Catalog Description
Treats the general content and historical development of New Testament theology from the perspective and methodology of contemporary biblical theology.
Prerequisites: OT520, NT520, IBS–1

Mixed Media Course
This course will be offered on Asbury’s Kentucky campus, with participants also located on the Seminary’s Florida campus. It will be offered through mixed mode delivery—with use of ExL technology integrated into the instruction of the course, and with networking activities constituting a regular part of the course grade. Additionally, course materials (such as PowerPoint slides, handouts, co-curricular reading, et al.), as well as conferencing and a chat room, will be available on-line through an icon (“BT660A-SP05”) placed on each student’s desktop, using the Seminary’s FirstClass Client program. This means that every student will need access to the Seminary’s e-mail system; access is possible through use of computers available in the Information Commons areas of both the Kentucky and Florida campuses, through an internet service provider from a home computer, or via the World Wide Web.

For assistance with all technical matters related to accessing course materials, send your questions by e-mail to ExL_Support@asburyseminary.edu.

Course Objectives
Having successfully completed this course, participants should be able to:

1. Articulate the primary problems confronting persons interested in “biblical theology”;

Course Requirements

Students should submit written materials on time. Late papers will receive no written comments. Assignments that are more than one week late will be penalized one-third of a grade per day.
Florida students should submit written materials to my e-mail address (joel.green@asburyseminary.edu) as e-mail attachments: *.wpd, *.pdf, *.doc, or *.rtf. Kentucky students may do the same.

Students wishing feedback on written assignments prior to their due date may submit complete drafts at least 5 days prior to the due date.

(1) Class Preparation, Attendance, and Participation. See the schedule of reading for each class session. Note that assigned reading should be completed by the day listed. Attendance at and readiness to participate in all sessions of the course is expected. Persons who attend all sessions of the course will have 2 points added to their final grade. Discussion questions will be posted to a Conference Folder on the Intranet (“BT660–JBG”) in advance of most sessions to guide student preparation.

(2) Critical Review. Choose one of the three volumes from the list of Required Reading included in the series “New Testament Theology,” and write a critical review of approximately 1250-1500 words (5-6 pages) in length, typed, double-spaced. Due dates vary; see the Course Schedule. (20%)

For information on my expectations for book reviews, see the relevant document in the “Course Center.”

(3) Perspectives on the Practice of Biblical Theology. Reflection on and the practice of biblical theology should serve as a point of integration for other aspects of your theological training, including work in philology, history, exegesis, doctrine, and so on. How might the practice of biblical theology serve in this way? Your final paper should propose your best answer to that question, while exemplifying both how you understand the New Testament authors to be engaging in “biblical theology” and what you take to be key ingredients for engaging in biblical theology. In preparing your paper, you will want to draw on material from secondary reading for the course, as well as from one or more New Testament books (especially as exemplars of the practice of “biblical theology”). This assignment will be prepared in four (or five) parts:

(3.1) Team Reflections on Fowl and Jones. What do you learn from Fowl and Jones about reflection on and the practice of biblical theology? The purpose for submitting these reflections is formative—that is, the Team will receive feedback from the instructor, which can be used by each of its members in preparing the final paper for submission at the end of the semester. These papers need not take the form of a coherent argument, but instead might take the form of a series of items, each developed briefly, in paragraph form. Approximately 750–1000 words (3-4 pages), typed, double-spaced, using appropriate form and a standard referencing system. Due: 1 March. (10%)
(3.2) Team Reflections on Green and Turner. What do you learn from the contributions gathered together by Green and Turner about reflection on and the practice of biblical theology? The purpose for submitting these reflections is formative—that is, the Team will receive feedback from the instructor, which can be used by each of its members in preparing the final paper for submission at the end of the semester. These papers need not take the form of a coherent argument, but instead might take the form of a series of items, each developed briefly, in paragraph form. Approximately 750–1000 words (3–4 pages), typed, double-spaced, using appropriate form and a standard referencing system. Due: 29 March. (10%)

(3.3) Reflections on Caird/Hurst, or on Wright. What do you learn from Caird/Hurst or Wright about reflection on and the practice of biblical theology? The purpose for submitting these reflections is formative—that is, you will receive feedback from the instructor, which can be used in preparing your final paper for submission at the end of the semester. This is not a Team project; however, persons who work in groups of at least two, and who submit a single, collaborative paper, will receive 2 points of extra credit on this assignment. These papers need not take the form of a coherent argument, but instead might take the form of a series of items, each developed briefly, in paragraph form. Approximately 750–1000 words (3–4 pages), typed, double-spaced, using appropriate form and a standard referencing system. Due: 19 April. (10%)

(3.4) Draft of Final Paper. You may choose to submit a complete draft of your final paper in order to receive feedback from the instructor, which can be used in preparing your final paper for submission at the end of the semester. Due: 3 May. (0%)

(3.5) Final Paper. Approximately 3,000 words (12 pages), typed, double-spaced, using appropriate form and a standard referencing system. Due: 17 May. (50%)

For information on my expectations for these reflection papers and for the final paper, see the relevant documents in the Course Center.
