Course Description
An exegetical study of the letter to the Philippians which focuses upon the application of basic exegetical principles to the Greek text and understanding the text within the literary, linguistic, historical and cultural contexts in which it was originally circulated.

Course Objectives
Upon successful completion of NT 662 (C or better), the learner will be able:
1) To employ an exegetical method relevant to the interpretation of Philippians and other epistolary literature—including the use of Greek-based language tools to demonstrate proficiency in lexical semantics, to identify grammatical constructions (i.e., with regard to sentence structure and use of clauses) and to engage in syntactical analyses (i.e., with regard to verbal aspect, mood, and voice; use of genitive and dative cases);
2) To understand Philippians within its socio-historical, literary, and canonical contexts;
3) To identify the central issues in the critical study of Philippians;
4) To articulate the importance of one’s own presuppositions in the task of interpretation;
5) To describe the primary theological and ethical concerns of Philippians;
6) To demonstrate awareness of how the theological and ethical concerns of Philippians contributes to those of the canon and of constructive theology and ethics;
7) To differentiate between the available critical and homiletical/devotional commentaries on Philippians and other NT books;
8) To evaluate critically the usefulness of secondary literature in the study of NT books.

Each student should expect to spend 6-9 hours outside of class per week on assignments and reflection.

Student Feedback
My desire is to facilitate learning so that each of us can acquire knowledge and skills essential for ministry and reach our full potential in Jesus Christ as we grow in grace together. Toward this end, during the last 5-10 minutes of each class period, I will ask each of you to fill out a “Critical Incident Questionnaire.” The CIQ will allow you to give me valuable feedback that will strengthen the course. Over the course of the semester, it will also allow you to track yourself as a learner. The CIQ’s will be anonymous, but you will be able to get your sheet back the following week. I will open each class with a discussion of themes/issues raised that may be beneficial to the class as a whole. This exercise will enable all of us to take ownership of the learning process.
The CIQ will ask five questions:
1. At what moment in the class this week did you feel most engaged with what was happening?
2. At what moment in the class this week did you feel most distanced from what was happening?
3. What action that anyone (teacher or student) took in class this week did you find most affirming and helpful?
4. What action that anyone (teacher or student) took in class this week did you find most puzzling or confusing?
5. What about the class this week surprised you the most? (This could be something about your own reactions to what went on, or something that someone did, or anything else that occurs to you.)

Means of Evaluation
1) Attendance and Class Participation 15%
Attendance and class participation are essential for the fulfillment of course objectives. Active participation (coming to class prepared, participation in discussion, asking questions) will help you maximize your learning in the class, aid me in being more responsive to student needs/concerns, and provide your colleagues with an additional perspective on the material.

2) Weekly Assignments 60%
These assignments represent the core material of the course. The first eight (30%) are specific in the intent to teach the basic principals of Greek-language based study. The final four (30%) are broad assignments in which the learners begin to apply exegetical methods to an entire pericope. All assignments are to be completed, but I will drop the lowest grade from each of the two groups.

3) Final Exegetical Project 25%
This final project will be due during exam week. It is limited to 10 double-spaced, typed pages (this does not include endnotes or bibliography). Students will apply the exegetical skills introduced and honed during the semester to a selected passage from Philippians.

Class Schedule
The following represents a tentative sequencing of the course. The typical class will begin with a review of the previous week’s assignment, discussion of new material, and demonstration.
