I. Course Description:

"The foundational principles and strategies of the Church Growth movement pioneered by Donald McGavran, seen as one informed approach to strategy development in mission and evangelism and as a means to inform congregational and denominational outreach and expansion. Focus upon North American and Third World cases."

II. Course Objectives:

1. To raise consciousness regarding the "strategy" dimensions of the practice of Christian evangelism and mission.
2. To orient the student to the Church Growth approach to informing mission strategy and Christian evangelization.
3. To equip the student with the key, proven, universal, reproducible principles discovered by Church Growth research.
4. To develop the capacity to critique ministries and approaches to evangelism and mission, and thereby advance the practice.
5. To facilitate the student's beginning contribution to Church Growth research, reflection, and literature.

III. Textbooks:
The following textbooks are for students in MS 615 and ME 700. The literature, especially McGavran's Understanding Church Growth, should be perceived as the heart of the course. Class sessions will stimulate deeper reading, provide perspective, headline some themes and expand upon others, fill gaps, suggest implications and applications, and facilitate learning and strategic thinking. Class sessions may involve varied technologies, such as lectures, experiential lectures, case studies, visiting speakers, films, maps, data generation, simulations, pencil and paper instruments, reports, processing of assigned readings, etc.

A. Read EACH of the following:

1. Donovan, Vincent J. Christianity Rediscovered. Orbis, 1979. This autobiographical case study, one of the most engaging and moving books in all of missiological literature, focuses on the planting of indigenous Catholic Christianity among Masai people in East Africa. It dramatizes the central issue of starting a Christian movement from scratch among an unreached people.

4. Winter, Ralph D. and Steven C. Hawthorne, eds. Perspectives on the World Christian Movement, Third Edition. William Carey Library, 1999. In this course, we assign only a “bakers dozen” articles (primarily from the “Strategic Perspective” section) from this widely used collection, but every serious mission student will own this book.

B. Read ANY TWO of the following:

8. Schaller, Lyle E. 44 Steps Up Off the Plateau. Abingdon, 1993. A range of “interventions” for churches “stuck” at their present membership strength, by the writer who knows more about churches than anyone else who ever lived!

C. The following additional books are required for students taking the 700 level course.

12. Read one of the field studies in which McGavran was a principal writer, such as the following: Multiplying Churches in the Philippines; Church Growth in Jamaica; Ethnic Realities and the Church: Lessons from India; Church Growth in Mexico; Zaire: Midday in Missions. (The student may choose some other field study if he or she is particularly interested in the field.)

D. In addition, the following articles are accessible within the ESJ icon on Asbury Seminary's website. (Report any difficulty to Julee Bellar 858-2259) The student may either read each article on-line, or print it.

a) Hunter, "The Legacy of Donald McGavran"
b) ______, "Top Ten Reasons for NOT Leaving Evangelism to the Pastor."
c) ______, "Reaching WAY OUT in Urban Evangelism"
d) McGavran, "Discipling Urban Populations"
e) Paul Hiebert, "Conversion, Culture, and Cognitive Categories."
f) Ralph Winter, "Quality or Quantity?"

IV. Writing Assignment Options for the Course:

The instructor expects the student to accept responsibility for his/her own learning. This responsibility will normally be exercised through regular and involved class attendance, the thorough reading of the assigned textbooks and readings, a final examination, and the completion of one writing assignment.

All students will need to submit to the instructor, by the class session on December 5th, a (say) 12 to 15 page research paper, which should be based upon some appropriate blend of library research and field research. Consider the following options for the paper:

1. The story and analysis of the growth history of a local church, emphasizing the causes of the growth that might be reproducible or adaptable for other churches. In most cases, the student would normally focus on the recent growth of the church, say within the past decade, but a more historical study would also be welcome.

2. The story and analysis of the growth history of a unit of a (presumably large) local church, emphasizing the causes of the growth that might be reproducible or adaptable for other churches. "Unit" here refers to, say, a specific worship service, or the Sunday School, or even a specific Sunday School class, or the youth ministry, or the recovery ministry, or some other organized part of the church.

3. The story and analysis of the local spread of the gospel among some distinct target population, such as "builders" or "boomers" or "busters," or unchurched men, or youth, or single adults, or retarded adults, or deaf people, or addictive people, or a distinctive ethnic population or socio-economic class. (Students will find the categories (and modeling) in Arn’s White Unto Harvest to be very useful for this option.

4. One may submit a more traditional term paper, on a Church Growth topic, instead of one of the field research assignments. Students so inclined may see the instructor to get feedback on a proposed topic. The supplementary bibliography at the end of this syllabus will be especially useful to students doing a traditional term paper.

For any of the first three options, the student needs to identify, early in the course, the local church (or churches) in which to do the field research. The student will negotiate and do on-site “field research” (interviews, observation, and focused historical analysis) to determine causes for the growth. Base the paper upon the most insightul and promising data that you collect -- much of which will illustrate some established church growth principles, some of which may lead you to suggest new hypotheses. The paper may include anecdotal, and even inspirational, material derived from the field research.

The student who chooses the fourth option will need to identify the topic early, especially in regard to a topic that might require inter-library loan or data to be sent from some field. The project could research and summarize the main insights of some specific writer in, or near, the field of Church Growth.

Whichever option you choose, write the paper so that it can be understood by someone who has not taken a Church Growth course.

V. Final Exam:

All students will need to complete, December 11th., 1:00-3:00, a final examination covering the assigned readings, class sessions, and other course resources. The instructor expects the exam to call for short essays--for which the student should bring several blue books for the exam.

Those taking the 700 level version of the course will want to prepare for an “extra” question on the final exam: “Trace the development of Church Growth insight in the mind of Donald McGavran, and delineate some of the major strategic conclusions of Church Growth research, with some regard to a particular field of mission.”

Students taking the 600 level version of the course will have 1 and 1/2 hours to complete the exam. Students taking the 700 version will have 2 hours. In each version of the exam, international students (for whom English is a second language) may take an additional half hour to complete the exam.

About one-half of the student's grade for the course will be based upon performance on the examination, and about half on the research paper, with secondary weight given to class attendance, involvement, and contribution.

Course Outline
(Subject to Modification)

Note: Several circumstances require the instructor to be out of town on more class days than usual. Two modifications in the class schedule will enable us to completely fulfill the contact hours we expect for a class: A) We will plan to meet until 5:30 (instead of the pre-announced 5:15 end of class) each day the class does meet. B. Students may take the Alpha Conference (Sept. 10-11) here on campus OR the Willow Creek “Contagious Evangelism” seminar at Southland Christian Church

September 4: Introduction to Church Growth Lore

1. Origins, Distinctives, and Relevance of the Church Growth tradition.

2. Representative Strategic Insights from Church Growth lore.

Film: "How to Grow a Church"
September 11: The Role of Research in Generating New Church Growth Insight
Come to class having read Arn, White Unto Harvest.

1. Research Approaches in Church Growth
(Students taking the Alpha Conference as part of this course may be excused from this class session. The essential material from the class will be posted on the ESJ/Asbury website—as titled above.)

September 18: No class; instructor flying to Winnipeg.

September 25: No class; instructor flying from Winnipeg.

Come to class having read Donovan's Christianity Rediscovered, and having written a one-page paper:

a. Students in the MS 615 version of the course: Submit to the instructor, by Thursday at noon, on one page, your answers to these questions:
1) What was THE MAJOR PROBLEM that Donovan perceived, early, relating to the mission station's relationship and ministries to the Masai? Succinctly state and describe.
2) Where else have you observed some form of this problem? Describe briefly. Be prepared to present these insights to the class (3 minutes maximum).

b. Students in the ME 700 version of the course: Submit to the instructor, by Thursday at noon, on one page, your understanding of the steps that Donovan took to reach the Masai people—expressed as generic steps. (For example, Donovan learned the Masai language. A generic version of that step might be “Learn the language of the receptor population.”) Do not copy Donovan's own (partial) internal summaries of his principles, such as the material on pp. 162-3; he wrote that section “off the top,” and neglected to summarize some of his essential steps. Do your own summary of, say, the 10 to 20 generic principles involved in planting Christianity among an unreached people. Feel free to add, with an asterisk*, any essential steps that are not prominent in Donovan's case study. Be prepared to present these insights to the class (3 minutes). A one page handout for each class member is encouraged.

2. Several student presentations on THE PROBLEM Donovan identified..
3. Several student presentations on "Generic Steps in Reaching a People."
4. Presentation: "The Stages in the History of a Mission"

October 9: Characteristics of Growing Churches.
Come to class having read a) Hunter, “The Legacy of Donald McGavran” and b) McGavran, Understanding Church Growth, ch’s 1-8.

1. Presentation: Several Perspectives on the Characteristics of Healthy Growing Churches.
   a. Lyle Schaller  b. Peter Wagner  c. Christian Schwarz
2. Presentation: The Saarinen Model of “Stages” in a Church’s Life
