1-1-2009

NT 520 New Testament Introduction

James Miller

Follow this and additional works at: http://place.asburyseminary.edu/syllabi

Recommended Citation
http://place.asburyseminary.edu/syllabi/257

This Document is brought to you for free and open access by the eCommons at ePLACE: preserving, learning, and creative exchange. It has been accepted for inclusion in Syllabi by an authorized administrator of ePLACE: preserving, learning, and creative exchange. For more information, please contact thad.horner@asburyseminary.edu.
Syllabus

Course: NT520 O1 (SP 2009)
Title: New Testament Introduction
Hours: 3.00
Published: Yes, on 01/07/2009
Prerequisites: None

Department: New Testament
Faculty: Dr. James Miller

Email: james.miller@asburyseminary.edu
Office: FC
SPO:

Meetings:
During 02/09/2009 to 05/22/2009 on Tuesday from 6:15p to 9:00p in EXLEXL.

Maximum Registration: 70
Catalog Description: An introduction to (1) the literature of the New Testament in its socio-historical, literary and canonical contexts; and (2) critical study of the New Testament.

Objectives:

A full syllabus will be posted on the first day of class. For now, here is the list of required texts.

Jim

Required Texts

(If you want to get ahead, start reading the New Testament and Bauckham)

A modern translation of the New Testament (NRSV, RSV, TNIV recommended; not acceptable KJV, NKJV or paraphrases such as the NLB or the Message). We will read the New Testament in its entirety.

This book will serve as a basic reference tool for each individual book of the NT.

We will begin reading this book immediately at the start of the semester. Bauckham will help frame an approach to reading the New Testament.

We will write a critical review of this book. Hurtado will give us a taste of New Testament scholarship as well as a partial window into the world of the New Testament.

This is the best short introduction to first-century Palestinian Judaism in print. I’ve used this book with students for years and have always received warm feedback from students.

Another work intended to offer us a window into the dynamics of the NT world, especially in the book of Acts.

This is a highly useful reference work for biblical studies.