CO 601 Counseling Theories and Techniques

Anthony J. Headley
Introduction

This course serves as a major orientation to the primary theories of counseling. As such, the course shall include exposure to the various traditions within psychological theory. Specifically, we shall cover the major traditions within the psycho-dynamic, humanistic and behavioral fields. These three broad bases provide the fundamental frameworks from which most theories derive. As time permits, we shall try to include exposure to newer approaches to counseling. The course also aims to help students begin the process of appraising these traditions from a Christian perspective.

Goals

As a result of completing this course, students shall:

- Gain an acquaintance and more in-depth knowledge of the major theories of counseling within the various traditions, especially those within the psychodynamic, humanistic and behavioral traditions.

- Develop an understanding of how one’s personal experiences, philosophy, culture etc., shapes theory development.

- Develop the ability to provide a Christian appraisal of the various psychological theories, including the ability to identify points of continuity and discontinuity between Christian theology and psychological theory.

- Learn how to apply psychological theories to work counseling work within the church and in other helping institutions.

- Know how to identify the skills and attitudes necessary to effective counseling and how to apply techniques associated with the various psychological traditions.
• Begin to formulate a personal orientation to counseling that incorporates his/her Christian philosophy.

Course Texts

Prior Assignments

• Construction of a personal theory. Details on this assignment can be found under the requirements section that deals with the construction of a theory.

• Read as much of the texts prior to the beginning of the class. You should do the theory construction assignment prior to the readings.

Requirements

• Readings

You are required to completely read all course texts. The final exam will include a place for you to report on your reading. In cases where the readings are not completed, the overall grade will be reduced to the next grade level.

• Integrative Paper - 20% of grade

Write a 4-5 page paper that lays out your understanding of how the Bible and theology is related to psychology and counseling. Do you see points of agreement or disagreement? Can Christian legitimately use the insights of psychology in their work or should they avoid such secular espoused views. These are but a few of the questions you may wish to address in this paper. This paper is due on the first Friday of the Class - August 17.

• Final examination - 40% of grade

A final exam will be given. The examination will cover the material discussed in the class and will be divided into the following parts:

Part One will essentially be objective and will include multiple choice and matching.

Part Two will be a number of short answer questions.

Part Three will focus on application and involve the analysis of a case from one theoretical perspective.
Theories Paper - 30% of grade

Write an eight to ten page paper on your personal orientation to counseling. Ensure that the following elements are included in the paper.

1. Demonstration of a clear understanding of the theoretical model. By demonstration of a clear understanding, I do not mean that you should devote pages to explaining theoretical concepts. Rather, your understanding of the theory should come through in paper by how well you discuss the various elements necessary for the paper.

2. Discuss any personal reasons for choosing the model. For example, you may wish to discuss the points at which the theory makes sense based on your own personal experience or philosophy?

3. Discuss of any potential problems you see in the theory. Be sure to discuss problems that arise from conflict with Biblical and theological thought. Also discuss how you would resolve such problems in practice.

Papers will be graded on the overall quality and how well and completely the issues cited above are addressed.

Papers are due on the Wednesday following the completion of the course – August 29.

Construction of a theory - 10% of grade

Most theories have the following elements:

1. Assumptions about the nature of humans.

2. Personality development - notions about how such persons develop.

3. Some structure of personality, that is, elements that make up personality (for example, Freud speaks about id, ego and superego).

4. A perspective on the causes of maladaptive behavior.

5. Some theory about what constitutes optimal functioning.

Usually the parts are held together by a central thought that permeates each of the six elements. You may wish to spend some time thinking about your central thought and how it shows itself in each of the six areas.
Using these categories and your biblical and theological knowledge, what would your theory look like? Please construct your theory prior to the beginning of class. This individual work, done in outline form, will be collected at the first class session. Following this, each student will be assigned to a group where formation of a group theory will be done. Students should keep copies of their individual work to contribute to the group theory. The product will be a 1-2 page outline addressing these categories and a 20 minute class presentation. This assignment will be done in the very early stages of the class.

Evaluation

Course assignments and final grade will be based on the following grade ranges:
