content to drop his hook into a rain-barrel where there is no possibility of a catch, and he would become weary on the river bank if he went there every week for years and caught no fish. It would seem that the life of a preacher would become mere drudgery if he did not occasionally see the salvation of souls.

***
We fear there is quite a bit of preaching that is not intended to produce conviction for sin; to bring men to repentance and saving faith in Christ. If the preacher desires the salvation of souls and expects to see sinners brought to Christ under his ministry, he should select his texts, prepare and deliver his sermons with a strong faith for results, and we can hardly believe that such a man will fail. The Holy Spirit will give power. The hearts of sinners will be stirred and broken, and prodigals will come home to God.

***
Let the preacher preach on sin, the blight of it, the insanity of it, the burden it lays upon the soul, its final results; the hell that awaits the sinner. Let him be neither ashamed nor afraid to repeat the words of the Lord Jesus, to proclaim these truths with the earnestness that should characterize a man sent of God to call his fellowbeings to repentance. If the man in the pulpit does not believe in the wickedness and danger of sin, he does not believe what Jesus Christ has said about the future torment of the finally impenitent. Let him cease to be a miserable grafter, a false prophet deceiving the people, and come down out of the pulpit where he has no right to stand, and fail to declare the whole counsel of God.

THE CLEANSING BLOOD.

Oh what safety there is in, and under, the cleansing blood of Jesus Christ. In it we may find cleansing from all sin. Under the cleansing blood we may find protection from all harm. What wonderful safety there is if the atoning blood of Jesus Christ is on the doorposts and lintels of the soul. Satan and sin cannot enter the holy sanctuary of our souls if we are well marked with the protecting blood of Jesus. Satan and his adversaries may bang, knock, and waste their fury outside, but they cannot break in if the door is plainly stained with the precious blood of Christ's redemptive death. If death enters it is only as a friend to release us from all of our suffering and bring us home to the blessed feet of HIM who has redeemed us with his precious blood.

Eternal praise to God for the bleeding Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world. Keep under the blood that cleanseth from all sin. Amen!

H. C. Morrison.

To bring men to repentance, they must be made to think. To be made to think, the preacher must be so earnest, so honest, so fearless and yet, so kind and deeply interested, that he cannot be misunderstood or resisted. Let him preach sermon after sermon on sin and its consequences, judgment day and outer darkness. Some of his hearers may get mad, but their madness may give way to conviction for sin. That has occurred in thousands of instances. It will occur today, if the preacher presses upon the mind and conscience of the impenitent, their danger and waiting doom. Let the God-called preacher pour out, with holy zeal and compassionate love, the truths of the Bible, into the ears of his hearers and trust the Holy Ghost to apply his message to their hearts and consciences. He will see results. They are bound to come.

Shall We Have The Revival?

I am glad to see there is a very general feeling in the churches that a great spiritual revival is our most important need. This feeling is expressed in the Church Press. Dr. Alexander, of Oklahoma, a very prominent minister in the Baptist Church, wrote a pungent and powerful article in The Western Recorder, a Baptist paper published in Louisville, and by the way, one of the greatest denominational papers published in this country, on "The Kind of Revival Needed." He insists upon genuine repentance and personal salvation through faith in Christ.

In a former issue of The Michigan Christian Advocate, Bishop Berry makes a forceful appeal to Methodists, everywhere, for a great revival of true spiritual religion. We have not seen anything in print in a long while that describes conditions more accurately, and makes a more earnest plea that we turn our attention to the salvation of souls.

There is no doubt that we need a spiritual tornado to sweep this nation and bring our Protestantism back to true apostolic New Testament spirituality and zeal; but while waiting for the tornado to break upon us, it would be wise for some ten or twenty thousand pastors to arouse their congregations, and secure help and have good old-time revivals in their churches. It would be like the big drops that fall before the heavy rain, after a long dry spell; and it would be the preparation of some spiritual forces for the great awakening that the nation so sorely needs—a revival that would impress the whole population with the fact that our Christ has power on earth to forgive sins, that would give new emphasis to divine inspiration, and put a holy reverence for God into the hearts of the people everywhere.

Forty-one years ago I saw the drift that was bound to bring about the conditions that exist today, and knew these conditions would exist just as well then as I do now, and started THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, a sort of voice in the wilderness, and got myself thoroughly ridiculed and shut out of hundreds of churches as a fanatic and disturber of the peace.

There are no new Christian doctrines. The truth is as old as God. We shall ever have to turn back to the teachings of the prophets, of Christ and the apostles if we wish to find a message that will awaken the hearts of men, prick their consciences and make them to cry out, "What must we do to be saved?" The Christian world has come to regard John Wesley as one of the greatest preachers in all past history. It was not so much the great man; it was his message, and its power over men, that changed the most brutal sinners into beautiful saints, that made Wesley to be counted as great. The same message, if preached in the language of today by men who are wholly consecrated, blood-cleansed and spirit-filled, will produce the same results.

We would not insist that the outward manifestations will be the same. It is not probable that mobs would arise, furniture be destroyed, preachers stoned, jailed and conscripted into the army. We have not the ignorant, brutal masses of people in this country, outside of Chicago and New York City, that Mr. Wesley had to deal with; but we have millions of educated, cultured people, many of them in the church, that are in just as dire need of repentance and regeneration as the mob that used to try to interfere with Wesley's meetings, many of whom were stricken down by the Holy Spirit, and afterward became glad witnesses of the saving power of the Lord Jesus.

If the church becomes somewhat awakened to the need of revivals it is to be hoped that they will not go about it by sending away for some expert to lecture on the subject of how to have revivals, at an eight o'clock banquet at $2.00 a plate. Just as well let the people go on to the Devil and not waste the time and money.

One of the essentials to a gracious revival is to quit the unsriptural way of filling up

KINGDOM NOTES FROM THE TROPICS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Last week we held a meeting among the West Indians at Pedro Miquel (Isthmas of Panama). Trouble was, the church was too small for the congregation, many were on the outside as well as full house within. Everybody sang, no need of modern song leader with sensational antics there—the people could not help singing. The gospel we preached was old-fashioned—a free and a full salvation, and when the altar service came on the place soon filled up with seekers for pardon and holiness. Again we have proven that this gospel is for all flesh irrespective of race and nation and tongue. Some Spanish speaking people attended the meeting also, and occasionally we would inject a little Spanish into the meeting through Miss Hilborn, the Free Methodist Missionary, who has had quite some experience in Mexico and now has taken over the Panama work. It was quite a sight to see West Indians, Spanish people and Americans all bowing at the same altar seeking the common salvation through the precious blood.

In the mission fields one has to be dead to the color line and to the question of race. We have preached to, and had revivals among, the whites and blacks, brown and yellows, but have found that when the love of God possesses us we are all one in a great Saviour. When we traveled in China Mrs. Ridout delighted to have with her Grace, a splendid sanctified Chinese woman worker. She was Grace by name and grace by nature and divine power. We forgot the racial line—Grace seemed like a member of our family. No one was a more delightful and precious traveling companion to wife than was Grace of China. We always think of her with thanksgiving and a prayer.

We praise God for so often seeing fulfilled Acts 2:17: "And it shall come to pass in the last days saith God I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy and your young men shall see visions and your old men shall dream dreams."

Mr. Cory of China speaking at a Convention in Kansas City, 1914, tells of a man who gave a million dollars to Missions; this man said to him: "Cory, one life given to God in the nations beyond is worth more than every dollar of mine." A real missionary of the "Praying Hyde" or Bishop Cassels type or Hudson Taylor type is worth more than a million dollars to the kingdom of God in China or India! Cory says, "I shall never forget when I prayed with Dr. Li, the man that shook China before God took him two or three years ago. I was praying one night in the province of Nganwei for workers and a rainstorm had overtaken us. I prayed for hosts. When I got up from my knees Dr. Li beckoned to me and putting his hand on my shoulder said, 'Mr. Cory, that is right; we need a great host of workers in China. But have you ever thought that God could shake Nganwei Province with only one man if he were really God's?'"

III.

I was reading recently a small book on South America by Rev. Emilio Olsson. He was a pioneer especially among the Indians of South America. He says: "My travels have covered over 50,000 miles, 3,000 of which I made mule back and horse back, and much of it on foot. To forty-two different nationalities and tribes I have presented the Word of God and I have reached with the gospel over one million souls. Six times have I crossed the great Andes; have visited many places where hardly a white man had ever been before, and encountered numerous tribes unknown to the civilized world." Let me note a few of Olsson's utterances here. They will illustrate what the early missionaries had to endure:

"After my conversion God called me to spread the Gospel I was so overjoyed I could not keep still."

"At night they laid their revolvers under them (the Patagonians) I had no revolver I had plenty of Bibles and instead of putting a revolver under my head I put my Bibles and slept as prince in a palace. One man said 'I saw you sleep last night.' 'Well, how did I sleep?' 'You slept like an angel,' he said."

"One night I had a very narrow escape sleeping on two scorpions, but God kept them still all night and I slept like a child."

A man to whom he gave a Bible returned it and said: "Take this Book back, I cannot read it without crying. I never knew I had such a hard heart."

"One night we lost our way in the forest surrounded with wild beasts. It became so dark that I could not see my Indian guide—we had no food, no water, and it seemed as if God had forsaken us, but we went on until my Indian's mule broke down and we could go no farther. At last my Indian threw himself on the ground; after a few minutes he jumped up and screamed fearfully. In South America there are terrible ants about one inch long whose attacks are often deadly. The Indian was covered with them. I had my boots and clothing on but they got inside both and bit me until I was nearly delirious. About daylight we found a stream of water. I pulled off my boots, my legs were a great mass of sores. I was in a pitiful state. My agony seemed intolerable and I cried to God for deliverance. Before that day was over we reached a place of refuge."

"One night the savages came around our camp to kill us off. All I could do was to pray to God and ask him to watch over us, and I slept beautifully that night and in the morning they were all gone."

"Their grief for the dead lasts for many months. Crying and lamentations commence at sunset and at certain periods day and night constantly wailing—the lamentations are almost unbearable and the impression made is most distressing. It is like hearing the groans of a vast number of souls in torment—a sound that one who has heard it is never likely to forget."

A missionary tells of a meeting in Chair-yung, Korea. He had arrived tired, hot and thirsty—being too weary to speak, he asked the people what Christ had brought to them. One by one they eagerly jumped to their feet and said in a word what Christ brought to them—"Forgiveness," "joy," "strength to meet temptation," "peace," "guidance," "eternal life," "comfort in sorrow." True it is where Jesus comes he changes things and the light of immortality silences the lamentations of heathen darkness.

IV.

At this writing we are holding another meeting among the West Indians at Cristobal. Again the difficulty is seating the people—the building if twice the size no doubt would be filled every night. The people in this church have had holiness teaching. I noticed that on Sunday they sang out of that old song book, "Songs of Joy and Gladness," a book that was very popular forty years ago in the Holiness Movement. I remember this was the book used in the first holiness camp meeting wife and I ever attended. I can still hear Aaron Hart leading that song:

"Abiding, Oh, so wondrous sweet,
I'm resting at the Saviour's feet;

I trust in him—I'm satisfied,
I'm resting on the Crucified!"

It is a good sign when all the people sing the songs of Zion. At night we used the Sankey and Moody song book (another old book) full of the most wonderful hymns and so helpful in revival meetings. In our previous meeting with the Free Methodists they allowed no musical instruments; this made it hard on the voices but in this present meeting they have plenty of music. Last night they had the organ, the tambourine and the violin and all who played had religion. God is present in the meetings in great power and blessing.

V.

A story is told that away back in 1269 the Chinese Emperor, Kublai Khan, sent a deputation to the Pope of Rome asking him to send one hundred missionaries to China to teach them the Christian religion, and if they proved the religion of Christ was the best religion then he would have it become the religion of China. The Chinese envoys reached Rome at a time when they were quarreling about who would be the next Pope. It took two years to settle the dispute. At length Gregory X sent two missionaries off to China but when they reached Armenia they became discouraged and turned back. Thus a golden opportunity was lost because the church (such as it was) was in a quarrel and into disputations. That is our trouble today. Modernism has set everything awry. A Catholic Cardinal said sometime ago: "The Protestants do not know what they believe," and I fear it has almost come to that. Nearly every preacher today thinks he has got to knock "Creed" every time he preaches, and he cries out for "Character." "It is character that counts," he exclaims. Very good, but you cannot produce strong character in an age of unbelief and skepticism. Since so many Methodist preachers have thrown good old Methodist doctrine on the dump heap they have had to discard the mourner's bench also and they know nothing of the joy of getting men and women converted to God. They preach no more: "Ye must be born again." To build up Christian character we must bring back to the pulpit and prayer meeting the doctrines of regeneration and sanctification.

VI.

Prayer changes things and brings a revival. Rev. G. T. B. Davis, in "How Prayer Brings a Revival," says:

"As Dr. Torrey went through India on his way from Australia to Great Britain in 1902, he delivered a powerful address on prayer. Missionaries and Christians in the Khassia Hills began to pray more earnestly for revival. The news of the work of grace in Great Britain and the revival in Wales doubtless quickened their faith. It is said that by 1905 the Khassians 'were praying everywhere.' A wonderful revival followed that thrilled the Christian world, and led thousands into the kingdom."

"And it was the Khassia Hills revival that led—through intercessory prayer—to the wonderful spiritual awakening in Korea. Dr. Jonathan Goforth, in his new book, 'By My Spirit,' tells how he visited Korea in the midst of the revival. One of the missionaries, Mr. Swallen of Pingyang, told him how the movement began. Mr. Swallen said the missionaries heard of the revival in the Khassia Hills, and decided to pray every day at noon hour until a similar blessing was poured out upon them."

"Mr. Swallen said: 'After we had prayed for about a month a brother proposed that we stop the prayer-meetings, saying, 'We have been praying now for a month, and nothing unusual has come of it. We are spending a lot of time. I don't think we are justified. Let us go on with our work as usual, and each pray at home as he finds it convenient.' The proposal seemed plausible. The majority of us, however, decided that, instead of discontinuing the prayer-meeting, we would give more time to prayer, not less. With that in view, we changed the hour from noon to four o'clock; we were then free to pray until supper time, if we wished. We kept to it, until at last, after months of waiting, the answer came.'

"In describing the fruits of the Korean revival, Dr. Goforth says: 'There were, of course, the usual outward manifestations which inevitably accompany such phenomenal outpourings of spiritual power. But beyond all that was the simple fact that here were tens of thousands of Korean men and women whose lives had been completely transformed by the touch of the divine fire."

VII.

A certain European said once: "When you Americans get an idea at once you make an organization. By the time you have the office organized and the secretaries working you begin to wonder what the original idea was."

I think this observer has struck the core of things in religious matters and in missionary affairs too. If the Kingdom of God could come about by organization and machinery it could have been here long since. John Wesley brought on the biggest religious upheaval in modern history and he didn't even have a secretary. Typewriting was unknown yet Wesley wrote over 70 books. We are in an age of organization. When was Methodism so highly organized as it is today, and yet the original idea of Methodism has been buried out of sight. Who today aside from a few holiness people cares that the original idea of Methodism was holiness? "God thrust them out to raise up a holy people," said Wesley. We have our big organizations, commissions and the finest machinery but we have lost sight of Methodism's original idea. Then again this organization business is a costly thing. We have tremendous overhead expense. What we need is to return to simplicity and sincerity.

CHAPTER XIX.

AN INTERESTING TRIP.

IF the reader will look at the large wall map of the United States, he will see that Albuquerque, New Mexico, is situated about one hundred twenty-five miles east of the line between Arizona and New Mexico, and perhaps one hundred thirty miles south of the line between New Mexico and Colorado.

As our friends had hitherto traveled over the Southern route through Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas, it was agreed that the present trip should be by way of Thornton, Gatisteo, and Lanny, to Sante Fe, thence by way of Alamosa, Wauatoya, Walsenberg (on the D. & R. G. R.R.) Cuchara, Pueblo, to Denver, Colorado.

So pleased were our friends with the city of Denver, that they decided to spend two or three days visiting the various points of interest, and enjoying the view of the snow-clad mountains to the south and west of the city. It will be remembered that this was not the first time that Herbert Dalton and his wife had been in the city. In fact, it will be remembered that here they had first met.

But Ralph had taken the southern route, both going and coming on the occasion of his trip to California to watch beside his sister during her illness, and to take her to her home. He was enthusiastic in praise of the elegance of the residences, the magnitude and splendor of some of the business blocks, and especially the general air of cleanliness and care taken which was everywhere manifest.

While whirling along on the electric cars out to Elitch's Gardens in North Denver, he felt that the ideal place. But when he transferred to the line running west to Manhattan Beach, he was not so sure but this was nicer. When he took a car to University Park, and saw the green alfalfa fields south of the city, toward Littleton, he decided that he would hold an opinion until he had seen it all. Then he couldn't decide at all! He spent three days, hardly allowing himself time for his meals, viewing the city from every viewpoint, not forgetting a trip over the famous loop, to and beyond Georgetown. One day additional was spent in a run down to Colorado Springs, Manitou, and the Garden of the Gods, took a look through the peep hole at Pike's Peak, with its glittering covering of snow.

At night the party attended services at Parson Uzzel's Tabernacle, the South Broadway Congregational Church, and the Second Church, Rev. Addison Blanchard, pastor, in the order named.

As their stay in Denver included a Sunday, the party visited the Central Presbyterian Church in the morning, and the Trinity M. E. Church in the evening. Here they had the pleasure of listening to a stirring sermon by a converted brick layer, Rev. Robt. McIntyre, just then beginning a term of service as the pastor of Trinity Church, but recently in charge of the foremost M. E. Church in Chicago. His sermon made a lasting impression upon his hearers. His text was Isaiah 6:1-5, 6, 7, 8. His thought was that man never realized his uncleanness until he gets a glimpse of God's greatness and purity. That a special preparation is necessary before man can be intrusted with a message from God.

Of Dr. Blanchard, they carried away the impression that while blessed with neither gracefulness in style nor comeliness of feature, he was nevertheless doing yeoman service in his chosen field, and had the entire confidence of his people.

Parson Uzzel, with his broad rimmed light colored hat, and business suit, seemed neither dignified nor clerical until he stood before his audience with a message from the heart of God. Then they understood how this "unpreacher like" looking man had remained with the Tabernacle people for more than a half a score of years, while in the other churches, pastors came and went with lamentable frequency.

If Parson Uzzel was a machine-made preacher, the fact did not obtrude itself upon his hearers. His manner was not of the impetuous kind that make stiff collars wrinkle and become limp. He rather talked to his people as one should do were sinners interviewing him in his study, and he trying to induce them to take the cup of salvation and call on the name of the Lord.

Such was his style, too, when the writer of this history listened to him, before the enlargement and improvement of the Tabernacle.

We must hasten to overtake our friends, who are whirling along on the Union Pacific, intending to make another stop off at Topeka, Kansas, that they may meet the author of "In His Steps," Rev. Chas. M. Sheldon, of the Central Congregational Church of Topeka.

Reaching the city something after midnight, they reached their hotel at 1:30 Wednesday morning. They busied themselves during the day seeing the sights, and in the evening attended the midweek service of the Central Church.

Mr. Sheldon had prepared a written address which he read hurriedly, and in something of a monotone. Our friends were conscious of a feeling of disappointment at this juncture, and wondered how Mr. Sheldon had won his way to such prominence by his pen work. But when Mr. Sheldon cast aside his manuscript and looked at his audience, they forgot their disappointment in their eager interest in the subject being burned into their hearts by the intensely earnest man before them.

They went away, glad to have met the author of "In His Steps," and filled with a desire to see that "everyday righteousness" upon which Mr. Sheldon insisted so earnestly exemplified in the lives of all Christian people.

Dear Mr. Editor:

AFTER the long years of uninterrupted reading of THE HERALD and a very few times venturing a few lines and asking space among the great writers of so valuable a paper, (which was never refused), we are at the point to once more ask your indulgence for space to say a few things relative to the present day ways of so many professed Christians turning in on the keyboard of discordant sounds of what seems to be a get-easy and go-easy testimony of salvation from sin, with a professed Christlikeness very foreign to that being recommended by so many soul-stirring articles being contributed by those writing for your good paper. In our ignorance we may be getting on dangerous ground in asking you to give us space to try to air our little ideas and seeking light, not to find a middle ground of safety between what it seems to us as two extremes, but if possible, get our bearings on the one which looks more akin to that given by inspiration and being inherited to in or by the teachings of those who are standing by the word as they declare the way "so plain that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein."

If this is true, does that man, though a fool, know what denying yourself, taking up your cross and following Jesus means? Does he also know he must shun the very appearance of evil and where to draw the line of this appearance to keep himself unspotted from the world? That he must let his communications be "Yea, yea, and nay, nay," in expressing himself in conversation with others? Does, or should he realize that only the pure in heart shall see God, or is there some other Scripture making a way of escape for neglecting this purity? Is there any way made plain to this fool to express his thoughts in words without a multiplicity of by-words to give force to what he is saying? The real profane man who makes no profession of Christianity takes God's name in vain, apparently, to give force to his miserably dark, vile sayings and we find many, and we mean many, church members bordering as close on to taking God's name in vain with a multiplicity of by-words as they can use to keep as near in touch with the non-professing, God-dishonoring man of the world as possible. Is this fool expected to know that the modern dance is considered by all Protestant churches as an unsafe place to go and retain their experience of the presence and power of him who said, "Son, thy sins are forgiven thee; go and sin no more." If there is no way for this fool to know these things and draw the line between good and bad, how can we account for the happiest and most useful men and women, young and old, walking the shining way, and pointed to by all classes as real living examples of what they profess?

THE INCOMPARABLE CHRIST.

Sermon by Paul S. Rees, delivered over Station WJR, Detroit.

"Christ is all, and in all."—Col. 3:11.

Christ-exalting text found in the heart of a Christ-exalting epistle! It speaks the faith and passion of its author.

There is a story to the effect that Leonardo da Vinci took a friend to criticize his great painting, "The Last Supper." Said the friend: "The most striking thing in the picture is the cup." Whereupon Leonardo took his brush and, wiping out the cup, declared: "Nothing in my painting shall attract more attention than the face of my Master." In that fine remark lies the essence of the thought and theology of St. Paul.

The Christians to whom he was writing were being imperilled by false teachers. The teaching, which we shall not undertake to examine in any detail, represented a peculiar mixture of the old Mosaic ritualism and a then new philosophy, Oriental in source, known as Gnosticism. It is with the attempted revival of the old ceremonialism in mind that Paul writes in chapter 2: "Let no man judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath: which are a shadow of things to come." (Chap. 2:16, 17.) And it is with the rationalistic, humanistic errors of Gnosticism before him that he warns, earlier in the same chapter: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." (Chap. 2:8).

SUPREMACY IN CREATION.

Paul would have all men know that if they are to be saved, it must be through Christ and Christ alone. However, in connection with his splendid setting forth of the redemptive sovereignty and sufficiency of Jesus, and contributing thereto, he convincingly argues his supremacy elsewhere. Indeed the apostle invades realm after realm and shows that in each Christ is the first and final word. In a lofty passage in Chapter 1 he reveals his creative supremacy, declaring: "By him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him and for him: and he is before all things, and by him all things consist." (Chap. 1:16, 17.) The furnaces of the sun are his—he kindled them. The glittering galaxies of the night are his—He hung them. The azure arch of the ample sky is his—He traced its graceful curve. The skyward-leaping mountains are his—He lifted them. The surging, sighing seas are his—He scooped their mammoth basins. The forests are his, ermine in winter, emerald in summer, flaming in autumn—He reared them, their every tree a poem, their every leaf a sermon. The flowers are his, whether growing solitary in a "crannied wall" or running riot in a tropic bower—He mixed their colors and compounded their perfumes. The earth is his, and the fulness thereof—

He is its Lord. Not rhetorically but really, the universe is his—He owns its vastness more truly than ever a king his palace. Its existence is an articulation of his creative sovereignty; its marvelous design is a symbol of his infinite intelligence; its maintenance is an expression of his upholding and directing purpose.

In another noble passage in this Colossian letter Paul assigns to Christ supreme headship of the Church. He puts it thus: "And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence." (Chap. 1:18.) The Church—not any particular denomination but the total congregation of believing and redeemed souls—is the body and bride of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is his concrete embodiment and witness in the world, he being its vital heart and directing Head. Apart from him it is merely an organization; in him and through him it is a moral and spiritual organism instinct with the very life of the eternal God. Verily Christ is the all and in all of the church. His death and resurrection are its foundation; his Cross is its badge; his living intercession at the right hand of the Father is its sustaining breath; his Spirit's presence is its glory and power; his word is its authority and his will its law; his personal return to reign over the kingdoms of men is its enrapturing prospect.

THE "ALL" OF ATONEMENT.

Exalting the Christ still further, Paul makes him the first and final word in the realm of atonement. Listen to the word spoken: "It pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell; and, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven." (Chap. 1:19, 20.) If sin is a reality, atonement is a necessity and Christ as Saviour becomes an indispensability.

Said a young student to an old preacher: "I need nothing but the ethical example and moral idealism of Jesus."

To which the old preacher replied: "Very well. 'Who did no sin.' Will you follow him in that?"

"I can't," said the young man, "I have already sinned."

"Then," said the preacher, "to begin with, you need a Saviour."

Did you not hear it read a moment ago that if we have peace with God, it must be through "the blood of the cross?" Mark it well, my dear friend, Christ offers more than his example by which you may live; he offers his expiation, his sacrifice for sin, by which you may be made fit to live. He is not simply a way to be saved; he is salvation. He is not a way to live; he is life. The only becoming posture for a sinner to take is the kneeling posture at his pierced feet, where the language of heart and lip becomes:

"Could my tears forever flow,
Could my zeal no languor know,
These for sin could not atone;
Thou must save, and Thou alone;

In my hand no price I bring;
Simply to Thy Cross I cling."

"Christ is all, and in all!" So far our study of the text has been from the larger viewpoint of Paul's conception of Christ as revealed in that part of the epistle which leads up to the text itself. We are now ready to examine this gem in its proper and more immediate setting. Read back a few verses and you will find rather a lengthy list of things which have no place either in the spirit or the conduct of one who has been genuinely converted and truly sanctified—such grosser things as immorality, blasphemy, filthy communication and lying, such subtler things as covetousness, anger and malice. Then our attention is called to the ground-work of religious experience which underlies one's deliverance from these evil works and attitudes. This is true, says the apostle, "seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him; where there is neither Greek nor Jew, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but (where) Christ is all and in all." The adverb "where" is highly significant. It reveals the realm in which, strictly speaking, the text finds its true application. "Where!" It is an adverb of place, not geographically but spiritually. Where is it true that Christ is all and in all? In that realm of personal Christian experience in which the "old man"—not only the old life but the old nature, the sum total of those unChristlike attitudes, tendencies and desires that survive our conversion—has been put off, and the "new man"—the man born from above—has been "renewed in knowledge"—not intellectual understanding merely but knowledge that is rooted in experience—after or according to, the "image," or likeness, "of him that created him," that is, God. To be like God is to be holy and full of love, a condition of heart which, impossible and incredible as it may appear from the point of view of the natural man, is made gloriously possible by Christ's possession of us through his Spirit.

Now let us move still closer to the text. We shall find, on breaking it up into its two distinct affirmations, that it throws a flood of light upon the Christ of experience. Christ is all! That is the first statement. Christ is in all! That is the second. Now see how they are related.

Christ is all—dwelling within us! Christ is in all—manifesting himself through us!

Christ is all—a designation of character! Christ is in all—a description of conduct!

Christ is all—an abiding experience of the soul! Christ is in all—a constant revelation in the life!

If he is all to me, he will be in all that concerns me.

FULL POSSESSION.

Take the first thought for a moment and face it in deepest earnestness. Is he all to you? That is, are you utterly and unreservedly yielded to him! And does he abide within you and possess your entire being? Is he both Saviour and Sanctifier to you—this wonderful Christ of experience?

Preaching in London the late Dr. A. B. Simpson, said: "Some twenty-seven years ago I floundered for ten months in the waters of despondency, and I got out of them just by believing in Jesus as my Saviour. About twelve years ago I got into another deep experience of conviction, and I got out of that by believing in Jesus as my Sanctifier." Elsewhere he speaks of that second experience in these words: "I look back with unutterable gratitude to the lonely and sorrowful night when, mistaken in many things and imperfect in all, and not knowing but that it would be death in the most literal sense before the morning light, my heart's full consecration was made, and with unserved surrender I first could say,

'Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow Thee;
Destitute, despised, forsaken,
Thou from hence my All shall be.'

O Christian, living somewhere this side of the blessed place where "Christ is all," let this simple message, caught out of the voiceful air, drive you to your knees. Make Jesus Christ your high and holy Altar and let that Altar sanctify the gift of your yielded self upon it. Then shall you know the joy that sings:

"I am so glad I received Him,
Jesus my heart's dear King;
I who so often have grieved Him,
All to His feet would bring.

"How can I ever be lonely,
How can I ever fall;
What can I want, if only
Christ is my all in all?"

And now I can do more than suggest the development of that second thought—Christ is all. I leave with you three suggestions growing out of the context.

First, Christ will be in all our attitudes, controlling them. Reflect on those virtues which Paul mentions immediately following the text: mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering, forbearance, forgiveness. They fall under two heads; attitudes toward self and attitudes toward others. Toward self: meekness, humility, modesty. Toward others: kindness, forbearance, forgiveness. And, crowning all, the spirit and attitude of love! "Put on love, which is the bond of perfectness."

Second, Christ will be in all our actions, directing them. Verse 17 speaks that thought. "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks unto God and the Father by him." What a splendid doer, what a tireless worker Jesus was! Man of prayer, Man of meditation, Man of dreams and visions, he was also Man of action. And the author of our text was like his Lord. His piety was practical. His holiness was dynamic and beneficent. So it will be with all whom the love of Christ constrains.

You loyal women of the W. C. T. U. may remember that this verse, "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus," was the motto of Frances Willard. It was inscribed by her own hand on the fly-leaf of her Bible. And how she made history, mastered as she was by the master passion of the Master of men! As Whittier puts it:

"She knew the power of banded ill,
But felt that love was stronger still,
And organized for doing good
The world's united womanhood."

Third, Christ will be in all our hopes, fusing them. It is not true that a Christian lives for today. He lives in today, and lives well, but he lives for tomorrow. For a Christian is decidedly and buoyantly a man of hope. What else does Paul mean when he says in the fourth verse: "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

Attitudes, actions, hopes! He controls, directs and sustains them, this Incomparable Christ.

Will you not make him the "all and in all" of your life this morning? Answer Yes, and you shall sing:

"Christ is my meat, Christ is my drink,
My medicine and my health;
My peace, my strength, my joy, my crown,
My glory and my wealth.

"Christ is my Father and my Friend,
My Brother and my Love;
My Bread, my Hope, my Counsellor,
My Advocate above.

"My Christ, He is the Heaven of heavens,
My Christ, what shall I call?
My Christ is first, my Christ is last,
My Christ is All-in-All!"

BUT LEAVES ONLY.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

*****

JESUS had been to Bethany to spend the night with his friends, Mary, Martha and Lazarus, and in the morning as he returned to the city, he hungered, and when he saw a fig tree he sought for fruit to satiate his hunger, but alas, he found on it "but leaves only."

We do not know but what this barren fig tree, or rather this fruitless fig tree, represents a class of people who appear well at a distance, but on close inspection, will be found sadly lacking in the true and substantial elements of real character. Doubtless this tree had fooled many passers-by, with its beautiful foliage, but when the real value was sought, it was deficient. There are many people who live to make themselves attractive to the passers-by; they think if they can gain the attention of the world, their cup of joy will be full, but how empty and unsatisfying are such returns.

Then, too, we have persons who have identified themselves with the church, who are mere wall-flowers; they never contribute anything to the real growth and life of the church, but occasionally fill a small space in one of the pews, decorated with the most gaudy apparel and costly plumage they can afford, and sometimes cannot afford, hoping to attract the attention of those who should be assembled for the worship of God. Yes, such persons are full of the beautiful leaves of the world's adornment, but where is the fruit that should grow on the Christian tree? Where is that for which this hungry old world is longing and looking to the church of Jesus Christ to give? Just as the rank growth of the leaves saps the strength of the tree and makes it unable to bear fruit, so the deep-seated growth of worldliness saps the strength from that which develops the spiritual life and the one who should be a tower of strength in the cause of Christ, is rendered powerless to produce any fruit for the Master with which to feed this famishing world.

SHOWY CHRISTIANS.

Do any of our readers remember to have come across any of these "showy" Christians? Those who, when they start to church on Sunday morning, seem to be more on dress parade, than going to the house of God? Well, these are human (fig-ures) fig trees which appear beautiful from a distance but in their branches are jewels of gold and costly apparel, instead of the fruits of righteousness which the Master is seeking for in the lives of his followers. We are told, as children of the King, to be adorned with good works, which becometh women professing godliness. It was Lord Bacon who said, "Woman least adorned, was most adorned," but it seems in these days of craze after fashion, that we could more consistently say, "Woman in fashion's hideous garb" is most admired (by the world), but when a true woman is sought, the one in gaudy attire and shameless face is not considered for one moment. When we see how unsightly some of our sex appear on the street, and how they seem to be a walking temptation to the passers-by, we are almost ashamed that we are sisters by creation, and want to hie away that we might blush for them.

We talk about the need of revivals, but it seems to us we are in sore need of a revival of common sense, womanly modesty, and ideals above those of the fashion plate, among the female portion of our civilization. It is no wonder that we have so few homes in this our day, when the shallow-brained, street-gadding, midnight-roving, half-dressed misses of today are to be the mothers of tomorrow. It was said of France once, that she needed mothers, and so it may as truly be said of America, only with more emphasis. We hear it often said that the country needs men, but there have to be mothers lest we lack true men. A generation of mothers of the Susanna Wesley type, who feel their highest duty on earth is to train their children in the paths of rectitude and right, would mean a revolution in this or any other country. There is no higher calling, than that of shaping the destiny of immortal souls committed to our care, and we would whisper into the ears of the honest-souled, true-hearted mothers who may chance to read these lines, be true to your trust in training your children for God and a life of usefulness, and after while when the final balances are made, you will be surprised at the many sheaves which will be laid at the Master's feet, to your account, because you acted a true mother's part.

Easter Time is an Opportune Time.

It is not like Christmas when one is expecting and receiving lots of gifts, but it is a celebration of the resurrection of our Lord when a gift may be effectively made in his name.

It may be there is some faithful young person whom you want to reward, at the same time place something in that one's hands that he or she will appreciate, keep, and that may eventually prove the means of their salvation.

A beautiful edition of the Bible is accepted with a peculiar degree of reverence and appreciation; and the attractiveness and charm of the edition make one appreciate it more, study it better and hold onto it longer.

We have been selling Bibles for over 30 years, but the one we offer you now is the prettiest, most readable, most convenient to handle and carry, most exquisitely bound volume for the price that we have ever been able to obtain. The Bible is small enough for a child, and the type large enough for an old person. It is the King James Version, has the references, concordance, is self-pronouncing and has a few of the best helps obtainable.

One of our out-of-town customers paid our office a visit, saw one of these Bibles, examined it, inquired as to the price, thought it a wonderful bargain and bought it; she later returned and said she had never had so much pleasure in owning a Bible. A minister saw one, and was so delighted that he purchased a copy for each member of his family. We displayed a number of them at a camp meeting, and they were every one soon sold, although we had 20 other kinds there.

This Bible is sold regularly on the market today at $8.50, but by having a very large edition made up, also by sharing our profit with our customers, we are enabled to offer it for $5.00. Don't fail to give at least one copy this Easter, and we believe you will find it will tell for good now and for eternity. Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

Man! It is hidden manna the people want; not hidden meaning.

FROM CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS.

Not long since the writer was in company with a worker and officer in the church and we were talking along this line of real Christ-like living, as we believed it. We asked him if he was really in trouble about his standing with his Lord and wanted some one to pray for him. How many men in his church (of which there are many) could he think of, whom he would call on for that prayer? His answer was "only two." Our surprise led us to ask why, only two? His answer was, "Because, from outside appearance as to a Christlike Christian life the rest of them (like myself) needs to be prayed for." This man was serious and sincere and did not express himself this way on account of anything personal between him and his brethren, but as he honestly weighed the question, not only pertaining to others, but himself also.

What your scribe is trying to get before those who may read his rambling letter is, can we with our profession of faith in Christ and his abiding presence with us invite him to go with us to the dance hall, just merely to watch others dance? Or to a great majority of the picture shows, (many times Sundays not excepted?) or to the bathing reviews on Sunday? Or to our places of business on Sunday to put in a part, if not all day, at work? Or to stay away from church and listen at the radio? And then, when our rounds are completed, turn to the Master and say, "Blessed Lord, did not our hearts burn within us as we saw and talked by the way?" Now honestly, could we in the light of revelation expect our Lord to be there to answer our question?

INQUIRER.

WHAT IS A CHRISTIAN?

REV. HENRY T. SCHOLL, D. D.

ON Jan. 18, 1931, I was present at the North Congregational Church, Middletown, N. Y. I am reckoned among the worshippers there quite often. On the morning aforesaid the sermon was in answer to the question of my caption, What is a Christian. The answer was triple. If you are a Christian, Christ is the chief Executive of your life; your life-movement is perceptibly upward; and you have consecrated your all to Jesus as Lord.

In a recent letter to a young school girl, I had this to say: "I note that you are a Christian. My idea of a Christian is one who lovingly and loyally lives habitually for Christ, and in whose heart Christ make his home." To this may be added a profession, and a petition.

"Lord, I am Thine, entirely Thine,
Purchased and saved by blood divine.
With full consent Thine will I be,
And own Thy sovereign right to me."

"Have Thine own way, Lord,
Have Thine own way!
Hold o'er my being Absolute sway.
Fill with Thy Spirit
Till all may see
Christ only, always Dwelling in me."

We need to remember that a Christian, like a poet, is born, not self-made. Much may be correctly credited to a man who is not a Christian. By the way of illustration, take the story of Nicodemus as recorded in John 3:1-13. He was a member of the Sanhedrin; conspicuous as a teacher, and a prominent Pharisee. Like other Pharisees he was laudably patriotic. He was schooled in Scripture from youth, and was strict in conforming to the teaching thereof. He was a man of prayer; private and public. He was commendably regular in attending synagogue services, of which in Jerusalem alone there were 460. He tithed his income scrupulously, observed the Sabbath strictly, and was painstakingly evangelistic. Withal, at the time of his night talk with Jesus, he was unsaved, for he had not been graced with the birth from above, birth by water and the Spirit.

This birth certifies the individual's justification, and his start in the life pursuit of that "holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. 12:14). The new birth has its inception when we individually center loving trust on Jesus as Lord, and loyally receive him as King of our lives. (Gal. 5:6; John 1:12). This has become possible and actual "because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth." (2 Thess. 2:13). Compare with this the phrasing of 1 Peter 1:2. "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ."

And now may "the God of peace make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory for ever and ever, Amen (Heb. 13:20-21).

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dries do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

Thomas Edison, in a statement in the Union Signal said: "Prohibition Enforcement is at least 60% and is gaining, notwithstanding the contrary impression through false propaganda."

PRODUCT AND BY-PRODUCT.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

SOME years ago, we heard not a little about "the by-product of missions," meaning the temporal betterment of the people of China, India, etc., as an indirect result of Christian missions in those lands. That is very real, and not to be disparaged. To eliminate foot-binding, child-marriage, killing girl babies, burning widows, etc., is an inestimable blessing to those peoples. Then, our western methods of agriculture, sewerage, sanitation, surgery, etc., have been of incalculable good to them. The soil and climate of those lands render them capable of indefinite development in producing food and other necessities of life; and when the people know how to work and manage, they need not live in filth, and always on the ragged edge of famine.

When the Europeans came to America, two or three million Indians had a precarious existence here. Now, on the same territory, and with the same natural resources, 120 millions live in plenty, comfort and even luxury; and we help to supply the world with our surplus. The difference lies in the stimulating effect of the gospel of Christ upon us, through generations before us, and now. Give the peoples of China, India, Africa a century of the real gospel, and what would not follow with them?

And all that is merely the incidental by-product of the gospel, not its primary and chief work. Yet, how many, right here in our own land, are content to enjoy the by-products, and will not avail themselves of salvation from sin by the power of God, through the gospel of Christ! Not only so, but, both at home and in the foreign mission fields, the churches are mostly majoring on the by-product of "religious education," instead of salvation evangelism. The present activities of the churches are mostly directed to "the life that now is," rather than to "that which is to come"; ignoring the fact that the latter is the real gospel goal, while the former is thrown in for good measure. But, so-called religious leaders boldly say, "Make the most of this life while you have it, we don't know about the future"! Alas! alas! "What shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

A sermon on "the background of life," dealt with only what the speaker called "the foreground of life," the things that now are. The background would have been the prospect of eternal life, but that was merely named. The substance of a half hour of intense talk was about this: You are not just a thing; you are a personality! Rise up in your might, meet the problems of life, and be victor! Nothing about sin, or repentance for sin, or pardon of sin, or the new birth by the Holy Spirit! Nothing of salvation from sin through Christ now and here, the fitness for heaven forever!

Each of the 120 million people in the United States shares in the comforts of our high Christian civilization. There are more than 20 million automobiles, three fourths of all in the world. Most of them are necessary and useful, many of them are only luxuries, often beyond the ability of the owners. How many million radios? All luxuries, rather than necessities. How many million people avail themselves of the moving pictures, a wonderful invention, once to five or six times a week; looking and listening at scenes of vulgarity and lewdness, or hate and crime? How many millions engage in the lustful, voluptuous dance? But for the quickening effect of the gospel upon our forebears and ourselves, during generations, none of these and other scientific inventions would be at our command. They are the by-products of the gospel, and are made the major thing by a vast majority of the people. With all their great possibilities for good, they are perverted to evil use.

Is this what Jesus died for? Is this the best that Christian America has to give to the pagan nations? Not so surprising that some want to salvage the good that is in the pagan creeds!

Serenity is good—excellent—when something else is not best.

Don't Forget

To order a copy of that wonderful book, Arnold's Practical Commentary, which is one of the most concise, instructive helps in studying the Sunday school lessons you will find. It has instruction for every department of the Sunday school, from Primary to Adult classes, and each is equally helpful and instructive. I think I am safe in saying that we sell more of these Commentaries than any other we handle. Order at once, so that you may get the full benefit of its helps for your Sunday school preparation. The price is another interesting feature—only $1.00 postpaid. Pentecostal Publishing Co., can furnish you with it.

Preachers had better keep off the thin ice. There is plenty of "safe" in Sermon Book Park.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

ASBURY FOREIGN MISSIONARY TEAM.

Dear Friends of The Herald Family:

In our last letter we told of the beginning of a two-weeks' union campaign in Peking. Before entering upon the work of revival we had opportunity to visit many of the outstanding monuments of old Chinese art, in the form of temples, palaces, amusement grounds, and tombs, which adorn this classic city, as well as the adjacent country side, for a radius of twenty-five miles. We were greatly impressed with the state of decay into which many of these renowned structures had fallen, but we later discovered that the spiritual decay of some of the Christian organizations was even greater. During the first four days of the meetings there seemed to be a rising interest with greatly increasing crowds. On the fifth day frigid winds from the Gobi Desert swept down on us, covering the city with great clouds of yellow dust, and reducing the temperature to ten below zero. This sudden change not only diminished the congregation, but served as a blast from hell to chill the revival fervor from the hearts of many who had manifested concern in the beginning.

The next five days proved to be the hardest test of our experience in the Orient. After two days the weather cleared, but the church remained only two-thirds full at the main services. Though most of the leading churches had pledged their support, almost all continued with a full program of their own activities. The people were unaccustomed to altar services, and didn't know what to make of them. Many thought that we were tongues preachers and watched us nervously, expecting that at any minute we would lead the seekers into some form of fanaticism. The Christian schools were in the process of examinations and the young people must study—even on Sundays. Some who had been most hopeful in the beginning threw up the white flag and said that we had done all that we could do. But, thank God, a few became desperate and prayed.

On Thursday night of the last week the break came. Under the powerful conviction of the Holy Spirit, little effort was needed to fill the front of the church with earnest penitent souls. Night after night the congregation swelled until the church was filled to capacity. Every altar service was a time of glorious victory. The presence of the Holy Ghost was unusually manifested from the beginning of each meeting to the close. A spirit of prayer and concern for the lost seemed ever present. The afternoon holiness meetings were well attended. When the closing day came, they wanted to continue on. Praise God for a real old-time revival.

Throughout this intensive program of sixty services in fifteen days, many were the blessings which lightened our burdens. Foremost among these was the sterling work and happy fellowship of Brother Cecil Troxel, representative of the National Holiness Association, upon whose capable shoulders fell the trying task of manipulating the intricate details, as well as sharing the taxing work of interpretation. His zeal for souls, combined with his mastery of the Chinese language, has characterized him as the outstanding evangelist of North China, in the minds of many. We also owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Kok of the Dutch legation, whose burden for the lost in Peking was largely responsible for our being there. It is most out of the ordinary to find a diplomat who is more concerned for the business of the Kingdom of God than for the affairs of the temporal kingdom he represents.

Our immediate program takes us to Hong Kong, Macao, and Manila, for a few days' meetings in each place, after which we will take ship for India. Our address there will be care Mrs. Ada Lee, 13 Wellington Square, Calcutta. Pray for us.

REPORT.

This has been one of the hardest years of my ministry as to strenuous labor, but one of great victories and am now looking forward to help redeem men from their lost estate in this present new year.

Since our last report we have assisted in five very successful revivals. In Greenville, S. C., we labored hard for two weeks with A. E. Smith, pastor, and C. O. Dorn, evangelist. Crowds and interest grew at a rapid rate. Over one hundred bowed at an altar of prayer in the evening services. The junior work was an interesting and profitable part of the campaign. Under the direction of Mrs. Lewis and myself, we often had 300 children in attendance at the afternoon services. Altar services were held and many accepted Christ. We feel that the younger generation will never get away from the influences of these services. Mrs. C. O. Dorn rendered valuable assistance in this work.

Brothers Dorn and Smith are men of God, untiring in their efforts to point lost men and women to Christ.

Our next meeting was in Lyman, S. C., with R. H. Chambers, pastor of the Methodist Church. In all of our revivals don't believe I have ever seen a church built up and helped in such a short time. God honored the faithful messages of Bro. Chambers, and night after night the altar was filled with his church. Crowds were often forced to stand outside because of lack of seating space for the great numbers who attended. The children's work grew with the revival and whole families gave their hearts to God. The conversion and reclamation of nearly one hundred greatly stimulated the activity of the church.

The M. E. Church, High Bridge, N. J., with B. W. Gilbert, pastor and preacher, was our next field of service. The pastor had not only carefully planned his work but had made great preparations for the meeting so that by the first Sunday the services were having a telling effect. The altars were filled and a number saved. The junior and young people's work was a pleasure and a finer group can be found nowhere. Results were most gratifying.

As this report is becoming lengthy will only mention one more meeting which was in Seventh Avenue M. E. Church, Huntington, W. Va., with Dr. E. J. Westfall, pastor and B. C. Gamble evangelist. This was a hard but very successful meeting. Never has it been my pleasure to work with men more devoted to the word of God. The work grew. Great numbers were saved and filled with the Spirit. Many homes were touched through the children's services in which services the attendance reached on to two hundred.

May God bless The Herald family and keep you to the end. Please pray for us who are on the field working for souls. M. V. Lewis and Wife.

FAIRFIELD, ILLINOIS.

Fairfield is a most beautiful little city with some four thousand population. There are seven or eight denominations with church buildings in this town. The Methodists have two congregations with nearly a thousand members. First Church has a membership of nearly six hundred. Their church building is easily one of the best for its size in all of Methodism. It was built seven years ago and meets the every need of the present day. The main auditorium seats approximately six hundred with readily accessible annex adding fully four hundred more.

The Rev. Roy N. Kean is pastor of this church. His definite call to the ministry and genuine Christian experience together with a personality beaming with radiance of love for Christ and lost souls makes him easily one of the finest men it has ever been our privilege to help in revival work.

Dr. L. R. Akers was scheduled to hold this meeting but owing to the heavy burdens at Asbury College and his impaired physical condition the writer was asked to go in his stead. This change was made on Saturday noon. We left Wilmore at six o'clock that evening arriving in Fairfield next morning uninvited and unexpected. A telegram announcing the change arrived after we had first met Dr. Kean. The reception he and his church gave this evangelist could not have been more genuine and the co-operation more beautiful had we been looked and planned for for months in advance. From the first service the revival was on. No time was lost in getting acquainted. Thus a pastor and his good people cheerfully accepted whatever fate there might have been in the shift of workers gracefully. The meeting ran for two weeks. Great crowds came. The pastors of every church in town were there. The altar was filled many times with seekers. The church organization there is ninety-nine years old. On the closing Sunday morning a young man who had carried county and district honors in High School came to the altar, was converted, united with the church and publicly professed a call to enter the ministry. Around him gathered his father, mother, two sisters and all the official family of the church. It was a most wonderful scene. Thus the first to enter the ministry directly from this church came as climax at the close of the revival. There will be three or four young people in due time enter Asbury College. Probably some of these will become missionaries.

On the afternoon of the closing Sunday after we had preached there was organized a "Fairfield Civic Association" with nearly three hundred people present. Among them lawyers, prosecuting attorney, ex-judges, business men and good women not a few. Dancing, card playing, and cigarette smoking had made great inroads upon the lives of the young people there. Alarmed ministers, officials and citizens hailed the opportunity to thus start a movement for a general clean-up program.

We never had greater liberty in preaching full salvation in our life. Satan was stirred on many lines and entered formal and severe protest. The noble pastor stood like adamant with us in presenting the truth and combating all sin. The meeting closed mid triumph and great assurance. The days of real revivals is not over. People are still hungry for and God honors the preaching of his full gospel. O. H. Callis.

A MISSIONARY TOUR.

No. 2.

Perhaps you would appreciate another report of our travels in the Orient. Our last report was written in the midst of the Tokio convention. It was held in the Bible Training Institute, the auditorium seating about 1500. It was certainly inspiring to see them by the hundreds—some prostrate on their faces, others kneeling erect, and still others standing and swaying back and forth, all in earnest supplication, either for themselves direct, or the salvation of their people.

On Sunday afternoon Bishop Nakada asked for a collection of 500 yen to send a native preacher back to Formosa to work among his people, the notorious head-hunters. This young man's former ambition was that he might present to his father-in-law twenty heads, in order to get his daughter; but now he declares he wants to present to Jesus, his Savior, at least that many souls. Now, to see him pray and weep affected me so that I pledged his support for one year. Instead of raising 500 yen the offering amounted to more than 1200 yen. This is the way the Japanese people do things.

From here we went for a short convention to Brother Abel's new church, known as the Missionary Bands. He and his noble daughter are doing a wonderful work, while his wife and smaller children are in America. Talk about consecration! They have it, for they do not expect to see each other for two or three years. He is going a great work, though not as large as the Oriental Missionary Society. When we left, many of these devout and courteous people followed us to the depot where they sang and wept with us as we separated. O how we long to return, and they likewise look forward to our coming. And we are planning now on doing so in 1932, taking wife and Esther along.

Our next stop was at Kobe in a union meeting with five churches, the Nazarenes, Japan Evangelistic Band, the Oriental Missionary Society Holiness Church, and two Free Methodist churches. This likewise was an intense convention. O how those dear people did sing, clap their hands and pray. Their eagerness compelled us to do our best in preaching. They come for miles through the cold and then sit for two hours on their feet on the floor and do not weary. Upon leaving they did as the early Christians when Paul left Miletus. They followed us to the boat and in a long line sang and shouted us off. Of course the last request was that we should return and stay longer. Son Everett, is so taken with their sincerity and simplicity that he feels like returning.

After more than two days sailing we arrived in dark, bleeding, superstitious China. At present we are in the Bible School of the Oriental Missionary Society at Shanghai for a five day convention. We will write more about this great and needy field in our next letter.

Yours for a clean and aggressive work.
E. E. Shelhamer.

OWENSBORO, KENTUCKY.

We are now in one of the greatest revivals in the history of Breckenridge Street Methodist Church, Owensboro, Ky. We have capacity crowds each night. To date we have twenty conversions or reclamations. The church has been lifted to a higher plane of spirituality.

The writer is song leader and we have a large choir and the congregation has responded in a beautiful way to our leadership. Rev. J. A. Collier is doing the preaching. Bro. Collier is one of the outstanding evangelists of our Church with fifteen years of experience. God has wonderfully blessed his labors in the salvation of thousands of souls. Bro. Collier is a safe, sane, sound gospel soul winner. He has an open date March 22 to April 19. Any one desiring evangelistic help would make no mistake in securing him for evangelistic work. His permanent address is 1415 Forrest Ave., Nashville, Tenn. We are expecting far greater results before the closing service Sunday night.

A. C. Bowles.

WEST LIBERTY, OHIO.

We have just closed a good meeting in the M. E. Church, West Liberty, Ohio, Rev. A. E. Grant, Pastor. We could have had a much better meeting if we could have stayed longer. We were there only fourteen days, still many said it was the greatest meeting they had seen in that town in many years. Bro. Grant is the greatest pastor, in many ways, I ever labored with. He is on the go from early morn until deep in the night. He has brought the work up from 1000 to 1800 in three years.

We are now in what promises to be a great revival at Barlow Church on my work. We want the prayers of all who read this that God will give us wonderful victory in all of our revival efforts. I have one open date I would be glad to close up with some one who wants an old-fashioned meeting in the old-fashioned way. The date I can give is from March 9 to 29. Do not call me for this date unless you want an old-time revival, for time is too precious and you see I can stay with you over three Sundays, and in that time we ought to have a great ingathering of souls. Let us have one more great awakening before Jesus comes. He is coming soon; let's stay on the job and get as many ready as possible for his coming. T. P. Roberts.

the church with children, who ought to be regenerated, on Decision Day. If we want the blessing of God upon us we must go back to that fundamental teaching of Jesus in which he declares that it is impossible to enter the kingdom of God without being born again.

Many pastors have found out that they can keep their church membership by the ingathering of Decision Day and Easter. They have quit the protracted meeting method; not only so, but they have comforted themselves with the foolish and false assertion that the days of revivals have passed. We will not bring on a revival by getting brilliant young experts, just graduated from Yale University, and putting them in charge of the young people of the church to ridicule the altar of prayer, and sneer at true repentance as "sob stuff." If I were a pastor I would no more turn my people over to one of these bright youngsters, than I would detail them to retail moonshine liquor. If my church board forced one on me I'd quit the church, stand on the street corner and preach the coming wrath of God on backslidden churches and false teachers in the pulpit.

We will not bring on a revival by electing to the office of bishop, men who pride themselves in questioning the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, and telling us that we must cultivate Christian fellowship for our brethren who do not believe in the virgin birth and resurrection of our Lord. Such men roaming the country, on big salaries and scattering skepticism make a great revival in the church impossible. They are a curse and a blight to saving faith and spiritual life.

You may be sure that we will not have a gracious, God-sent revival brought down from heaven by the preaching and prayers of the modernists. Down in their hearts, they look back with a bit of contempt on the great revival of the Wesleys. Many of them do not believe in the necessity of regeneration. They know nothing of the joy of the salvation through the atoning blood of Christ, and they can't, and will not, preach true repentance and saving faith.

We have a much larger following of H. E. Fosdick in this country, in Methodism north and south, than is generally known. While he has denied the pre-existence, virgin birth, and resurrection of our Lord Jesus, which is

THE HERALD FOR THE PREACHERS.

We have a proposition to make to the Lord's zealous people for the spread of scriptural holiness. We propose to bear one-third of the expense of sending The Herald for one year to ministers of the gospel. We especially like to send The Herald to young preachers.

If some friend of the Lord and The Herald and the preachers will send us one dollar with the name and address of the preacher to whom you wish The Herald sent, we shall assume the responsibility for the extra 50 cents, and the paper will go to the preacher free of any charge to him.

I met a fine preacher in California the past winter who came up and gave me a very warm, brotherly hand-grasp at the close of the sermon, and said, "Some one sent me The Pentecostal Herald. I do not know who sent it but it made me mad every time it came, but I read it. I saw and felt the truth it contained, and as I read it from week to week, my prejudices were conquered and my heart got very hungry. I sought entire sanctification and received the blessing. I am very grateful to you and to whoever sent me The Herald."

There are many ministers who might give a testimony like this. Send in the dollar and the name of the minister to whom you wish the paper sent. If you should like to send the paper to more than one enclose the money and addresses. In these perilous times let us do all we can to spread the gospel of a full salvation.

Faithfully, your brother,
H. C. Morrison.

bald infidelity, numbers of preachers have shouted his praise, and pointed him out as a great religious teacher, and while they will tell you that they do not exactly agree with him, that we have come to an intellectual and liberal age, we must forsake dogmatism and be liberal in our religious teachings and views. These men, if they were ever converted, are backsliders. It may be the younger generations of them were taken into the church on Decision Day and have never known anything of repentance and regenerating power.

One of the most imperative revivals needed in this nation is the mighty power of God that will bring our ministry back to the Bible and to the foot of the cross, to a mighty baptism with the Holy Ghost, and the regeneration of countless thousands of unregenerated people who have been brought into the church. Then we would be prepared, armed and equipped with power from on high, to shake the sinful world and make the godless multitudes to cry out, "Men and brethren, what must we do to be saved?"

Revivals often break out in unthought-of places and are produced by means we had not thought of. May I tell a story to illustrate this thought: I was once called by a pastor to assist him in a revival. In the congregation was the most prominent woman in the city, the wife of a great judge, the sister of a United States Senator, the mother of a Governor. The pastor said to me, that, while she was a member of another church, which had about dried up, in the town, she was manifesting earnest desires for a real spiritual life. As I walked with my wife, to the place of entertainment, I said, "If we can get that woman to come to the altar and give her heart to God, get blessed and stand up and give her testimony, it will stir this city, and we'll have a mighty victory." And I earnestly prayed that this might come to pass.

The meetings went on and one afternoon after I had preached, a plain looking girl got up and said, "I am a member of the church, but my heart isn't right. I am not living right with my Christ. I need to be blessed, and want to be prayed for." She came weeping to the altar. Her words were so simple and earnest that they moved the audience. We knelt around her and had some as good "sob stuff" as you could wish to see. We poured out our hearts to God and after a short struggle, she arose, without excitement, but with shining face, and gave a testimony that no one could question. It turned out that she was a poor girl from a cabin in a briar patch in the country, cooking and washing for a family in town to help support her parents. She had worked for several families, and was so honest, industrious and kind that she was well known about the town and community and highly respected. When the benediction was pronounced, the people crowded about her, shook hands with her, and asked her to pray for them. Two of the leading stewards of the church took me by the hand and said, "If that good girl needs to go to the altar, all the rest of us need to go." I hardly ever saw an audience so moved by one person receiving the gracious anointing from the Lord. Her testimony, her coming to the altar and receiving of the blessing, was the table-talk all about the little city.

The house was packed with serious people that night; there was as fine shooting as I ever had, from the pulpit. The truth hit the target and people bowed their heads under conviction. The revival broke out; we had to move out of the church to the courthouse for room, and after many souls had been saved, the distinguished woman of whom I have spoken, slipped quietly to the altar one night, and was graciously blessed. The people congratulated her, but she did not attract any special attention, only persons remarked that they were glad "Mrs. So and So got saved." I believe they said she had been converted before, and that now she professed sanctification. I heard from her afterward, and she was living the beautiful life in the Canaan of perfect love.

You say, the writer is wandering about. Exactly so; that's the object of this editorial from this, to wander about, that and the other thing. A half century ago a great revival stood on the front doorstep of Methodism in this nation. It was one of the old Wesleyan brand; and offered regenerating grace to sinners, and sanctifying power to Christians. The doors were closed against it; it had to go to brush arbors, tents, bad-smelling old upstairs halls. Many local preachers who dared attend meetings held in the woods were refused the renewal of their license. Pastors who participated were punished by being sent to the hardest places that could be found for them. Any one who denies these statements is either ignorant of conditions that prevailed, or is unafraid to speak falsehood. This writer was in the midst of these things and knows, personally, of much that occurred, and could disclose some startling stories about the prominent leaders in the spirit of opposition, and sometimes, persecution. Under such circumstances, it was quite natural that unworthy leaders should appear, fanaticism should manifest itself, and real hurt should come to communities where, otherwise, there would have been harvests of souls.

In the beginnings of the great movement, God offered to Methodism such a revival as this nation and the world have never known. If the leaders of the church had have given themselves wholly to the Lord and guided this movement, the results in the homeland and mission fields would have been beyond the possibility of computation.

If we are to have a revival, it must be wrought by the Holy Spirit. Somebody, or group of persons, must receive the gracious baptism, their souls must flame with power from on high; they must have a desire for the salvation of sinners, which can only be inwrought by the Holy Ghost. They must not be shut out of the churches, even if they are not graduates of Chicago University. Even if they have not been taught how to preach at summer schools by Shailer Matthews and Dr Fosdick. Even if they become so earnest that that group of women in our churches who have their card parties, regard them as ranters. No group of ecclesiastics can take charge of the Holy Spirit and direct and control his operations. He is very likely to do things in a way that we had not planned. He is likely to bring down the high ones and lift up the low ones. How remarkable that Jesus Christ should have chosen twelve disciples who could not pass the written examinations of any Methodist Conference. This is not belittling the disciples, and it is not saying that we should not have good standards of examination, but you needn't prate about revivals and put skeptical books in your Course of Study for young preachers, and create an atmosphere that advances to positions of influence and reward those tainted with modernism, and relegate the devout, earnest men of God to second and third rate appointments.

If Methodism wants a revival let her come back to the doctrines and experiences proclaimed and written in the Holy Scriptures, and so faithfully preached by those mighty men of God who brought Methodism into existence.

The Best Investment.

The very best way to evangelize any of those countries in the Orient, which we have become accustomed to call "heathen," is to bring some of the finest specimens of their young men to this country, educate them, get them soundly regenerated, graciously sanctified and Spirit-filled, and send them back to their homelands to win their relatives and fellowbeings to Christ.

Asbury College has had wonderful success in this good work. The young men from China, Korea, Philippine Islands and Japan, who have been educated in Asbury College and sent back to their homelands, have been wonderfully successful in winning their people to Christ. In some instances their success has been marvelous.

We have at this time some of these foreign students in Asbury College who cannot get the benefits of the institution without assistance. If the friends who are interested in the spread of the gospel in these needy oriental fields will give some assistance to these worthy students it will be highly appreciated, and it will be casting bread upon the waters which will be gathered up with gratitude on foreign shores. Send your donations to Mrs. H. C. Morrison, care PENTECOSTAL HERALD, Louisville, Ky., and it will be carefully administered.

Faithfully your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

The Greatest Moral War.

We are now in the throes of the greatest moral war ever fought in these United States. The demon of liquor is making a tremendous assault upon the manhood, womanhood, childhood, home, church, schools, health, peace, prosperity and sobriety of this nation. Strong drink is the bitterest foe of God and humanity. This year this paper will fight the liquor demon to the last ditch. No compromise, no armistice and no quarters. We do not believe the friends of the liquor traffic are fit for church membership, or fit to make laws or enforce them.

Two of the greatest organized forces against liquor are the Anti-Saloon League and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. These organizations ought to have the support of all good citizens, everywhere. The women of this country ought to join the W. C. T. U. by the million. Enough of this white ribbon army could and would smash the bloody hosts of the liquor traffic to atoms and trample them into the mud of their own low ideals. We are in hearty sympathy with a resolution adopted by the National Convention of the W. C. T. U. in their recent convention in Houston, Tex. It reads as follows:

"We reaffirm our position taken in the last presidential campaign in favor of a dry plank in party platforms. We will oppose any and all political parties adopting a modification or a repeal plank. We declare our determination to support candidates who, by personal example, public acts and public utterances show themselves the friends of prohibition."

There you are! That is speaking to the point. This resolution went through without a dissenting vote. Women, join the W. C. T. U. by the million. Christian men, take a position equal to the resolution above quoted and we are sure of victory over the lowest, bloodiest, dirtiest, most selfish enemy of Christ and humanity.

THE SUPREME COMMAND.

REV. C. W. BUTLER.

*****

"Be ye holy, for I am holy." 1 Pet. 1:16.

N the days when Rome was mistress of the world because of the great national highways leading to the city it became a proverb that "all roads lead to Rome."

The text which heads this article reminds me of this proverb. It is the Rome of Scripture. The command of this text is so comprehensive in the realm of moral values that all other commands converge into the vortex of its holy content. All high purposes, all worthy ambitions, all holy impulses are held within the limits of its noble sway. It is the supreme command of God to man. It grows out of, and is based upon the highest fact we know about God himself, namely, that he is holy. It expresses the highest purpose of God for all his moral creatures. There can be nothing higher in the realm of possible human thinking. God has no higher standard for angels or heaven than holiness.

Some one has said in speaking of the holiness of God that when we predicate holiness of God we do not so much speak of one of his attributes as the totality of his character. The holiness of God is the standard by which all moral values must be measured. Because he is holy he made angels holy, and because he is holy he made men holy.

When providing redemption for a lost and ruined race he could do no less than provide a moral restoration which would include in its quality moral likeness unto himself. Thus he has purposed, provided for, and commanded that we as subjects of redemption should be holy. In the initial of this experience there is involved fitness for the presence of God. In its possession there is preparation for the enjoyment of God and all he has prepared for them that love him.

In the moral realm holiness is absolute truth. It is ultimate reality. It is the abiding or eternal fact. Beyond it no one can ever go, but in its possession all moral beings can live and advance forever. Holiness is compassed by the eternal will of God. The infinite will is unbounded, unmeasured, absolute and eternal, within the limits of which all moral beings can live and move and enjoy God in the highest freedom of moral perfection. Man may lift to supernal heights of glory yet to be revealed, but he will still be within the limits of the infinite will of the holy God.

Holiness is moral likeness to God. It involves the whole man, body, soul and spirit, intellect, affections, and will. It involves deliverance not only from the guilt and pollution of sin but from the very nature of sin itself. It is the eradication of sin. This, however, expresses but one side of its glorious reality.

It is the gift of righteousness by faith, a moral deposit in human nature. It restores the crown of honor with which God created man so that there is power for self-mastery and world conquest. It begets in us a moral sensitiveness of soul. We shrink from sin and are pained to feel it near. There is also in it a moral inclusiveness. It burns with the fire of holy compassion. It is an active moral force. It assimilates and permeates with its own nature that which it does not destroy.

Holiness is the standard of man's original creation, and is therefore the restoring of man through redemptive agencies, to his native clime, to his own truly normal condition. It empowers one to utilize his environment and build holy character in spite of untoward surroundings or circumstances. We must be perfected in this grace, in this life, in order to be prepared to meet the test of judgment, for the standard by which God created man originally is the standard by which he will judge him ultimately.

The possession of this grace prepares one so that there will be no fear of judgment because "as he is so are we in this world." This being the supreme command, expressing the highest purpose of God, does not, however, place it beyond the reach of man here and now. It is God's purpose and command for redeemed man and that which he has purposed and commanded he has fully provided and placed at the disposal of the redeemed subject who will yield himself wholly to his will, simply trusting the merit and efficacy of the cleansing blood of Jesus Christ. May this be your experience now and forever.

What Think Ye Of Christ? Whose Son Is He?

The above is the title of a very interesting booklet from the pen of H. C. Morrison, editor of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, in which he presents a strong argument for the virgin birth and deity of our Lord Jesus. Literature of this kind should be largely circulated; much skeptical literature is going the rounds and this ought to be helpful to young people, preachers, Sunday school teachers and religious workers. We bespeak for it a wide reading. The booklet is gotten up in very neat and attractive form and may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for 15 cents, 7 for $1.00, $10.00 per 100.

Not Easter Eggs, But the Bible.

Many children look upon Easter as a time to get Easter eggs, but we want to suggest that along with the eggs you place in their hands a beautiful little child's Bible. You will be surprised how much they will cherish it, read it, and pride themselves on being the owner of a Bible.

We have a beautiful little edition, just the right size, bound in leather with the overlapping edges, stamped in gold on the back and backbone, red under the gold edges, and with about 20 most excellent Bible helps suitable for children. The size, 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 in. thick, and weighs 11 ozs.

Instead of having a dozen different kinds of child's Bibles, we make a specialty of this one, and by having them made up in very large quantities we are enabled to sell a $2.50 value for $1.50, postpaid.

PENTECOSTAL PUBLISHING COMPANY,

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

THE GREATEST SHIP EVER BUILT.

Mrs. Geneva Mendenhall.

Long, long ago, when the world was very young, God looked down on the people he had made and saw how evil they had become. Then God said, "I will take away all men from the earth, because they are evil, and evil continually." But while most of the people were very wicked, God found one good man. His name was Noah. God spoke to Noah and told him that all the people were to be destroyed from the face of the earth, but he told Noah how he could save his own life and those of his family. He was to build a great ship, very long, very wide, and very deep, like a big house with a roof over it.

Noah did what God told him to do, although the people about him thought it very strange to build such a big ship when there was no water for it to float on. They all laughed at Noah and made much sport of him, but he worked steadily away, paying them no attention.

At last the Ark was finished, and he and his wife, and his three sons and their wives went into this strange ship. Then God brought to the door of the Ark birds, animals and creeping things of all kinds. Noah and his sons led them inside and made places for them and stored away a great deal of food for them.

When all was ready, the big door was put up and fastened shut so that no one else might enter. Before long it began to rain, gently at first, but getting harder and harder until the creeks swelled beyond their banks, the rivers overflowed across the plain, until finally even the hills were covered and all the people were drowned. Even the mountains were covered, until not only the people, but all the animals, tame and wild, were drowned, too. For forty days and forty nights the rain poured down until there was no breath of life left on the whole earth except those in the Ark.

After the rain stopped, the water stood on the earth for many months, until God sent a strong wind to dry the waters up. After a while the Ark struck the ground and no longer floated. It had landed on a mountain called Ararat. But Noah could not see the land for the door was shut and the only window was in the roof, so after a while he sent out a raven, and though he waited, and waited, the raven never came back. After that he sent out a dove, but it soon returned to the Ark, where it lived for a week before Noah sent it out again. This time it brought the leaf of an olive tree back with it.

So Noah opened the door, and he and all who were with him came out onto the ground after having lived in the Ark for more than a year. His first act was to build an altar and offer a sacrifice and prayer of thanks unto God.

God promised Noah that he would never destroy the earth with water again, and as a sign of this promise, he hung a rainbow in the sky.

Questions.

1. Why did God spare the lives of Noah and his family?
2. What were the names of Noah's three sons?
3. Why did Noah send the birds out before opening the Ark?

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a West Virginia girl join your happy band of cousins? This is my first letter to The Herald. I read the letters from the paper one of my girl friends takes. I am eleven years old. I have brown hair, blue grey eyes, and medium complexion. All you cousins write to me and I'll answer all I can. I am not a Christian and want you to pray for me.

Mary McCutcheon.
Mt. Nebo, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here is a girl from the mountains of old Kentucky asking for a seat with the cousins. I am a reader of The Herald and enjoy all the good things it contains. I live at the county seat of Wolfe Co., and have been giving out literature to the prisoners. I enjoy my work very much, because I am doing it for the Master. I gave up sin and accepted Christ as my Savior July 26, 1928, and since then have been trying to please him in all my ways. Aunt Bettie, I have written this letter that I might make some pen friends from Kentucky and other states. I am a school girl eighteen years old, five feet, four and one-half inches tall, have dark blue eyes, black hair (long) and weigh about 110 pounds. I would like for boys and girls near my age to write me.

Sarah A. Maloney.
Campton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Louisiana girl become your niece? I live fifteen miles from Crowley, a town in the center of the rice belt. I was twelve years old Jan. 10. I've been reading all the letters on page ten trying to find a cousin having the same date of birth as mine. I joined the Methodist Church on my seventh birthday in the Crowley church. I go to Sunday school all the time. My mother is the Sunday school superintendent. I love the Lord with all my heart, and want to be a missionary when I am grown. I was saved last summer in a meeting in Ellis, in which Bro. W. J. Harney was preacher. It was the best meeting we had ever had and we hope to have him preach again next summer. I would like to correspond with some of the cousins of my age.

Julia Ruth Robertson.
Iota, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a North Carolina boy join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. I am four feet, seven inches tall, have brown eyes, brown hair and fair complexion. I am ten years old, my birthday is Oct. 16. If anybody has my birthday write to me. I am in the fifth grade at school. My teacher is Mrs. H. C. Cashion. Father is a pastor of the M. E. Church at Goodsonville. I have four brothers and three sisters. My oldest brother and sister are in College. I attend Sunday school every Sunday morning and the Junior League at 5 o'clock. I would like to hear from some of the boys and girls of page ten.

Morrison Combs.
Box 133, Goodsonville, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky girl in for a little chat? I am nine years old and in the fifth grade. I love to go to school and also love to go to Sunday school. I belong to the M. E. Church. I think we should all begin while young to work for Jesus, and not wait until we are ready to die. My mother is my Sunday school teacher. We live close to church and we go except when some of us are sick. I have five sisters and four brothers. Two brothers and one sister married. We have such a good time when they come home with their babies. We live in the country and they live in the city. We can see the mountains from our house, although they are miles away. We went up in the mountains last summer and enjoyed the trip. Some one near my own age write me. I will answer.

Lois Cain.
Bybee, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As this is my first letter I would like to see it in print. I am fourteen years old, have brown hair and eyes and dark complexion. My birthday is April 27. Have I a twin? If so, write to me and you'll be sure of an answer. Mother takes The Herald and I never miss reading it. All you cousins write to me, especially the ones who live in the region where cotton is grown.

Edna Nutter.
Mt. Nebo, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? Mother has been taking The Herald since September. I like to read it. I look forward each week to its coming. I like to read page ten, because it tells me that there are many Christian children in this big world. I was in the dark about knowing the love of Jesus until we had a revival in September at our church. I am twelve years old, have brown hair and brown eyes, and weigh 129½ pounds. I wonder if I have a twin? My first name begins with F and ends with E, and has eight letters in it. Who can guess it? I would like to see all of you but as I can't, I would like you all to write me a letter. I will try to answer each letter I receive. Geneva Reynolds.

Ravenna, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Oklahoma girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twelve years of age, have brown hair, (bobbed), brown eyes and dark complexion. This is my first time to write. I am a Christian and love Jesus with all my heart. I was converted two years ago, and belong to the Methodist Church. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I enjoy reading page ten. Grandmother takes The Herald and she reads page ten, so please print this letter as I want to surprise her.

Thelma Keen.
Rt. 1, Lone Wolf, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Western boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I have brown hair, blue eyes and a medium complexion. I am twelve years old. My birthday is in August 26. Have I a twin? My father is a preacher and takes The Pentecostal Herald. I like page ten very much. Will some of you boys and girls about my age write to me? I will close, hoping to see this letter in print.

David Peterson.
Box 653, Sidney, Montana.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and all the cousins? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print, as I want to surprise mother and daddy. I am six years old and in the first grade. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with W and ends with R, and has six letters in it. I would like to receive letters from all the little girls and boys near my age. I have three sisters and two brothers. My youngest sister is two years old. She sure is sweet, too. Her name is Melba Ruth. I can't read much and I get mother to read The Herald for me. I have a good father and mother. We don't take The Herald but grandpa gives it to us to read. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins. James Hess.
Galax, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a lonely girl join your happy band of girls and boys? I am fourteen years old. It is so lonesome since my two sisters have gone back to work, so I thought I would try to get some pen pals. I am fond of writing. We have been taking the dear old Herald ever since we've been back. We have been living out here for a good many months. We moved from Vicksburg. I have a brother twelve years old, but he does not keep me much company for he is gone nearly all the time, playing with other boys. I am blessed with a mother and father. Everyone please write to me. Will answer all letters received. Ottomese Huff.
Rt. 3, Gloster, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I want to testify in your paper what Jesus has done for me. He saved and sanctified me and had wonderfully healed my body different times. I praise him for the blood that Jesus Christ shed on Calvary. There is victory in that precious blood if we trust him. He will bear our burdens, our sickness and all our sorrows. His grace is sufficient. I promised the Lord if he would heal my body I would testify to it in The Pentecostal Herald.

Easter Program Book

Folk are going to like this book. It is a fine gathering of original and unusual Easter program features, the kind that appeal and make glad the hearts of all. There are recitations and exercises for the little ones, motion and musical readings for the teen age, dialogs, playlets, hymn pantomimes, and songs for every age, all emphasizing the real meaning of the day.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. I have black hair and blue eyes. I will be fourteen years old March 28. I am crippled. I can walk but not like other girls. I am not very tall for my age. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I would be glad to see my letter in The Herald. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. Edna Shanley.
Rt. 3, Fay, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print. I take The Herald and enjoy reading it as I get lots of spiritual food from it. I also enjoy reading page ten. I read a lot as I am alone a great deal of the time. I am a widow, Jesus having called my husband home some nine years ago. I have two sons, one married and one single. I live in the city. I am a Christian and love the Lord with all my heart. I hope my letter escapes the W. B. I want to correspond with any who care to write. Will try to answer any one that writes. May God bless you all. Mrs. C. Blair.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print. I don't take The Herald but have read it and like it very much. I am a Christian. I love the Lord and preach the gospel; have been in the work of the Lord for the past twelve years. I am a widow; my husband went home to glory three years ago in March. I have two sons and one daughter. My life has been very lonely since my husband went to be with Jesus. May God bless you all. Ira V. Pauley.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl have a seat by the fire? My toes are nearly frozen. I live on a farm a long ways from school. What fun I do have during the good old summer days when everything is in full bloom. Does any one think I am too old to tell my age? I'm not getting very old, just sixteen. I am five feet tall, weigh about 108 pounds. Have I a twin? Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E, and has three letters in it. The one who guesses it and writes me a long letter I will send them a present. My hobbies are going to school, reading story books and papers. I am in the seventh grade. My teacher is B. C. Baling. I enjoy page ten very much. I would like for lots of the cousins to write me letters. Sudie M. Taylor.

ARNOLD'S COMMENTARY

A very practical aid for the busy teacher. It is rich in suggestions and sets forth the lesson in a very pleasing manner. We consider this the most spiritual exposition of the Sunday school lesson.

The hints to teachers, illustrations, blackboard exercises, questions, maps, etc., make this popular help a good all-round commentary at a popular price $1.00.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1931

By Amos R. Wells. Fifty-seventh Annual Volume.

To the many who are familiar with "PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES," it would be sufficient to say that the standard of excellence which has characterized the work for more than half a century is fully maintained in the new volume.

The analysis and treatment of the lessons are clear and informing, carrying quotations from great Bible teachers. It is for teachers of all grades and contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help so compiled and tabulated that it can be effectively used. It has maps, pictures, and charts alone worth the price of the book.

This book is invaluable for the study of the Uniform Lessons. Price $2.00.

FALLEN ASLEEP

GROVE.

Mary E. Grove was born at Epsom, Ind., Sept. 24, 1856. Departed this life at her home in Richview, Ill., Feb. 19, 1931. She was converted and joined the Baptist Church years ago. She gladly laid her all on the altar for God and put him first in all things. She was a wonderful mother, always pointed the straight and narrow way to children and friends. She was unable to lie down in bed the last six months of her life; sat day and night in her arm chair, but never said an unkind word to any one and never complained, but continually praised God, prayed and thanked him for his blessings and said she was so happy in the little spot which he had given her. Her life was a beautiful testimony for God at all times. She never failed to tell every one he was her all and her constant prayer for children, grandchildren and friends was that they would take God before all things. She waited patiently for the time to come when she could go and be with husband and loved ones over there. Always said, "God's will be done."

Little mother, you have left us,
And the old home is so bare,
But we know you're sweetly resting
In the blessed Saviour's care.
You have gone where pain and sorrow

Cannot harm you, now my darling,
Where "your light" you loved so dearly

Shines around you evermore.
To me, why you're not dead dear,
Though in this world we never meet,
For I know you're waiting for me,
At our blessed Jesus' feet.

Mrs. Ethel Newcomb.
Box 21, Richview, Ill.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

This is to say that I am personally acquainted with Rev. E. E. Watts. He is a member in good standing in my Conference, and has the respect and esteem of the Conference ministers. He is a good preacher and a successful evangelist. God has given him a vision of a great need, that of entering the towns and cities with a tent and carrying the great message of "Holiness unto the Lord." Let the Lord's people everywhere rally to this noble and great work with their means and support liberally. Jesus is coming soon, time is short, souls to be won.

Supt. of Pa. and N. J. Dist., Pilgrim Holiness Church.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A Reader: "Please pray that a prayer may be answered if it is the dear Lord's Will."

Mrs. M.: "Please pray for a revival in our church and especially for my boys, that they be saved and filled for the Master's use."

A. J.: "Pray very earnestly for my unsaved brothers and sisters and relatives. Pray that God will send deep, ungent conviction on them and give them no peace or rest until they come to God. Pray that God will save them at any cost."

M. L. S.: "May I ask The Herald readers to earnestly pray that I may be wholly sanctified."

Mrs. E. C.: "Please pray that the Lord will save my two sons and that all of them will get work soon to support their families."

Draw nigh to God, and He will draw nigh to you. James 4:8.

"THE SPIRIT AND THE BRIDE SAY, COME."

"The Spirit and the Bride say, 'Come'—"

How sweet to my sin-tired ear;

When the cold winds moan, and I'm all alone;

He bids me arise and hear.

"The Spirit and the Bride say, 'Come'—"

Ah, now I can feel his love;

For he promised rest, and at his best,

I'll obey that Voice from above.

"And let him that heareth say, 'Come'—"

Shall I keep this Delight for my own?

There are lonely hearts to whom the world imparts

Bitters that bring forth moans.

"And let him that heareth say, 'Come'—"

Shall I tarry within the Gate?

I must turn again to the world of men;

To the sin-bound souls who wait.

The Water of Life flows on—

Christ said, "Whosoever will"—

'Tis a Living Stream and no crystal dream;

Taste, and your hopes fulfill.

The Water of Life flows on—

Oh, ye who are faint and worn,

He will dry your tears, take away your fears;

Come and again be born!

IT COSTS NOTHING

to be kind, but it seems that the spirit of kindness must be instilled into growing children. In many instances the reading of a good story in which kindness is outstanding is more effective than much talk to a child along this line. There is no more impressive story than that of "Black Beauty," a beautiful, faithful horse. No boy or girl should grow up without having read this book. One can hardly have a disposition to be kind to animals and not have a heart that goes out in sympathy to needy, suffering humanity. "Black Beauty" costs only 50c, the Pentecostal Publishing Company furnishes it, and it will delight the heart of any youngster. We recall one mother who has almost worn the book out reading and re-reading it to her children. They love to hear it over and over.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XII.—March 22, 1931.

Subject.—The Use and Abuse of God's Gifts. Luke 12:16-21; Luke 12:41-48.

Golden Text.—Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit.

Time.—Late in A. D. 29.

Place.—Perea.

Introduction.—Most things are changing; but human nature and the love of money seem to be constant. The ancient Jews looked upon wealth as being the acme of good things for this world; and their successors in office have never diminished in numbers. Today's lesson grew out of this sort of thing. One of the Master's camp followers was whining because his brother had received the big end of an inheritance, and requested that he speak to his stingy brother about the matter. Jesus refused to interfere, and answered: "Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?" He had on hand more important business than settling estates. This incident furnished the basis for one of the greatest of all lessons: "Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." This furnished a good background for our lesson.

Comments on the Lesson.

16. The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully.—I met this man some weeks ago. Driving along the highway early one morning in his auto with a friend, we stopped for a few minutes in a little village on business; and I looked into the face of a man whom I had not seen for possibly twenty-five years. In his younger years he was a slender stripling working hard on a good farm. It was commonly understood that no man in the neighborhood could see a dollar farther, run after it faster, or squeeze it closer than he could. I said: "What are you doing now?" He replied: "Nothin'; made a fortune, and livin' on my income." His face was hard, brazen. As we went on our way, I thought of the rich man in this parable, and wondered when God would require that man's soul. Some one says that farmers should be the most thankful, the most generous people on earth, because they use God's ground, rain and sunshine more than any one else.

17. He thought within himself.—One should do a good bit of introspection; but when he shuts out all his fellowmen, and plans solely for his own welfare, he is headed for ruin. What shall I do?—He had made a crop that was bigger than all his barns; but he was so self-centered that he did not see the needs of his poor neighbors. This parable is bigger than one rich landlord. It includes all men. Let me make the case clear. Here are two preachers holding pastorates in the same community. One receives a salary of six thousand dollars a year; the other by conference appointment is serving a needy church that can pay but eight hundred dollars a year. In the former family there are no children, but in the latter there are five to be fed, clothed and educated. I have dined in both these parsonages. In one there was a rich, bountiful dinner tipped off with ice cream and cake, with servants in attendance. In the other we ate plain fare, and not an overabundance of it. The wife looked tired, for there was no maid to assist her. But we did have one thing in the second home, that was not mentioned in the first: We read God's Book and prayed for one another till our cheeks were wet with streams of joy. You make further application, and see if you are your brother's keeper.

18. I will pull down my barns, and build greater.—He would hoard his big crop for the future. If he had had just common sense and a little decent humanity, he would have fed the hungry. I am going to write some plain words. This is a time of fearful distress in our own country, and the world over. No one can now hoard up large wealth for his own aggrandizement, and escape HELL. Woe unto him who profiteers upon his fellows in a time such as this. At the appointed day God will judge this world in Righteousness.

19. Soul.—He is talking to himself, for one's soul is himself. Thou hast much goods laid up for many years.—But he told himself a lie; for no one owns anything in this world—all belong to God. Take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.—Not so fast. You have forgotten something. Certain important factors are left out in the solution of your problem.

20. But God said unto him.—He had either forgotten God, or else was presuming upon his mercy. But the day comes when God will speak. Thou fool.—Awful words to ring in the ears of one who had spent his life preparing for a good time; but if one can be termed a pluperfect fool, this man merited the title. He had slaved for a life-time, and had piled up goods for the coming years; but listen: "This night thy soul shall be required of thee." Poor deluded wretch! His sun went down at noonday, and there was no afternoon. Others took possession, and feasted on the good things that he had accumulated for himself. Your check may be worth millions now; but it will not be worth two cents after you are dead.

21. So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.—Does that mean the man who wears your hat? Better ask God to test you with his scales.

The verses between the two sections of our lesson have to deal with stewardship and the coming of the Lord. The fortieth verse needs to be emphasized: "Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not." What if that hour is now near at hand? Are you ready?

41. Speakest thou this parable unto us, or even to all?—Peter was anxious to know the extent of the parable's application; but the Master did not give him a direct answer. His reply came in a sort of dissertation on the results of stewardship.

42. Who then is that faithful and wise steward?—Stewardship in the olden time seems to have been a very sacred thing. Have you noticed the honorable position that Abraham's steward held in his master's household? Such trusted men had almost unlimited authority in conducting the affairs of their masters. This sacred relationship illustrates beautifully both the freedom and the responsibility of us as stewards in the household of God. We are free to do whatever is for our own good and the glory of our Lord. The following verses tell how God delights to honor such servants.

45. But and if.—Leave out the "and," as it is done in the Revised Version. I do not find it in the Greek. My Lord delayeth his coming.—Here the scene changes, and Jesus pictures the unfaithful steward who gets drunk and abuses and beats his fellow-servants. There are many now who tell us that our Lord will never come back. They are the unfaithful stewards. He says he will return; and his faithful stewards are looking and longing for the glad hour when the promise shall be fulfilled.

46. Will come when he looketh not for him.—Were he to come today, it would be terrible, for very few have the upward look. Will cut him in sunder.—This was once a terrible mode of punishment in certain nations. Our Lord uses it to portray sudden destruction. The last clause in this verse is fearful when one sees its broad application: "Will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers." Does it apply to such as have no faith in the return of our blessed Lord? You will remember that St. Paul says he has crowns of righteousness for such as love his appearing. I suppose this will apply to both post-millennarians and pre-millennarians; for both these groups may be faithful stewards who are expecting the Lord's return to earth.

47. Shall be beaten with many stripes.—This quotation will be sufficient for the last two verses. They contain some tremendous lessons concerning responsibility. Responsibility must be measured by knowledge and opportunity; but one must be careful just here, lest the truth be missed. One who has had an opportunity to learn the truth cannot plead ignorance. No one can shut his eyes against the light, and say, "I did not see." He might say, "I would not see." One must not wait for opportunities, but make them. No preacher can excuse himself by saying: "I could not preach to the people, because they would not come to church." Jesus did not say: "Wait till they come to church." He said: "GO!"

Beyond question, the passage teaches that some will be rewarded more highly than others; and that some will be punished more severely in hell than others.

METHODIST ORPHANS' HOME LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Board of the Methodist Orphans' Home met in regular session at the Home in Louisville, Tuesday, February 24. All papers connected with the change in the By-laws were completed and the Board is fully organized and read for work.

Mr. Lee Lewis, who has been President for thirteen years, was retained as President.

The following members were appointed on a Location Committee: Rev. E. K. Arnold, Versailles, Rev. Baxter W. Napier, Bowling Green, Mr. Harry Bridges, Louisville, Mr. Geo. W. Vaughn, Lexington and Mr. Lee Lewis, Ex-Officio. They were instructed to go to work at once and find a suitable location for the Home. In all probability the Home will be moved out of Louisville unless some suitable location is offered in or near Louisville. If any one has a suitable location to offer or if you desire to express your opinion on where the Home should be located write either

MISSIONARY TABERNACLE CONVENTION.

Los Angeles, Calif., March 8-15.

Workers: Rev. Joseph H. Smith, Rev. F. L. Stevens, Rev. U. E. Harding, Rev. R. A. Young, Rev. E. W. Petticoat. Rev. James E. Campbell will have charge of the music.

NOTICE.

The next annual meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness will be held at University Park, Iowa, June 9 to 15. A splendid corps of workers is engaged and a fine program is in preparation.

Guy W. Green, lay evangelist of Kansas City, Mo., held union revival services for the Methodist and Presbyterian churches of Osmond, Neb., Feb. 11-22. As a result of the meetings the two churches will receive 35 accessions on Easter Sunday, all but two of whom will be by confession and reaffirmation of faith.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO HELP A WORTHY STUDENT IN ASBURY COLLEGE.

There is in Asbury a young Korean student, who is making a splendid fight to secure an education, but who must now have some one step in and help him a bit at this time. He was encouraged to come to this country by one of the Lord's faithful missionaries in Korea. Through his own labors in a restaurant in Chicago during the summer time he has kept going and as well through the gifts of a friend or two, but he can't go on unless he can have some help. Having come to this country registered in the Immigration Bureau as a student, he is not allowed by the Government to turn aside and earn for a year or two, and then return to his school work again, but will be subject to deportation in such a case. This complicates his case. If deported, the chances are that he would never get an education. Will not some one with ability answer this needy cry?

F. H. Larabee, Dean.

Asbury Theological Seminary, Wilmore, Ky.

MISSIONARIES TRUE TO CHRIST.

Unknown to all the scrupulous Christians in America are many true and consecrated missionaries in the foreign fields under the old boards.

Some of these true men and women sound in doctrine and experience and fruitful in labors for the Master are much handicapped for the lack of financial support in their work, because some who would help them with consecrated money do not know who they are or where to reach them with gifts.

A little while ago a layman put one hundred dollars into the hands of his pastor with instructions to send the gift to a missionary in a foreign field, who does not preach "modernism." The pastor not knowing any of those true missionaries of his own denomination at that time sent away the money to an outside organization. Had the pastor known he would have gladly given the hundred dollars towards sending out a true missionary of his own denomination who is now kept back from returning to Africa because the Board has no money to send him.

The writer, a missionary now on furlough from Africa, is happy to declare his stand or place among those who believe in and present the living, vital, soul-saving Gospel of Christ in an effective way. He is also able to give names and addresses of other Methodist missionaries who are sound in doctrine, scriptural, spiritual and effective advocates of the Gospel of Christ in heathen lands. Will you stand by one or more true missionaries and make them your partners out on the frontiers of human need?

J. D. Pointer.

OPEN FOR CHURCH AND CAMP MEETINGS.

Rev. and Mrs. John A. Dooley, evangelists, are elders in the First Church of the Nazarene, Chicago, Ill. Elders in the Nazarene Church twenty-eight years, have held evangelistic meetings in the United States and Canada for many years; preach a four-fold gospel—New Birth, Entire Sanctification, Divine Healing, and the Coming of the Lord. Write at once for dates after April 20, 1931. Address Evangelist John A. Dooley, 915 W. Broadway, Minneapolis, Minn.

IS THIS MISSIONARY WORK?

Louise Harrison McCraw.

We sometimes use the term "missionary work" very carelessly, applying it to almost any sort of neighborly deed, but perhaps most of us, after giving serious thought, will agree that, to be accurate, we must imply the giving of the one and only gospel to those who are without it. It may be necessary to do other things for a lost soul before we can offer the Gospel, but the giving of the truth itself must always be the crux of the matter. Our concern is to find the most direct and effective way to give it.

"A man is helped more by what he reads than by what he hears, for he can get alone and think it out and God then speaks," says Ghindi, of Egypt, who is perhaps the most outstanding blind Christian in that Mohammedan country.

Ghindi teaches Braille (the raised type used by the blind for finger-reading), and handicrafts to 160 blind sheiks who are students in the El Azhar University of Cairo. Many of them are open-minded and are seeking the light. One of them came to Ghindi, and handing back the copy of the New Testament he had borrowed, said: "I have read this through three times. Can no one explain it to me?"

Ghindi says, "They need books about the Bible,—books that will make certain texts live." He saw that the quickest and surest way to give the Truth to these men and to other educated blind in his country was to give them the Word itself and then interesting, practical, gripping expositions of it,—books about the Bible,—all in Braille, and in their own Arabic language. He had read some of the soul-stirring messages of James H. McConkey, which were written in English Braille, and sent as a loan to him by the Braille Circulating Library, of Richmond, Va., but very few of his fellows could read English, so he threw himself into the work of translating them into Arabic; then with the help of an Egyptian girl who had been trained in an American Presbyterian school, these same books were transcribed into Braille. "God has sent her," he said, speaking of his helper.

So the work has gone on since early fall,—translating, transcribing and circulating,—and he hopes before long to have copies of every pamphlet that Mr. McConkey has written. He is admirably fitted to circulate them, as he is in touch with most of the blind readers in his country, besides his daily contact with the University students. A missionary friend said of him: "On the road to Christ, he is no blind leader."

He has a burning desire to see the spiritual eyes of his fellow-blind opened,—to make the Truth available to them by means of Braille,—and God is using him mightily.

A story similar to Ghindi's might be told of Mr. Akimoto, of Japan, who publishes in his Braille magazine, "The Faith," the McConkey books sent him from Richmond. Still another might be told of the son of a missionary in China, who publishes the same books in his Mandarin Braille magazine. The work in these three countries is under the sponsorship of the Braille Circulating Library, Central Y. M. C. A., Richmond, Va. This library exists for the purpose of circulating these books in Revised Braille, Grade 1½, among blind readers all over the world. They may be had as

A SUGGESTION CONCERNING MISSIONS.

Since there is coming to be a considerable number of Independent Holiness Missions and Tabernacles in these United States and many of them are unknown to each other, would it not be profitable to in some way associate together in a working federation, such as might bring them in touch with each other, especially such as are sane and scriptural and agreed in the essentials of salvation, especially so touching the experience of holiness. This would give them all better opportunity to know what ministers are open to such work and help find pastors and help preachers find such pastorates.

There are many such already begun in our land and for reasons that are evident we shall probably see many more spring up in the next five years. The idea of the independent, local Mission or church is spreading to many centers of population. If any who read this have convictions along this line speak out and a get-together convention of such representatives might be called when enough become interested in it, if the Lord so leads.

Your Christian brother,

Jim H. Green,

1226 Tower Grove, St. Louis, Mo.

MUTUAL, OKLAHOMA.

The M. E. Church at Mutual, Okla., has had a good revival meeting. We began Jan. 12, holding through five weeks, closing Sunday night, Feb. 15. There were many at the altar with fourteen definitely praying through for pardon, sanctification, and reclamation. The entire church was spiritually revived, bringing out thirty-one for prayer meeting this week.

Rev. Wallace L. Boyce did the preaching and the leading of the day meetings. Brother Boyce is a graduate of Asbury Seminary, lives with God, and knows his Word.

G. C. Hutchins, Pastor.

The Days of His Flesh:

*The Earthly Life of Our Lord and Saviour
Jesus Christ*

By Rev. David Smith

Fifteen large editions in a comparatively short period, together with words of highest appreciation from the leading Bible scholars, ministers, and editors throughout the English-speaking world proclaim this great work as the one outstanding Life of Christ for every man today. It offers a biography of the Master, elaborate in detail and extending through fifty masterful chapters and more than 500 pages, tracing every phase of our Saviour's earthly career. The author rests his case solidly upon the evangelical records. He adduces abundant evidence to show the historicity of Jesus and to confute those theories which would make Him a mere myth arising out of a haze of reverence and superstition. He is equally sound on the deity of Jesus and he shows conclusively that the acceptance of Christ as the Lord of Heaven must be regarded as the corner-stone of the Church.

He begins with the Wondrous Birth and then proceeds step by step, to the Resurrection, discussing with particular vividness "the silent years" and the part they played in the Messianic consciousness of Jesus. Even after he has completed the body of his remarkable work, the author does not lay down his pen until eight appendices have been written, each throwing light upon some important aspect of the record of Jesus' life and ministry. These appendices include such interesting subjects as, "Objections to the Miraculous Conception," "St. John's Method of Reckoning Time," "The Chronology of Passion Week," etc.
